Last year, the Cohasset PSO Telethon and On-Line Auction fundraiser raised over $23,000 for the kids in the Cohasset Public Schools. We thank all of the many sponsors, businesses and families that contribute so generously to such a successful event. Both Shaws and Stop and Shop Supermarkets contribute $25 gift certificates to provide light refreshments for our performers. We would like to give a special thanks to our 2009 Business Sponsors: Pilgrim Bank, Rockwell Colonial, Snip Its Hair (Hingham), Stone + Company, FTG Technologies (Boston), Dean and Hamilton Realtors, Granite City Charitable Foundation, Baystate Equipment Rental and Sales Company (Quincy), Jim Armstrong Guitar and Music Lessons, Dover Rug (Hanover). Be sure to mention huge thanks for the support of these generous sponsors as well as our donators with your kind words and patronage!

SCHOOLS

Good to be a senior right now!

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Can anyone else believe that it's already halfway through April?

Hello everybody! Today was a happy day because there was no school today! Long weekend, how fabulous! In addition to this day off, there are also many exciting things happening in and around the school that people everywhere are raving about. For starters, the PSO Telethon is back again this year and better than ever! Be sure to tune in this upcoming Tuesday night from 7-9 pm on channel 22 because it's always a sure hit. I'll certainly be there again along with several other headliners this year, such as our fantastic CHS jazz band, Carly Salerno, and who knows! You just might even get to see Rich Ofsthun and Lucia Flibotte dance like chickens onstage again, and wouldn't that just be a treat!

More exciting news is that the third quarter ended this week, and thank goodness; I'm finally done with gym. Forever. And let me tell you, it is such a great feeling. And just to make my life a little better, there is a half-day next Wednesday, followed by April vacation the week after that. Long story short, it's good to be a senior right now, especially since there are only 27 school days left for us. However, I am having terrible trouble finding a prom dress and with the big night being approximately a month away, there is not a whole lot of time left. Can anyone else believe that it's already halfway through April? Also, I don't know if anyone else has ever really examined the PSO school calendars, but I noticed today that the very last block of April has a giraffe on it. I thought that this was great, because I love giraffes. And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful, long weekend and a Happy Easter! Vaarwel!

Loud scholarship offered by SSL

The Social Service League of Cohasset is accepting applications for the Margaret F. Loud Scholarship. Applicants must be seniors in high school or residents of the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell or Scituate who intend to begin or further studies in the fields or nursing, social work or allied health fields. One scholarship for $1,000 will be awarded for the 2009-2010 academic year. The scholarship is merit based.

Applications are available at the League Office in Cohasset between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. or in each high school guidance office. All applications must be submitted by mail to Social Service League of Cohasset, 790 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, MA 02025 no later than April 30. For more information, call 781-383-0771.

Junior Gardeners to meet

Junior Gardeners will begin preparations for the Community Garden Club's flower show, "A Golden Retrospect," which will take place at Glastonbury Abbey next month. This will be a standard flower show to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the club.

The April meeting of the Junior Gardeners will focus on preparing juniors for participating in this show. There will be a special category for junior gardeners and all juniors are invited to submit entries in both the design class and the horticulture section. There is no limit to the number of juniors who can participate.

The preparatory program will take place from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., on Monday, April 13, in the cafeteria of Deer Hill School. Titled "Designing for Show," the meeting is an opportunity for students to learn about the upcoming flower show, see the schedule, become familiar with flower show rules and get instruction about exhibiting in such a show.

Kindergarten registration at Osgood School

Kindergarten registration for the 2009-2010 school year takes place daily, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at Osgood School. Parents will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for the program.

Children who turn 5 on or before Sept. 1, 2009, are eligible to attend kindergarten. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required in order to register.

Call Osgood School at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Byron Aulick is organizing a 35th class reunion for the Class of 1975. The reunion won't be held until July 2010, but in an effort reach all members of the class in preparation for it, he has created a Facebook Alumni '75 page. There are already 50 members of the class in the group and the alumni page gains new members each week. If you graduated in the Class of 1975 and would like to join this group, e-mail Byron at chsadmin@datavault.com or Kay at domaccount@btinternet.com. All CHS 1975 alumni are welcome to join.

All School Band Day a success all around

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

They put on a stunning performance, from the fourth graders all the way to the high school band members.

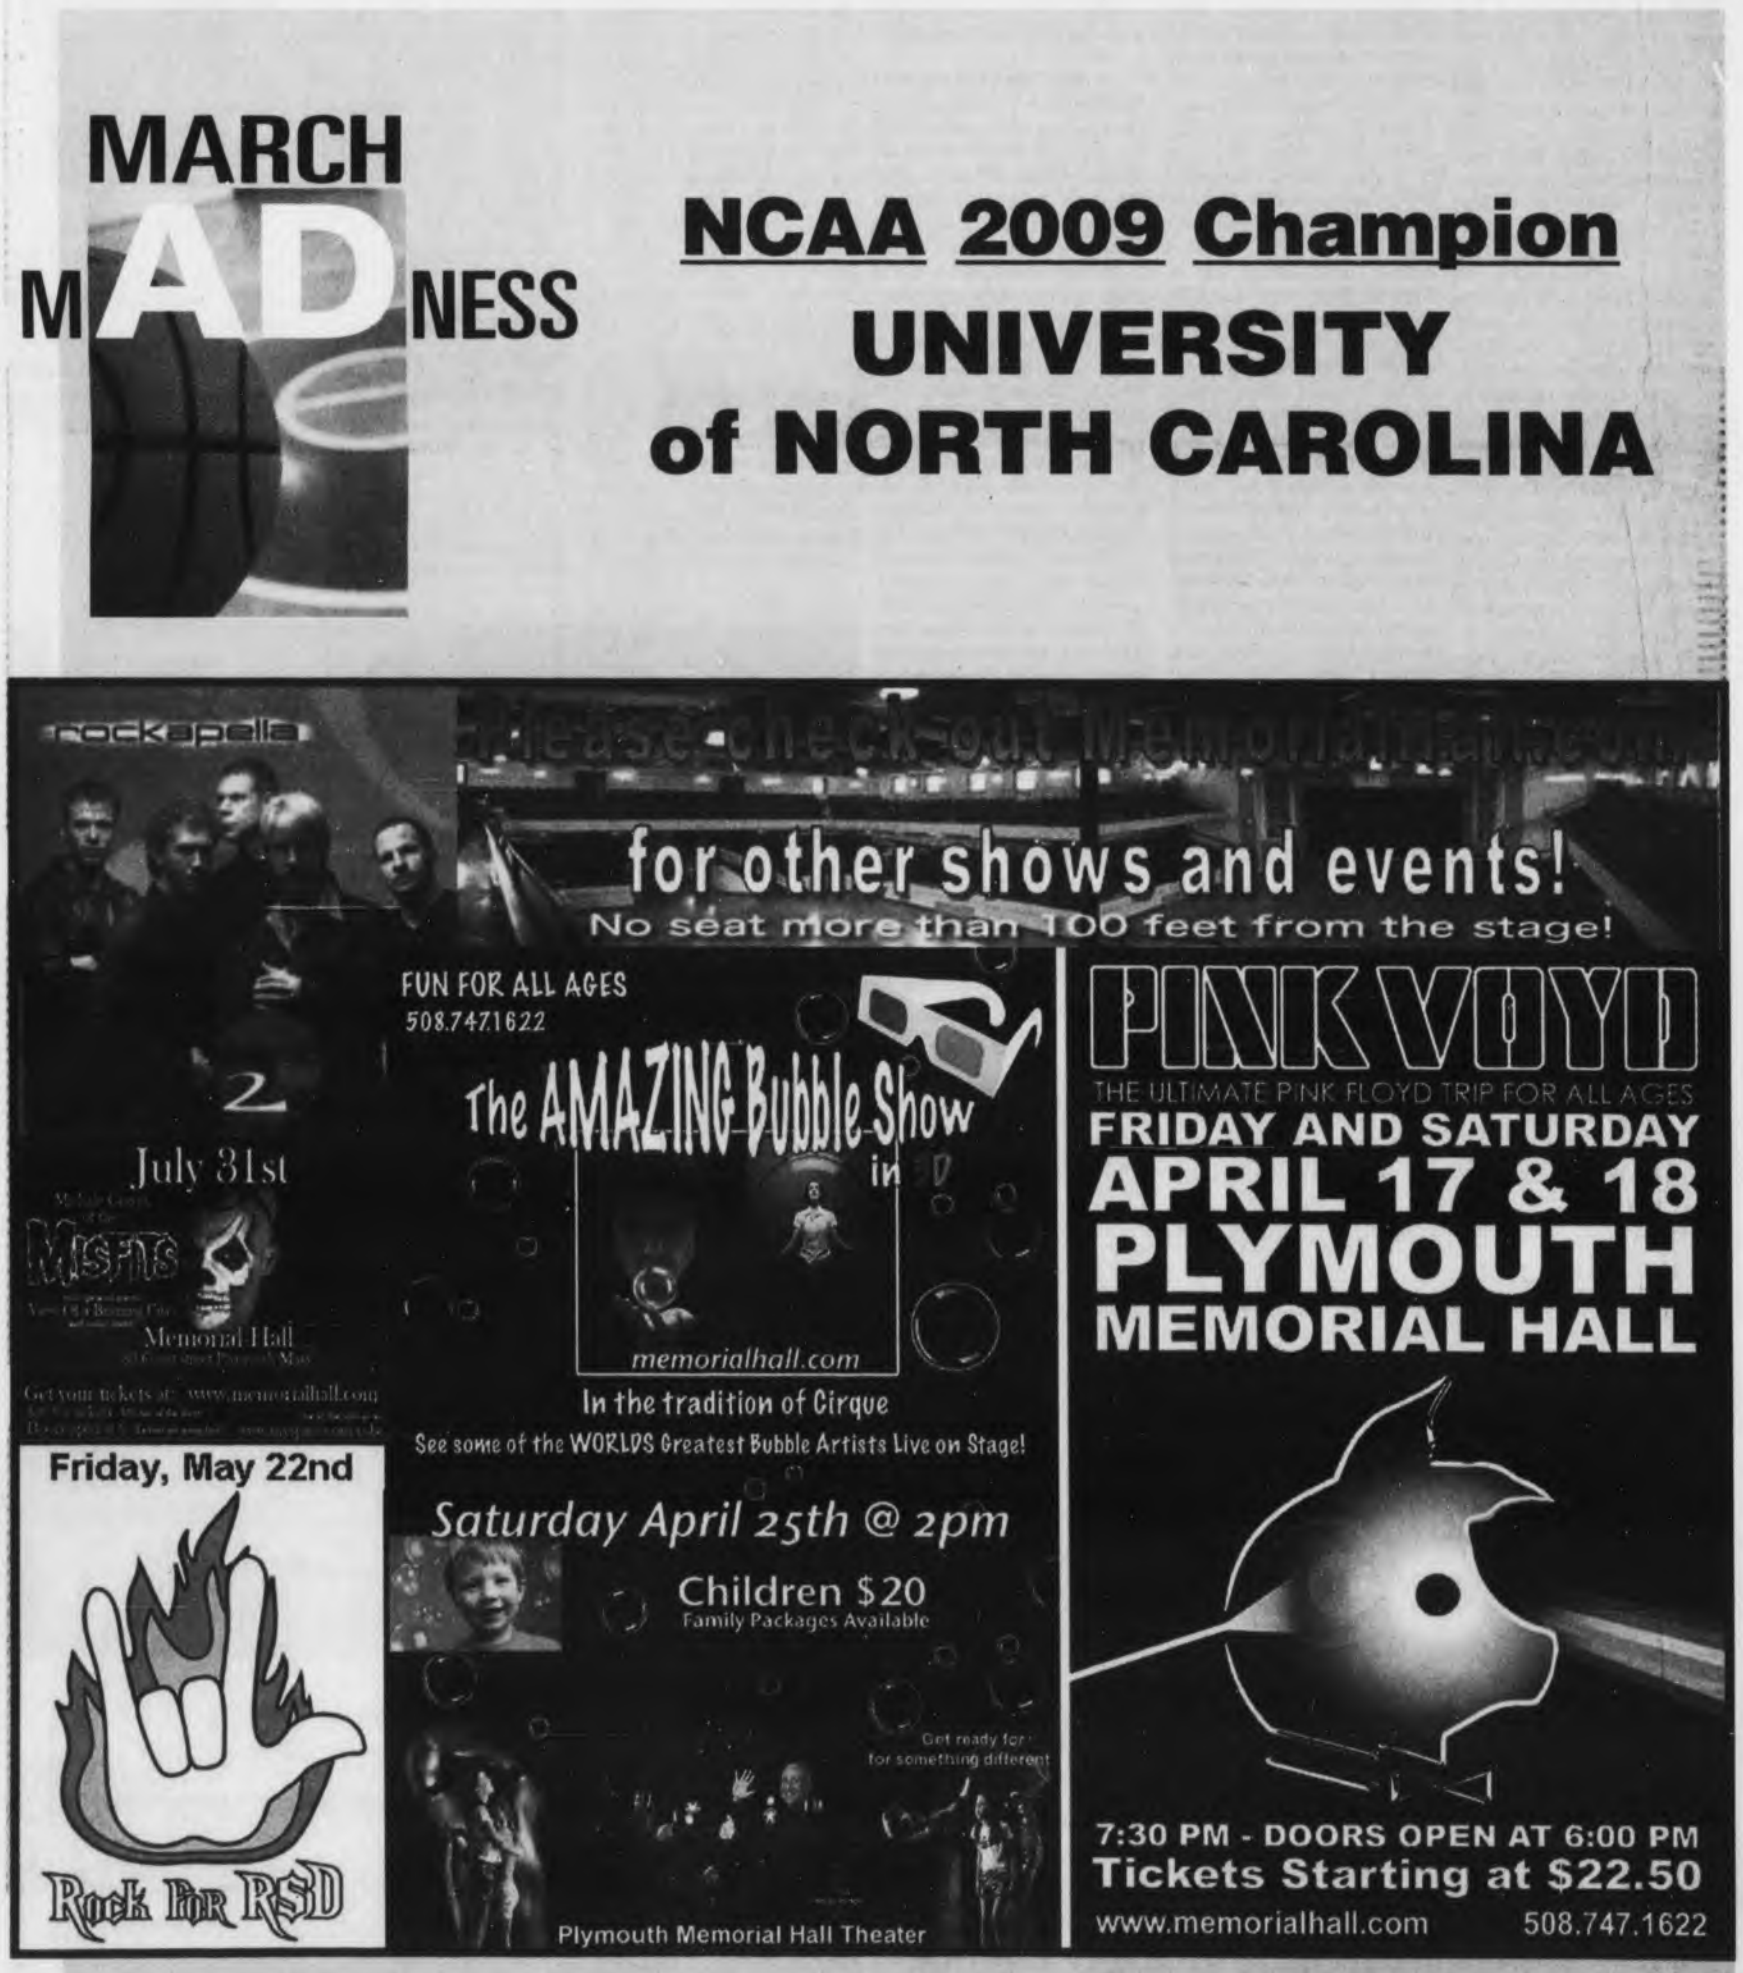
On a recent Thursday, 312 musicians — a group three times the size of the Boston Symphony Orchestra — performed at the Cohasset Middle High School gym at an All School Band Day. They put on a stunning performance, from the fourth graders all the way to the high school band members.

The night opened with the newly formed percussion ensemble. The group, consisting of two xylophones, drums, kettledrums, and bongos and, of course, a cowbell, performed a piece called "Rhythmicity." Each individual instrument was very audible, yet they blended nicely to create a memorable opening for the evening. After the percussion ensemble, the Fourth Grade band, in their debut performance, played the "Down the Field March." This band, 98 strong and who only started playing their instruments in the fall semester, played this brisk march uniformly and very well.

The Fifth Grade band, also under the direction of Steve Biagini, followed, playing "Arrival at Normandy." It was a strong piece with a regal air to it. The drums were showcased nicely throughout. Next, the Sixth Grade band, directed by Cherie Goldstein, performed "Ceremonium." Recalling the sound of ancient Rome, each instrumental part was very distinct and the band showed some nice harmony. Listening to these three bands gave the listeners, and the performers, an idea of how rapidly students progress from year to year. It demonstrates that Cohasset's excellent bands program is built on a strong foundation at the Deer Hill and Middle School level.

The Seventh and Eighth Grade Band, also directed by Ms. Goldstein, performed two pieces: "Clouds" and "Abandoned Treasure Hunt." "Clouds" started out light and airy, capturing the attitude of clouds on a nice day, before shifting into a more intense theme. At the climax of the piece, a "storm" breaks out, illustrated by the drums. The piece ends as the storm clears away. It was extremely well executed. The second piece featured maracas in the middle and had a slightly piratical feel to it.

The High School Band took over, opening with "American Visions." The piece wove together patriotic themes, including a jazzy version of "America the Beautiful." The piece was rhythmically complex, alternating measures of five-eight and groupings of seven-four, keeping director Stephanie Moriarty very busy while the band executed flawlessly. The second piece done by the High School group was "Quad City Stomp," employing a string bass, exciting and dynamic themes, and clapping and stomping from the entire band. The High School Band, which has won multiple awards, sets the high standard for the Cohasset music program.



The CHS Jazz Ensemble made an appearance. They played "American Patrol" – a Glenn Miller classic. It was an upbeat swing tempo and featured the trumpets. The band had really clean, clear, beautiful tone and sound, making it a pleasure to listen to. The other piece they presented was "Abracadabra" by Larry Barton. It was rocking jazz number and featured the saxophone section as well as trumpet solos by Tucker Oddleifson and Conor Ofsthun. Both pieces were terrific and well executed.

It is traditional that all the bands will play a song together. This year the bands played in a number of combinations. The Eighth Grade Band and High School Band played Gustav Holst's "Marching Song" together. It was very traditional yet well-layered piece of music, letting all of the instrumental part be heard. Then the High School Band and the CMS Band (sixth, seventh and eighth grades) played "Stars and Stripes Forever" by John Philip Sousa. This is the great classic of the wind band book, patriotic, and well-known American march with a terrific low brass parts and the audience clapping along. The final piece for the night was "When the Saints Go Marching In" played by all 312 musicians in the room. It was very upbeat and ended the evening well.

The show was a great success all around. The band directors, Mr. Biagini, Ms. Goldstien and Mrs. Moriarty, did an excellent job. Mrs. Moriarty is extremely excited about the bands' growth. She had this to say, "Each year our band programs continue to grow. The personal and group success that our musicians achieve is a testament to their hard work and dedication. We are fortunate to have students continue on to study music at colleges and universities, but even more fortunate to know that the students will foster life long appreciation of the arts." The parents and friends in attendance could only agree.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

SUMMER CAMP MAY BE TAX DEDUCTIBLE

Many parents may not realize that there are tax benefits to sending kids to camp. To qualify for a tax savings, parents must have dependent children under the age of 13 and enroll them in a summer day camp, thus allowing both parents to either work or go to school.

Sending a child to day camp so that a parent can work qualifies as a dependent-care expense. The size of the tax benefit allowable by law varies depending on the parent's income; and ACA, New England recommends that parents consult an accountant or tax advisor about how to claim this benefit. If a parent's adjusted gross income is more than $43,000, he/she can claim a credit of 20% of the cost of summer day camp or up to $600 for one child. This savings only applies to day camps, not to overnight camps.

"We want parents to know that sending their child to camp can be looked upon as great summer option. Not only does camp help kids grow and flourish, it offers a safe environment while parents are at work. And now there's the double advantage of saving on your taxes. Everyone wins," says ACA, New England Executive Director Bette Bussel!

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
APRIL 6, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A suggestion from a colleague on how to work out a problem might not sit too well with you. But before you suspect his or her motives, why not just accept it as a friendly gesture?

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An associate might seek your counsel on a workplace dispute with another co-worker. Listen to what she or he has to say, but withhold advice until you've heard the other side of the story.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Use your Twin gifts for creativity and practicality to score points in landing an opportunity that could open doors to a new career. Someone returns after a long absence.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Although things are pretty hectic through much of the week, some quiet time with loved ones helps restore balance. An unexpected visitor brings welcome news about a mutual friend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Getting used to change isn't always easy for the Big Cat. But make the adjustments gradually, and soon you'll hardly remember when things were any different from how they are now.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Continue to stay the course you've chosen, and avoid distractions that could throw you off track. Some knowledgeable folks are happy to provide guidance if you need it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you earned plaudits from most co-workers for your recent stand on a workplace situation, you also raised the envy quotient among others. Tread carefully for now.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You feel more positive about that delayed project, and you're ready to pick it up on a moment's notice. However, you might need to re-motivate those who have since lost interest.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some welcome news should be coming your way. In the meantime, use that Sagittarius charm to persuade some still-reluctant colleagues that your ideas have merit.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't wait for a misunderstanding to work itself out. Instead, ask for a chance to explain the circumstances before those bruised feelings lead to an irreversible break.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A physical problem should be checked out in order to avoid it going from just being a nuisance to something more serious. Your social life takes an unexpected but not unwelcome turn.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Yours might be the wisest sign in the Zodiac. But you still could benefit from the wisdom of a close friend who has suggestions on how to handle a perplexing personal problem.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

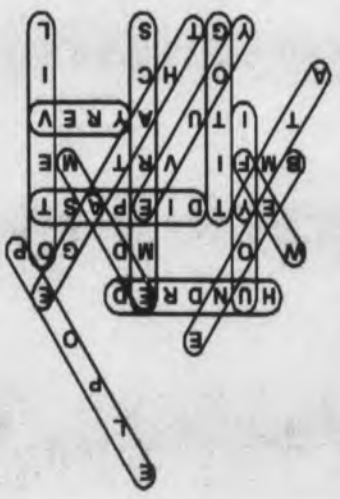
Find the listed words in the diagram. They run in all directions - forward, backward, up, down and diagonally.



At my age (clue answer) scare me.

If you live to be one hundred, you've got it made. Very few people die past that age.

American Idol, meet an American icon

If you're feeling left out around the water cooler these days because you aren't among the 20 million people watching the Fox-TV juggernaut "American Idol" this season, fear not. You're in very good company. Ruben Studdard, the 2003 winner of the highly rated TV talent show, isn't watching either.

"I haven't had a chance to watch this year's 'Idol' because I've been working every night," explained Studdard last week while on a whirlwind Boston visit to promote the current 30th anniversary national tour of "Ain't Misbehavin," the 1978 Tony Award winner for Best Musical, which opens at the Strand Theatre in Dorchester on Friday. "I can't even make an educated guess on who I think has the best chance of winning."

Studdard, 30, has no plans for a marathon TiVo session to get caught up either.

"I don't think it would be fair of me to pick a person anyway. I know how difficult it is to compete on the show and to have people scrutinize you. The contestants don't need any added pressure."

A graduate of Alabama A&M University, Studdard went to his first "American Idol" tryout with a friend who was hoping to get on the show. Before that season was over, however, Studdard had triumphed over everyone, including Clay Aiken, to become only the second winner in "Idol" history. Two of his fellow 2003 contestants, Frenchie Davis and Trenyce Cobbins, are on tour with him now in the revue featuring the music of Thomas Wright "Fats" Waller, and book by Murray Horovitz and Richard Maltby, Jr., set in 1930s Harlem.

"It's great to be able to do this show and sing the music of Fats Waller, who had such an amazing body of work. I'm sure everybody knows 'I'm Going to Sit Write Down and Write Myself a Letter,' and, of course, the title song, but there are so many more wonderful numbers in this show. My favorite is probably 'Honeysuckle Rose,' which I get to do with Frenchie. I love all the songs, though. Every time I step on stage to sing them, I become a bigger fan."

Studdard's own fans helped his first album, "Soulful," to have the highest debut week of any "Idol" winner. His latest album, "Love Is," will be in record stores next month. The 30-year-old, dubbed "The Velvet Teddy Bear" by no less than Gladys Knight, had some very personal inspiration for his latest release.

"Everything we do influences us, and getting married certainly has had a positive effect on me," says Studdard of his June 28, 2008, marriage to Surata Zuri McCants, whom he met during a personal appearance at a Wal-Mart. "The new album is wonderfully done and beautifully thought out. I think it is my best work yet."

"Ain't Misbehavin'" will be at the Strand Theatre, 543 Columbia Road, Dorchester, through Easter Sunday. For tickets and information, visit the Citi Performing Arts Box Office at 270 Tremont St., Boston, call 866-348-9738 or go online at citicenter.org.

Forty young dancers to perform in 'Peter and the Wolf'

Boston Ballet's Norwell Studio brings children's classic to life in Duxbury

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Genevieve Goodman, Tessa Endresen, Alexandra Upton, Rachel Navarrette, Audrey Hughes and Lilly Hanley are among the young dancers who will be performing Saturday in 'Peter and the Wolf' at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center.

Russian composer Sergei Prokofiev composed "Peter and the Wolf" as a symphonic work designed to introduce children to the instruments in an orchestra. Many young people, however, only know "Peter and the Wolf" from either the classic 1946 Disney animated version, or perhaps the more recent "Sesame Street" take on the tale in which Elmo and friends make music with the Boston Pops.

Students at Boston Ballet's Norwell Studio recently learned that the work is also the inspiration for a beautiful ballet that uses classical dance to tell the story of how Peter and his animal friends captured the wolf.

This Saturday, a company of more than 40 young dancers from the South Shore, all between the ages of 8 and 17, will give two performances of "Peter and the Wolf" at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center.

"This is a great story. It has wonderful music, too, and is very accessible. To mount something like this, outside of the annual spring showcase, is entirely new for us," said Boston Ballet School's Norwell Studio principal Jared Redick last week by telephone. "I didn't have to sell anyone on the idea, however, because Boston Ballet has been behind us all the way. And we're drawing on a great many Boston Ballet resources to stage 'Peter and the Wolf.'"

Jared Redick is the principal of Boston Ballet School's Norwell Studio.

Some of these resources include a Boston Ballet quintet performing the Prokofiev score live on clarinet, French horn, oboe, bassoon, and flute, and making quite an impression on the young dancers.

"Our kids are used to performing with only piano accompaniment, which is wonderful, but they were just enthralled when they realized they would have five musicians performing with them. And they were thrilled when the quintet came to Norwell to rehearse with them. Many of their parents were crowded into the studio doorways, too, just watching and listening. The music is just that beautiful," says Redick, who makes his home in Braintree with his wife, Shannon Parsley, assistant ballet mistress for Boston Ballet, and their two golden retrievers. Redick says Parsley has been watching and listening closely, too, in her professional capacity.

"My wife has been a tremendous help to me on this project. One pair of eyes is good, but two are much better. Shannon has really helped the students draw out the best in their performances."

Redick, a soloist with Boston Ballet, choreographed "Peter and the Wolf" with fellow Ballet company member Boyko Dossev. The company began rehearsals in January, while Redick also continued his other responsibilities, dancing featured and principal roles in Jiri Kylian's "Black and White" and George Balanchine's "Jewels" earlier this season.

"Everything has been going very well. Although doing all this while still dancing full-time has been an exercise in time management," said Redick. "Up until a couple of years ago, I didn't think I would even be interested in teaching until I finished dancing, but I feel very differently now. I'm really enjoying talking to students about dance instead of always being the one being spoken to."

"I wanted our students to have this kind of performance opportunity to do something created on and for them, because I know firsthand how important this will be for them in their development. Being a performer is a privilege. Working onstage is not something you are entitled to simply because of training or talent. It is a privilege and an honor to dance before a live audience. There is nothing else quite like it."

Boston Ballet School students featured in the production include: Savannah Althuis, Isabel Buckley, Kiley Crough, Sarah Gruber, Faith Porter, and Logan Breslow, Cohasset; Marina Dinino and Lyndsay Norris, Rockland; Anne Lipsett, Laura Varas, Emma Burleigh, Emily Anne Carrick, Mary Cate Healey, Caroline Kelleher, Paige King, Hannah Pedone, Ciara Wheeler, Caroline Kenneally, Amelia Pedone, Rebecca Mullaley, and Emma Reilly, Hingham; Kira Mohr, Rachel Navarrette, Ashley Wisler, Marshfield; Hope Moran and Siena Dacey, Bridgewater; Erika Sato, Quincy; Oliver Boyce, Jamaica Plain; Tessa Endresen, Duxbury; Genevieve Goodman, Scituate; Lilly Hanley and Briana Ford, Weymouth; Audrey Hughes, Milton; Lauren Begin, Norwood; Harper Edwards, Plymouth; Charlotte Breen, Holbrook; Alexis Henriquez, Abigail Howland, and Margaret McCarthy, Norwell; and Lia Serapiglia, Smithfield, R.I.

The Boston Ballet School's Norwell Studio will present two performances of "Peter and the Wolf" at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center, 73 Alden St., Duxbury, at 3 and 6 p.m. on Saturday, April 11. For tickets and information, call 617-456-6273 or go online at boston-ballet.org/school.

The best Jamaican food comes with a side of adventure

Erin Smith
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

PORT ANTONIO, Jamaica — The murky river water made a slushy sigh as small waves lapped over our raft.

That's when I looked down and realized the only thing keeping us afloat on Jamaica's Rio Grande River was several thick 30-foot bamboo poles lashed together and our raft captain, who was using a long pole to navigate from the foothills of Jamaica's Blue Mountains to St. Margaret's Bay and Port Antonio (on Jamaica's east coast).

It's easy to understand why Boston's elite became hooked on the river trips in the 1870s, when Lorenzo Dow Baker, founder of Boston Fruit Company, used rafts to ferry bananas to ships and liked it so much he invited friends along. Silver screen legend Errol Flynn also popularized Rio Grande rafting trips in the 1950s.

But today, devotees of Jamaican food know the real reason to take the river adventure: the authentic bush-style cuisine.

On the secluded riverbanks, you can taste mouthwatering plantain tarts, coconut drops, fricassee chicken, crawfish seasoned with spicy scotch bonnet peppers, calaloo (a spinach type vegetable), cornmeal and spices wrapped in banana leaves, and shrimp and mussel soup. Our feast was prepared at Betty's Riverside Canteen in tall, metal pots set on wood and stone fire pits.

STAFF PHOTOS/ERIN SMITH

Tourists can ride on rafts made of 30-foot long bamboo poles. It's the only way to get to the remote food stand started by Miss Betty in the 1970s.

At Little Ochie at Alligator Pond is a beachside restaurant where diners sit at picnic tables and enjoy fresh red snapper, parrot fish and lobsters.

Like many of the best places to eat in Jamaica, Betty's doesn't have a street address. The spot is only reachable by raft.

"Miss Betty" opened her riverside cooking hut in the 1970s after she had some success selling boiled corn to American rafting tourists. She later quit the venture to work in a dress shop, but luckily for aficionados of Jamaican home cooking, she reopened her stand in 1984. Daughter Wissy now runs the show; Miss Betty helps.

It takes these two and their small band of neighborhood women about 40 minutes to hike down from their hillside homes and cross the river, all while carrying the food and cooking pots on their heads.

For food lovers seeking more accessible dining options, Jamaica offers a plethora of good eats.

There are roadside "jerk centres" selling jerk chicken for about $5. But any local will tell you there's more to the local cuisine than that (plus, you can get the spicy chicken in the U.S.).

My advice: Skip the jerk. Indulge instead in such treats as the spicy pepper shrimp at Billy's Roadside Pepper Shrimp in the small, south coast village of Middle Quarters.

To find the dusty, wooden shack, which Bilroy Kerr has operated for about 14 years, follow the crowd. Older local women in bright, flowing traditional skirts, younger women in jeans, and men in hardhats on their lunch breaks all line up daily for heaping portions of stewed chicken, fresh coleslaw, peanut porridge known as "sip" and shrimp.

Kerr cooks over an open coal pit and offers curious eaters a chance to nibble some of his more exotic fare.

"Cow skin with beans," he said, grinning and lifting the lid off a pot filled with chunks of crispy, roasted meat. "It's Jamaican food, very strong. It's good for your body."

If you're too timid to try "mystery meat," drive a little further down Jamaica's south coast to Little Ochie Seafood Restaurant, in the town of Alligator Pond, where you can sit at bright yellow and green picnic tables in thatched-roof huts on stilts and order fresh red snapper, jerk crab, curried conch and grilled lobster by the pound. Jamaican lobster meat is denser, unlike the stringy texture of its Maine counterparts.

You'll need to allow a couple of hours to eat at Little Ochie. Jamaica is a friendly and laid back country, and the answer to nearly every question — including "Why is the food taking so long?" — is "No problem, mon."

Take a hint from the locals: A bit of relaxation and a rum punch or Red Stripe beer usually does the trick when things don't run as smoothly or quickly as you might like.

Or, linger over a cup of Blue Mountain coffee. Although Jamaica produces less than 1 percent of the world's coffee supply, many coffee connoisseurs consider the coffee beans grown in the island's Blue Mountain region among the best in the world. The cloud coverage in the high altitudes of the mountains gives the coffee a sweet and mellow aftertaste.

One sip and you'll have no problem, mon.

Ackee: A tasty but risky egg-flavored fruit

I had already bitten into the oblong yellow-white ackee fruit and was just beginning to savor the buttery almond flavor when I learned the fruit pods had been cracked open for display.

That's when panic set in.

I had been warned that ackee is poisonous unless allowed to open naturally and even then, only the soft yellow fruit inside is edible. (The red parts of the fruit contain hypoglycins, a fatal toxin.) Eating unripe ackee, the national fruit of Jamaica, causes vomiting and even death. Luckily, I had taken only a tiny bite.

Curious foodies who want to try this delicious fruit would be wise to learn from my mistake and not try to pick or prepare the ackee themselves. While the raw fruit tastes similar to buttery almonds, cooked ackee is like eating scrambled eggs — only better. This may be the reason many Jamaicans eat cooked ackee as a breakfast dish. The best ackee dishes are ackee and saltfish, but ackee and bacon or ackee and calaloo are also favorite combinations found at many Jamaican restaurants.

IF YOU go...

EATING THERE: The best places to eat in Jamaica are often difficult to find. Billy's Roadside Pepper Shrimp is along a dusty road in the Middle Quarters, a south coast village in the province of Saint Elizabeth. There's no address, but adventurous food lovers can call for directions. Pepper shrimp is about $13, while a cup of shrimp soup is less than $1 (in Jamaica, 876-366-4182).

Little Ochie also doesn't have an official address. The beachside restaurant is in Alligator Pond in the province of Saint Elizabeth and serves grilled lobster at about $11 per pound and lobster tail at $17 per pound. Jerk crab and curried conch cost only about $7 (876-382-3375).

Blue Mountain Coffee is a popular souvenir, and you'll find it in gift shops (but not at local markets). Java junkies who decide to pick up a bag to bring home should make sure they're buying the real deal. Only real Blue Mountain coffee is stamped with a certified seal from Jamaica's Coffee Industry Board, complete with a picture of a barrel, a mountain peak and coffee bean branches.

EXPLORING THERE: Book a Rio Grande River rafting tour through most resorts; $70 for a two-person raft on a two-hour float. (Call 876-993-5778 to schedule a river trip.) If you want to eat at Betty's Riverside Canteen, call to make menu arrangements (876-389-8826; ask for Belinda "Wissy" Gray; about $30 for a full spread). Make sure to wear your bathing suit in case you want to jump in the river for a swim.

The Appleton Estate, the oldest rum distillery in Jamaica, has been blending rums since 1749. You can take a tour of the distillery Monday through Saturday. The tour includes transportation from your hotel and rum tasting for $18 per person (www.appletonrumtour.com).

Firefly, the former hilltop home of literary great Noel Coward, is worth a visit for its breathtaking views of Port Maria. It's the perfect place to sit with a cup of Blue Mountain coffee. Call ahead to request food and coffee service, as well as a tour of the hilltop estate (876-725-0920).

STAYING THERE: Sandals operates seven all-inclusive, beachfront resorts for couples in Jamaica - in Montego Bay, Negril, Ocho Rios and Whitehouse (in a secluded area on the south coast) - and is offering its romantic, luxury accommodations with discounts of up 60 percent in 2009. Rates, including accommodations, meals, drinks and activities, start at $289 per person, per night, before the discounts (plus, stay at one resort and enjoy meals and activities at the others as well). Call 888-Sandals or visit www.sandals.com.

For families, the same firm operates Beaches all-inclusive resorts in Negril and Ocho Rios, with special pricing for kids. Call 888-Beaches or visit www.beaches.com.

Things are looking up for Jennifer Warshaw (formerly of Maggie's Corner) after opening up her cafe at 5 South Main Street last Friday marking her return to Cohasset with her famous pastries. 5 South Main is also offering breakfast and lunch wraps. Another exciting menu item is artisan pizzas: hand-tossed dough with unique combinations of toppings.

Jennifer Warshaw has been in the food industry since she was eight years old.

No, really, she insists.

The food service veteran got her start helping out her mom with her commercial bakery and her dad at his restaurant Casa Berrini.

"I never intended to make it my career," said Warshaw. Every time she left the restaurant business for other pursuits, she found she missed it.

"I missed the chaos of the food industry. I guess it's in my blood," said Warshaw.

Warshaw is the new owner of 5 South Main, formerly Café Zuppa, in the village. Although this is a new venture, Warshaw is no stranger to many in Cohasset. She and her mother, Maggie Warshaw, formerly owned and

Cook Estate

Project to break ground this summer

In spite of the economic times, the developers of the Cook Estate are moving forward with their 27-home development on Sohier Street.

Abbott Real Estate and Development received special permit approval from the Planning Board in fall 2007, won an appeal and are now gearing up to break ground this summer. In fact, five of the 27 home sites are already under agreement with future owners.

Two weeks ago, a kick-off event was held at the South Shore Art Center to a great response, according to Tom Hamilton, president of Dean and Hamilton. Cohasset-based Dean and

No word if Cohasset will be backdrop

In the summer of 1986 Cohasset was transformed into the quaint New England village of Eastwick and a certifiable Hollywood movie set.

Could the 'magic' happen again? Maybe.

According to published reports in the entertainment industry, ABC is set to film a television pilot entitled "Eastwick," a drama series based on John Updike's novel "The Witches of Eastwick," as well as the 1987 feature film of the same name. For those new to Cohasset, the 1987 movie starred Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer, prominently featured Cohasset Village, First Parish Church and

Shuttle bus proposal will wait

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In early March a proposal to run a shuttle bus service from the commuter rail station to the shopping centers and major neighborhoods in town was floated. The Selectmen supported the application and proponents of the project intended to move forward in seeking a grant from the Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) under the organization's suburban mobility program.

The application has an extremely tight turnaround time of about a month and Clark Brewer, planning board member and primary proponent of the proposal, said enough sponsors for the shuttle did not come forward in the time period.

The grant from the MPO required local matching funds. The grant would cover 80 percent of the cost in its first year, 70 percent in its second year and 60 percent in its third year. After that the program would have to be self-sustaining.

Brewer plans to keep the proposal "out there" in the hopes of applying for the grant next year.

"My sense of these things is it doesn't happen, at least people start thinking about it and it can build momentum," said Brewer.

"My sense of these things is it doesn't happen, at least people start thinking about it and it can build momentum."
— Clark Brewer

The rough conceptual plan was to operate a shuttle bus in a seven-mile loop on Main Street and Route 3A between Beechwood Street and the Cohasset commuter rail station. Possible stops for the shuttle bus include: Cohasset Station, intersection of the King Street and Forest Avenue, North Main Street ballfields, library, village at Ripley Road, Harborview Apartments/police and fire building, harbor, intersection of Summer Street and S. Main, Beechwood Street and S. Main, Shaw's plaza, Pond Street, Cohasset Plaza (Stop & Shop).

POLICE BEAT

Juvenile faces drug, alcohol charges

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 16-year-old boy is facing a host of charges after he was found with small, plastic packages of marijuana and alcohol while parked behind the library on Friday night (April 10).

A police officer was checking out the rear parking lot behind the library at around 10 p.m. when the officer saw a car parked that was running and had its headlights on.

Further investigation revealed two 16-year-olds were in the car, one in the driver's seat and one in the back seat.

Both appeared nervous, police said. Another officer provided backup.

In plain view were several cans of beer by the feet of the back-seat passenger, police said. Further investigation resulted in police finding 14 full cans of beer and a bottle of Smirnoff vodka.

There were also multiple small plastic bags of a green leafy substance that turned out to be marijuana on the front seat floor.

Both 16-year-olds were charged with being minors in possession of alcohol. The driver was also charged with possession of a Class D substance with intent to distribute; having an open container of alcohol in the vehicle; and for violating a junior operator's license restriction (motorists under 18 cannot have a minor passenger). He was also charged with being a minor in possession of a BB rifle that was found in the car.

Both are students at Cohasset High and police have been in contact with the school, Chief Hussey said.

Police do not release the names of juveniles who have been arrested. A juvenile is someone 16 or under.

Suspect arrested

Off-duty Cohasset Police Lieutenant William Quigley helped Hingham nab a 40-year-old Hull man who is facing charges of breaking and entering a motor vehicle that had been parked at Stodder's Neck, a park in Hingham.

As he was driving by Stodder's Neck on Sunday, Quigley recognized the Ford Crown Victoria, which had been reported as suspicious by another Cohasset police officer, Officer Dan Williams.

Cohasset Police Chief James Hussey said Williams had seen the car parked in town with a man sitting inside about 10 days ago.

"The car with the man inside peaked his interest so he ran the plate," Hussey said. The car was registered, insured and was not stolen, police said.

On Sunday (April 12th) at about 4:49 p.m., Quigley reported to Hingham Police that he had just witnessed a breaking and entering of a motor vehicle in the parking lot of Stodder's Neck.

Chief Hussey said Quigley recognized the car that Williams had reported as being suspicious as he was driving by the area. He witnessed the suspect, later identified as Phillip L. Attardi, 40, of 825 Nantasket Ave. Hull, remove some items from the car.

Quigley kept a safe distance as he followed the car into Quincy. Quigley then arrested the suspect, who had stopped in a parking lot. Quincy Police arrived soon after. Hingham Police sent a cruiser to Quincy and took custody of the suspect since the crime occurred in Hingham.

Hingham Police said the victim reported that her handbag containing credit cards, and a GPS unit were taken from the vehicle. These items were found in the Crown Victoria.

Hingham Police charged Attardi with malicious destruction of property, breaking and entering in the daytime, and larceny of property over $250. He was arraigned at Hingham District Court on April 13.

Chief Hussey said Cohasset police are looking at Attardi as a potential suspect in a rash of car breaking-and-enterings here.

Baby formula

Police will work with Stop & Shop to issue a criminal complaint against a woman who has been caught on surveillance tapes stealing baby formula from Stop & Shop.

In the latest shoplifting incident on Friday (April 10) at about 2 p.m., the woman stole $200 worth of baby formula, police said.

She was observed on videotape removing formula from the shelves, placing it in a bag and leaving the store without paying, police said.

Stolen baby formula is resold, police said. The woman is known to store security and this has been an ongoing problem, police said.

Flimflam

Police are investigating an alleged "flimflam" at Shaw's last week that involved a man paying for a Coke and a sandwich with a $20 bill and then saying he had paid with a $50 bill.

Chief Hussey said police are gathering information and looking at surveillance tapes as part of the investigation.

Hussey said the customer paid the $6.05 charge with a $20 bill and then returned to the cashier saying he had paid with a $50 bill and only received change for $20.

The cashier gave the customer the additional change, police said.

Found bike

A police officer found a blue-green colored, Dynacraft child's bike off Rocky Lane last week. Police said the bicycle had been there a while and the officer realized it had not just been left by a child who perhaps had gone off to play. The bike is a BMX style and is now at the police station where hopefully the owner will pick it up, police said.

Lockers

A caller from a gym off King Street (Route 3A) reported that some lockers had been broken into. The incident was reported at about 1 p.m. on Wednesday (April 8). Police, who said three locks had been pried off and tossed into the trash, are trying to determine if anything had been taken.

That same day a motorist reported that while he had been at the gym his car was broken into. Police said the man could not find his keys that he thought had been in his coat pocket when he went to leave. He found them on the ground outside and drove home. Then he realized that the GPS unit in his car was missing. Police said it appears someone found the keys in his coat and then entered his car. The incidents are under investigation.

Medical issue

A concerned caller reported to police last Thursday (April 9) that a drunk man had just gotten into his car and headed north on Route 3A (King Street). Police stopped the car and had the man checked out by the ambulance. As it turned out he was having a medical issue. Police drove him home and parked his car at a location where it could be picked up later.

Chief Hussey said police appreciate the help from the public in these cares and were able to get the man home safely.

Pit bull

A concerned landlord did not provide a name, telephone number or address for police to follow-up after she reported that a pit bull in the rental unit sounded like it was tearing up the place. Chief Hussey said police are willing to get involved to determine if the animal is OK or is being neglected or abused in some way.

Hussey said Cohasset does not have any restrictions about ownership of pit bulls. "They are treated like any other dogs," he said.

Missing girls

Another walker found two little girls who had been reported missing in Whitney Woods on Sunday (April 12) at about 2:20 p.m. A 911 caller reported his two children had been missing for about two hours. The police and fire departments sent personnel to the scene and within a short time, another person walking in the woods found the two young girls. Chief Hussey said police urge parents to contact police sooner if a child goes missing or is lost.

"We got quite a crowd, about twice the amount of people we were expecting," said Hamilton. Roughly 70 people attended the event.

Dean and Hamilton have set up a sales office in the existing Cook Estate house on the property and are hosting an open house on the property each weekend. The future homes are each surveyed and marked off so potential buyers can walk the site to envision the project – and possibly their new home.

"We've had five agreements in the last two weeks. Sales seem to be going well even in the challenging times," said Hamilton. "We not just catering to downsizing seniors, but young couples looking for high quality, new construction in Cohasset."

The Cook Estate is offering two styles of homes; similar to other already built Abbott Development projects in Mattapoisett and Plymouth. The single family, two-bedroom homes will be between 2,400 and 2,900 square feet and from the outside, their designs will be compatible. Both models have the option of a finished basement, which could add about 1000 square feet of livable space.

"Cohasset is a wonderful town to begin with and the Cook Estate is a beautiful piece of land," said Abbott Development project manager Bob Durant. "There are really no other new developments like this in the town…and I think we priced it in a good range for everyone in Cohasset."

The to-be-constructed homes are priced between $785,000 and $999,000. Abbott expects to pull building permits in the early summer, do preliminary site work and begin pouring foundations in September.

"We're looking at occupancy in late spring, early summer 2010," said Jim McAuliffe, principal of Abbott Development in a phone interview.

"We not just catering to downsizing seniors, but young couples looking for high quality, new construction in Cohasset."

— Tom Hamilton, president of Dean and Hamilton.

According to Hamilton, the beauty of this development is the privacy of the land, but close proximity to amenities like the commuter train and the village, "it's a great location."

The one-mile stretch of Route 3A from the Cohasset commuter rail station to the Sohier Street is slated for major changes over the next year or two.

The Avalon apartment complex, another development project that has been in the pipeline for several years, is expected to break ground this summer as well. The complex includes 200 apartment units.

The construction of the mixed-use transit-oriented district (TOD) development, Old Colony Square, is underway. The building will have about 15 apartments and storefronts.

Abbott Real Estate and Development purchased the 19-acre property located off Sohier Street in 2006. The received a special permit from the Planning Board under the town's residential cluster development bylaw. The residential cluster development district allows for homes to be built closer together with open space on the edges. Despite the "cluster" of homes, there will be no more units built than would be allowed under normal subdivision.

The Planning Board approved the project in fall 2007, but the decision was appealed. The owner of the abutting property where Stop & Shop is located, Donald Stazko, appealed the Planning Board's approval of the project on the grounds the increased runoff from the Cook Estate development would adversely affect the adjacent property. The Planning Board's decision was upheld during the appeal process allowing the project to move forward.

Abbott has yet to pull a building permit for the site, but according to Hamilton they expect to break ground in a June/July timeframe.

Abbott Development has been in business for more than a decade and has built more than 1,000 homes both for rent and for sale, including the recent Seton Highlands development at the Pinehills in Plymouth.

In fall 2006, the Cook Estate development was proposed to be a 55-plus community. However, that restriction has since been shelved and the development will be open to all interested buyers. In addition, the development will feature detached homes, rather than duplex style.

Before the Abbott developers ever entered the scene, the land was under the auspices of the town and was slated to be affordable senior housing. However, wastewater issues first forced a reduction in scope for the project (originally proposed at 95 units), and the project ultimately fell through after several plans by four different developers. The land was returned to the heirs of the Cook estate and they hired Abbott Developers in 2006.

Win for DiNero's Keno

Town has right to appeal until May

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In the not so distant future patrons of DiNero's Restaurant could be playing Keno at the bar. Earlier this month, after a nearly four-year appeal process, the Massachusetts State Lottery Commission overturned Cohasset's 2005 objection.

"Keno is a necessity in today's business," said Frank Plotner, owner of DiNero's Restaurant. "It has been a part of every other business I have owned."

Over the years, customers have requested Keno and many are happy that the lottery game could soon be a part of their DiNero's dining experience, he said.

"Some people like to go to dinner, kill some time playing Keno…it is just a game, not the devil," said Plotner. "We're looking forward to having it."

DiNero's is still waiting out the town's appeal period. According to a letter from the Massachusetts State Lottery Commission, there is a 30-day period in which an appeal to Superior Court can be filed. The Board of Selectmen has until May 7 to decide whether to appeal. The Board will take it up at their meeting on Monday, April 27. If the appeal lapses without the town filing, Plotner said DiNero's will work with the Lottery Commission to get the equipment installed.

Keno is available in one other establishment in the town — Cohasset Food Mart convenience store on Route 3A.

The Board of Selectmen in both 2002 and 2005 objected to the installation of Keno at DiNero's primarily due to abutters' concerns and traffic and parking congestion.

Selectman Fred Koed said he is "disappointed" with the decision of the Mass Lottery Commission.

"I don't know what the Selectmen will decide to do from here," said Koed in a phone interview Tuesday. The Board of Selectmen was slated to take up the issue at their meeting Thursday night after the Mariner went to press.

"I thought we presented a pretty substantial testimony outlining the concerns from the neighborhood" of parking and traffic congestion, said Koed.

Among those neighbors who voiced opposition to Keno was Maria Plante, who lives on Grace Drive overlooking DiNero's. When she received the news DiNero's has gotten permission for Keno she was both surprised and disappointed. She immediately called a couple of the Selectmen, the Town Manager and State Representative Garrett Bradley.

"The bottom line is we don't want gambling in our residential neighborhood," said Plante, who also cited ongoing parking issues on Hull Street when the restaurant is crowded on the weekends.

"It's such a long story, it goes back so far," said Plante. "We had a lot of people in the area express opposition to it (in the past)…they need to speak out again."

In 2002, the Selectmen declined approval of DiNero's Keno and the Lottery Commission upheld their decision in 2004. Later that year, DiNero's received approval from the Planning Board to renovate and expand the restaurant, including adding parking spaces.

DiNero's approached the town again in 2005 after completing a significant renovation and expansion of the restaurant. Citing nearly identical reasons to the 2002 objection, the Selectmen denied the application in 2005.

Koed said while the town recognized the number of parking spaces had been increased, the number of seats in the restaurant increased as well negating the benefit of increased parking. The establishment currently has a total permitted capacity of 119 patrons.

DiNero's appealed the 2005 denial to the Massachusetts Lottery Commission.

In its decision, the Lottery Commission found many of the town's 2002 concerns were addressed with the expansion.

"It was not established through the testimony and evidence that the introduction of Keno would materially alter the number of patrons frequenting DiNero's or significantly aggravate traffic or parking in the area as alleged," stated the decision dated Dec. 30, 2008.

Information from the Massachusetts State Lottery website, www.masslottery.com/games/keno

Keno drawings take place seven days a week. Sunday 12 p.m. to 1 a.m. and Monday through Saturday 5:04 a.m. to 1 a.m.

The drawings take place approximately 4 minutes apart.

The Lottery will select 20) numbers out of a field of 80 numbers ranging from number one (1) to number 80.

A computer driven random number generator will select the winning numbers for each drawing. The random number generator will only select winning numbers after receiving confirmation from the Lottery's computer system that betting for that drawing has been closed.

More specifically: There are two computer systems involved in a Keno drawing. The primary computer takes all bets. Attached to this main computer is a random number generator that is constantly shuffling 80 numbers around. Once the betting is closed, the primary computer asks the random number generator for 20 numbers. At that moment, the primary computer knows the 20 winning numbers and graphically displays them on the Keno monitors at agent locations. The random number generator is independent of the primary computer and has no way of determining which bets the primary computer accepts. The sole purpose of this generator is to continuously shuffle numbers and provide the primary computer with a set of winning numbers when asked.

Border Street to close for a week

As reported in last week's Mariner, Border Street in Cohasset will be closed for a week starting the 20thof April for culvert construction.

The area will be posted to remind residents of the detour. The closure will be at the Gulf between 119 and 139 Border Street. Cohasset and Scituate emergency responders have collaborated to assure the safety of Cohasset residents who live south of the construction site. Anyone south of the site will have to go through North Scituate to get to Cohasset Village.

The Town of Cohasset apologizes in advance for any inconvenience this may cause.

Bradley and Hedlund announce Chapter 90 grants

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, announce Cohasset will receive $160,459 in Chapter 90 transportation grants in the fiscal 2010 apportionment.

"I am glad that the governor has kept this year's Chapter 90 program level funded. These funds are critical for local road projects and they will provide a level of economic stimulus that is essential to our ability to sustain growth in our communities," Bradley said.

Chapter 90 funds can be used by cities and towns for local road and bridge projects for reconstruction, resurfacing, equipment, design and engineering.

"It is particularly important that after such a harsh winter we provide as much Chapter 90 money to our cities and towns as possible," Hedlund said.

The Chapter 90 formula is based on road miles, population and employees. The formula was developed by the Legislative Road Caucus of the Transportation Committee. The factors in the formula are 58.33 percent, 20.83 percent population and 20.83 percent employment.

Training with an Olympian

Olympic triathlete at CHS Saturday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Jarrod Shoemaker might not be able to accompany you on a 12-mile bike ride or that training run around Little Harbor — and it's likely you wouldn't be able to keep up with him either — but the Olympic triathlete can give you a few pointers to get you in tip-top shape for the upcoming Cohasset Triathlon.

Last summer, Shoemaker was the first to cross the line at the Cohasset Triathlon, less than two months later he was the 18th to cross the finish line at the Beijing Olympic triathlon event. This Saturday he will come to speak to fellow triathletes and other interested residents about his Olympic experience and the sport in general.

"One of the things I like and enjoy about triathlons is it is a community-oriented sport," said Shoemaker, who enjoys mixing with triathlon newcomers at local races. "It's a good lifestyle sport...once people get the bug, they're in it for life."

Shoemaker will speak with his coach Tim Crowley on Saturday (April 18) at 11a.m. at Cohasset High School gymnasium. The event is a kickoff affair for the third annual Cohasset Triathlon slated for Sunday, June 28. Race Director and Cohasset resident Bill Burnett organized the free event for anyone interested in learning about triathlons and, in particular, those competing in a triathlon for the first time.

"One of my goals when I started the Cohasset Triathlon was to bring beginners to this great sport," said Burnett. "We've been able to draw a lot of elite athletes to Cohasset, including Jarrod Shoemaker, but it's important to get new athletes excited about the sport."

Shoemaker and elite coach Tim Crowley will get athletes on the right path to success with tips on training, implementing (and sticking to) a training schedule and the equipment needed to compete.

Shoemaker will spend some time recounting his amazing experience of being a part of Team USA at last summer's Beijing Olympics.

"It was fun being around other athletes, everyone on the team was so supportive of each other," said Shoemaker, who met several of the Olympic runners and sprinters. "It was the most fun being part of a team like that."

Being a professional triathlete, it is Shoemaker's full-time job to train for the three sport components. Although he doesn't always do all three sports in one day, he trains for each sport five times a week. Each day the workouts have varying intensity and length. He's train for the running leg about two times per week. Bike rides vary from an "easy one-hour" ride to a harder two and a half hour ride. His swimming workouts vary from 3000-yards to 5500-yards. His workouts adds up to about 20-hours a week.

US Olympian Jarrod Shoemaker comes in a comfortable first place during last year's Cohasset Triathlon. Shoemaker and his coach Tim Crowley will speak to those interested in learning about triathlons on Saturday (April 18) at 11a.m. at the Cohasset High School gymnasium

This spring, Shoemaker will compete in several international and top-tier races. He'll travel to Japan, Korea, Singapore and Madrid all before the end of May. During the course of a season, Shoemaker races in 10 to 12 triathlons around the world.

"It's a lot of fun, you get to travel the world and meet a lot of interesting people. I definitely didn't expect to be doing this," said Shoemaker. His wife, Alicia Kaye, is also a triathlete. She was the top woman finisher at last year's triathlon and will race again this year in Cohasset.

As for being a two-time Olympic competitor, that's Shoemaker's goal.

"I want to continue to gain more experience, continue to train and put myself in a position to make the Olympic team in 2012," said Shoemaker.

The Olympian has also made the transition to race director. He and his coach are co-directing a new triathlon in Marlborough with Burnett.

"When I raced in Cohasset last year, it was the kind of race I like to go to — it was run well, it was safe, there were no question marks," said Shoemaker. After his experience with the Cohasset Triathlon and Burnett, he decided to team up with him to put on another local triathlon in Marlborough.

"(Putting on the Marlborough triathlon) is a way for me to give back, get a younger generation involved and raise awareness around the sport," said Shoemaker.

While the Cohasset Triathlon will still raise money for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, proceeds from the Marlborough Triathlon will go toward Children's Hospital Boston.

Shoemaker isn't the only Olympian racing in this year's Cohasset Triathlon. Ten-time Olympic medalist Gary Hall Jr. will compete this summer. The Olympic swimmer was attracted to the event because of its partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF); he was diagnosed with Type 1 (juvenile) diabetes in 1999.

Another Olympic swimmer, 12-time medalist Jenny Thompson, will race in the Cohasset Triathlon as well.

"Every year I want to make each race better and better by offering a more engaging experience for the athletes. I am excited to bring in the big names in the sport to Cohasset. Each athlete, volunteer, and Cohasset resident should expect an inspirational day on June 28th," said Burnett.

The Commonwealth Triathlon Series

The Commonwealth Triathlon Series will include the Cohasset Triathlon (June 28), Marlborough Triathlon (July 26) and Gloucester Triathlon (Aug. 9). Cohasset's third annual event has filled to capacity and there is now a waiting list of over 300 people. There is still ample room in both the Marlborough (65 percent full) and the Gloucester Triathlons (60 percent full).

After the Cohasset Triathlon, Burnett was approached by two well-known triathletes who were interested in starting up their own triathlon near their hometowns. Jarrod Shoemaker, who competed in the Beijing Olympics in August, along with his coach Tim Crowley, and Janda Ricci-Munn, who finished third overall at the 2008 Cohasset Tri, wanted to use Burnett's expertise to re-create the Cohasset Tri feel in other parts of Massachusetts.

So far, the towns, newcomers to the sport and professional triathletes alike, have received the series positively, said Burnett.

"We're seeing people signed up to do all three triathlons...100 people are doing that. I just love that, that's what we envisioned when we started the series," said Burnett.

Full-day K tuition goes up

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Osgood is expecting between 110 and 125 students to enroll in the full day kindergarten program in the fall.

In the 2009-2010 school year it is going to cost more to send your child to full-day kindergarten at Cohasset Public Schools.

The School Committee voted Wednesday night to increase the tuition rate from $2400 to $2600, which is just under the state average for full-day kindergarten tuition.

The full-day kindergarten program was implemented four years ago and Osgood School Principal Janet Sheehan said the addition has been very successful. In the current school year, there are six classrooms of full-day kindergarten students and one class for half-day students. There was a waitlist for all three classes this year, Sheehan said.

To operate the full-day kindergarten program Cohasset depends on the tuition and a grant from the Department of Education. With the state budget more gray than black and white at this point, school officials have some concern they will not receive the same amount of funding as this year.

An annual report from the Department of Education to the legislature on full-day kindergarten programs suggests there will not be grants for communities looking to transition from a half-day kindergarten to a full-day kindergarten program and there may be a reduction in grant funding for existing programs, said Sheehan.

For the current school year, Cohasset received $52,300 in full-day kindergarten state grant funding; for fiscal 2008, Cohasset received $56,788, in 2007, $25,512.

"We won't know what the kindergarten grant will be until the final budget is approved in June," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh.

Sheehan said the proposal for a tuition increase tried to balance the uncertainty and restraints of the town and state budget while not creating a financial hardship on families.

Osgood is expecting between 110 and 125 students to enroll in the full day kindergarten program in the fall. Right now, 90 have registered for the program.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz was concerned that even with the raise in tuition the district would not be covering the cost to run the program if the state grant did not come through.

"If the goal is to break even, with the way things are I want to be conservative. I think we want to be sure this is a self-sustaining program," said Slanetz. Full-day kindergarten tuitions go directly toward running the program funding teacher salaries, instructional aides and supplies.

Sheehan has heard some concerns from parents about the ability to pay for the increased tuition.

"We're all conscious of the economy, but we're also conscious of maintaining a good program," said Sheehan. She was concerned if the tuition did a greater jump in one year, there would be fewer participants. "I'm not sure we will enjoy the success the program has had if we increase the tuition more than the $200."

There is a sliding fee scale offered to families to adjust the tuition based on family income.

Walsh said when the state budget picture is clearer in June and if the grant turns out to be reduced, the School Committee will have the opportunity to pre-pay instructional materials and supplies from left over funds in the revolving account.

The School Committee voted to approve the increase in tuition from $2400 to $2600 for the 2009-2010 school year in a 4-1 vote; Slanetz was the sole opposing vote.

The committee also addressed tuition for the pre-school program and it will stay the same as the current year — $2000. Tuition was raised from $1800 to $2000 just last year.

Please note change in times/prices! Are you looking for something fun-filled for your child or children to do for the week of April Vacation? A week of Celebration is happening here at Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum for April Vacation and your children would love to attend and have a ball.

- Tuesday, April 21, The MadHatters "UnBirthday" Day where we will have fun celebrating everyone's unbirthday!
- Wednesday, April 22 is our Celebration of Earth Day where we will learn about our Earth both near and far.
- Thursday, April 23 is our Artistic Fun Extravaganza where we will enjoy art in a variety of fun(and messy) ways
- Friday, April 24 is our Pajama Day Party where everyone can where there favorite jammies, slippers and enjoy a day of laziness and craziness here in Our World.

The ages for this week are 2-9 and the times are from 10-11:30, 11:30-1:00 and 1:00-2:30. You may choose 1-4 days and one, two or three time frames per day. Make sure to send your child with snack/lunch/drinks nut-free and we will make sure that a fun, happy and safe time will be had by all.

The cost is $12 per time session for non-members, $10 per time session for members and if your child will be staying for more than one time session each day, you may deduct $3 per child. For more information call 781-383-3198 or 781-923-1473, send an email to Miss Jen or Miss Julie at ourworldprograms@comcast.net and check out the website for more information as well as our SummerTime Fun Program for you to view and download.

Also, beginning the first week of June and continuing throughout the summer are weekly Summertime Fun Programs for ages 2 and up with anywhere from 2-4 days a week and anywhere from 1-12 weeks to choose from with a variety of themes and times. Contact Our World for more information or print the schedule out from the website at www.ourworld-cgdm.org

Lobstering talk in Cohasset April 28

A talk by Dave Casoni, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Lobsterman's Association, will take place from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on Tuesday, April 28, at the Lightkeepers' Residence, 15 Lighthouse Lane.

Homarus Americanus, the American lobster, is the most widely recognized seafood in the world. Times have changed since the Pilgrims harvested 20-pound-plus specimens from the beach for fertilizer. Today, it's a delicacy. The process of bringing the lobster to the table involves industry, science, managers, conservationists and consumers.

Casoni, a commercial lobsterman, will give an insider's view of the lobster industry, from techniques of harvesting a lobster to managing lobster stocks so they will be here in the future. Those attending the lecture will learn everything about lobstering but were too busy eating to ask. Sorry – lobster will not be served.

Hey there Cohasset! Happy Vacation Week to so many of our children and families around town. I actually feel like Spring is finally here with a few dips in the forecast but anything is better than COLD and SNOW! The last month has been a tricky one for my family and myself and I just want to throw out a huge thank you to all of the friends, family and community workers who have helped us get through this rocky time.

With a bit more time and patience, things should continue to get better for all. Anyone who has any fun stories to share about your vacation week or special moments to talk about, make sure to send them into me for next week or the week after. I want to send out a very special Birthday wish to my daughter, Callie Nicole who is turning 15 years old next week on April 23rd. Callie, your family and friends all love you so much and Dad and I want you to know how special you are. Happy Birthday Coco, we love you!!!

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations go out to Cameron Cunningham, a Cohasset student who completed the Fall 2008 semester being named to the dean's list at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. Nice Work, Cam!

THANK YOU!

A huge thank you goes out to all who made donations of items to the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museums Estate Sale that was held last Saturday. This event was a wonderful success and will definitely be happening again. Money was raised to help the day-to-day costs of the museum to be run as well as helping to purchase some supplies and materials needed within the programs. Thank you also to all who came out and shopped on this fun-filled day.

NEW ARRIVAL

Village eatery has local ties

When Warshaw and her mother retired from the bakery business, Warshaw took a job as an executive pastry chef for a cupcake company. But, by September, she was longing to be her own boss again.

From a friend she heard about Café Zuppa being up for sale, but had a difficult time getting in touch with them. When she finally did get in touch, the two parties' ideas didn't quite match up. Over the winter, the parties talked several times but the timing was never quite right, Warshaw said.

"By March, we were just like 'let's do it,'" said Warshaw. She became the official owner of then-Café Zuppa on March 22.

The restaurant has gotten a facelift in the short few weeks since she passed papers. The exterior of the shop has been repainted a striking rusty orange. A complementary black awning adorned with "5 South Main" was installed outside. Two bistro sets invite patrons to take their sandwiches outside or to stop for a chat.

"I wanted to have the feel of a San Francisco café, but with New England taste — a comfortable place with great light where you can get good value for your money and walk out having had a great experience," said Warshaw. The wi-fi enabled space could be a late afternoon attraction for some working from home

Warshaw also expanded the kitchen and made several interior modifications. The re-entry into the business seems to have been inevitable – she kept one piece of every type of kitchen equipment from the Maggie's Corner Bakery. Now some of that equipment, including the bakery's oven, has found a place at 5 South Main.

The breakfast and lunch menu is filled with comfort food items and traditional fare with a twist. For breakfast there is the standard bacon and eggs, pancakes and breakfast wraps. For the health-conscious there are yogurt parfaits with homemade granola; for the not so health conscience there will be Maggie's baked goods for eat-in or to go.

"I am really looking forward to being back in the community."

— Jennifer Warshaw, 5 South Main

For lunch, Warshaw is expecting the "grilled cheese all grown up" to be a favorite to create and eat. The versatile sandwich can be served as is or with a variety of toppings from bacon to avocado to Italian sausage to Holly Hill Farm grown tomato slices.

Another exciting menu item is artisan pizzas: hand-tossed dough with unique combinations of toppings. One of the specialties will be an old favorite from the former village pizza shop Really Good Pizza (RGP), bacon ranch.

Those longing for a slice of Maggie's Corner chocolate cake or other goodies will be able to get a taste at the new restaurant, "we've brought Maggie out of retirement," Warshaw said with a laugh. Cupcakes literally flew off the shelf this past weekend.

Jennifer Warshaw also an executive pastry chef whose skills can be found in her delectable cupcakes on sale at 5 South Main.

The restaurant opened one week ago with little fan fare or advertising, but plenty of people showed up. Warshaw was heartened by the support of the village community and old bakery friends who stopped by to check out the new restaurant. Cupcakes were serviced

"I am really looking forward to being back in the community," said Warshaw.

Five South Main will be committed to partnering with local businesses and organizations. During the summer and fall they intend to utilize Holly Hill Farm vegetables. They are serving Atlantic Bagel bagels and Hornstra Farms milk.

Despite the economic times, Warshaw is confident her 22-seat restaurant will thrive.

"I'm able to do this because of my great family and great friends…I felt the community would support us in coming back. We wanted to come back, but do it in a different way," said Warshaw.

5 South Main is open 6a.m. to 5p.m. Monday through Saturday and 6:30a.m. to 3p.m. on Sundays.

Q & A

From Your Professionals at Hingham Lumber Company

Question: Is all PVC trim created equal? Some competitors claim that all PVC Trim Boards are the same. So, why not just purchase the cheapest PVC Board available?

Answer: There are several PVC trim products available with varying benefits to the end user. At Hingham Lumber, we sell PVC Trim Boards called Koma®. The reasons for choosing premium Koma Trim Boards are obvious when compared to other PVC products.

- Koma is always uniform in size, not always true for other PVC Trim Boards.
- Koma has the best paint adhesion rating of any PVC Trim Board on the market today. Koma is the only PVC product that Cabot® warrants for adhesion with their paints and stains.
- Koma's sanded surface eliminates flash when filling and sanding nail holes or painting.
- Koma's hard surface reduces dings, dents and damage.
- Koma Trim Boards are readily available in a variety of sizes including panels, and corners.

Symbol of freedom

Oh! say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.
~Francis Scott Key, The Star-Spangled Banner

Although Flag Day is not until June 14 – we think this time of year is apropos to talk about the American flag, a symbol of freedom here and around the world.

Town Meeting, one of the oldest and most venerable forms of democracy, was recently held here in Cohasset, as was our Town Election– both purely American endeavors.

In our travels around the South Shore we have been distressed to see so many tattered American flags being flown. We recently saw a large, badly worn and torn flag flying in Norwell Center by the war memorial.

This past winter has been harsh and we suspect that we can attribute the excessive number of worn flags to the weather. While we fully understand that towns, businesses, schools and homes that fly the flag are trying to do the right thing, a torn flag is not a fitting symbol of our country. The flag should be a source of pride and inspiration.

The U.S. flag code states the flag represents a living country and is itself considered a living thing.

Here in Cohasset, we can thank the American Legion for providing a special box outside the hall on Summer Street where residents can drop off worn flags. The Legion later properly disposes of the flags in a retirement ceremony.

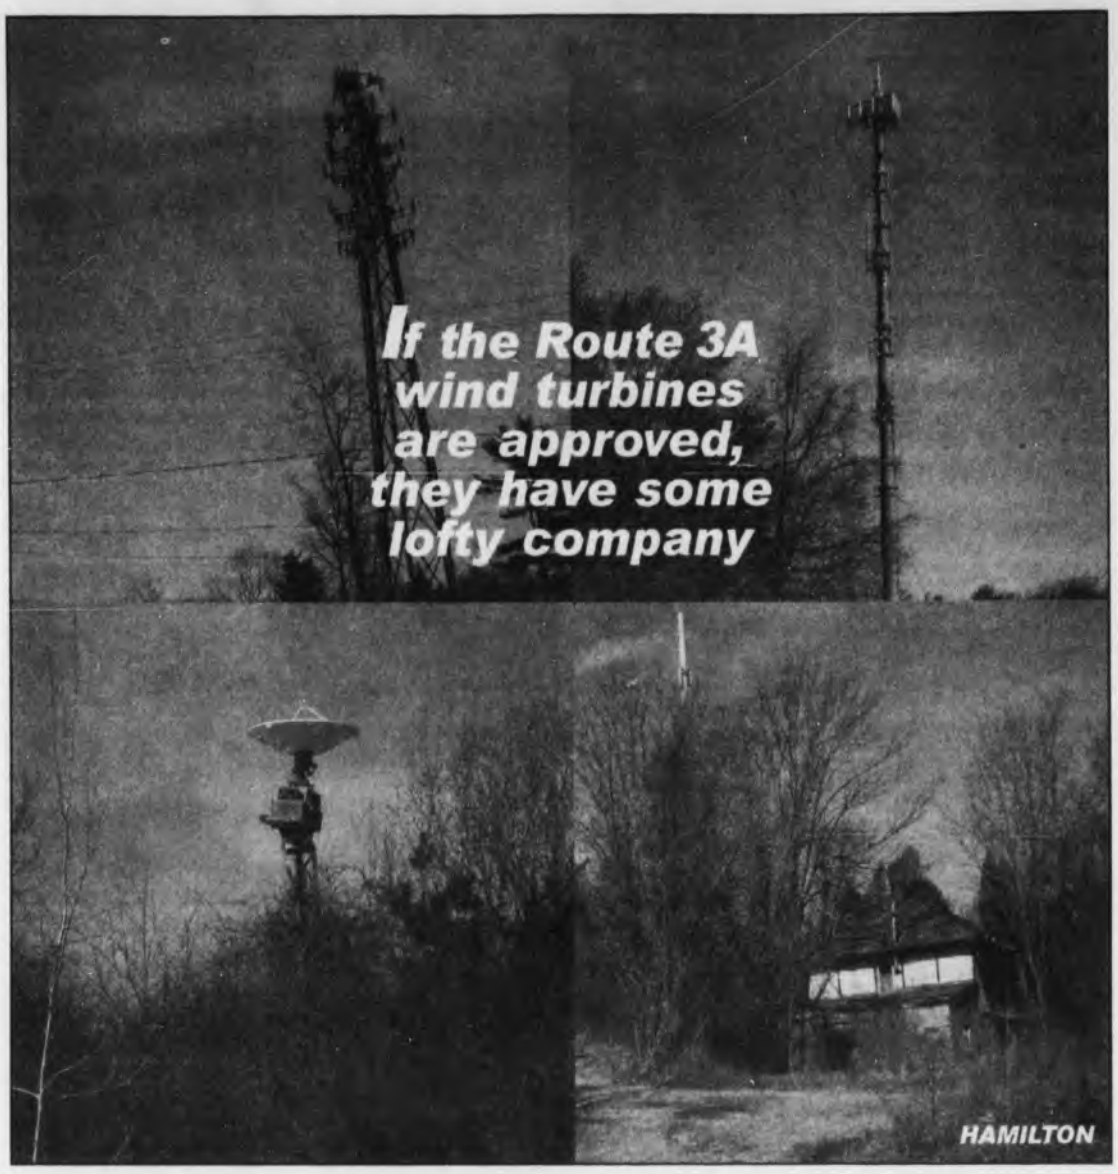
- The Second Continental Congress passed the Flag Resolution of 1777 on June 14, 1777 making the Betsy Ross flag official (13 stars and 13 stripes).
- The composition by John Philip Sousa titled "The Stars and Stripes Forever" is the national march.
- When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall or window, the union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, that is, to the observer's left.
- The first 50-star American flag was raised in 1960 over Fort McHenry in Baltimore, site of Francis Scott Key's writing of "The Star Spangled Banner," our national anthem.
- As of July 4, 2007, the 50-star flag became America's longest serving flag.



Nicknames for our flag include: Old Glory, the Stars and Stripes and the Star Spangled Banner.

But no matter what it is called – the American flag stands for freedom and hope for mankind.

American statesman and historian, Henry Cabot Lodge of Boston, said of our flag: "It is the flag just as much of the man who was naturalized yesterday as of the men whose people have been here many generations."

Arnold Schwarzenegger, Hollywood star and governor of California, said: "As long as I live, I will never forget that day... when I raised my hand and took the oath of citizenship. Do you know how proud I was? I was so proud that I walked around with an American flag around my shoulders all day long."

Cohasset, with its proud history, is an American a town as any. We hope that those who choose to fly the Stars and Stripes around town will give our flag the deep respect it deserves.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Clarifying federal stimulus funds for education

TO THE EDITOR:

On March 19, 2009, Governor Patrick announced the release of $168 million in federal economic stimulus funding to 166 school districts whose education funding did not meet the foundation spending requirements as defined by the Commonwealth's complicated Chapter 70 education funding formula. As a result of this distribution, many cities and towns were left without additional education aid. Many are asking how this happened and whether this funding allocation is final. Let us attempt to clarify this issue.

First, it is important to provide a brief explanation of the Chapter 70 foundation budget.

Chapter 70 is the Commonwealth's program for providing adequate and fair funding for all students in kindergarten through grade 12. Through the use of a complex funding formula, a foundation budget, which represents the minimum spending level needed to provide an adequate education, is calculated for each community or school district. The foundation budget is adjusted each year and reflects changes in a district's enrollment; student demographics (including grade levels, low income status, English proficiency), inflation and geographical wage levels. Finally, the Chapter 70 formula, using a city or town's property values and residents' personal income, determines what portion of education aid is to be funded by local property taxes and by Chapter 70 state aid.

The Governor, in his fiscal year 2010 budget, which was released at the end of January, attempted to protect Chapter 70 education aid from cuts, and thus, level funded education at $3.984 billion. However, due to the precipitous decrease in state revenues caused by the severe economic recession, 166 school districts did not reach their foundation budget. Therefore, he decided to use the economic stimulus funding to make sure these communities reached their foundation levels. However, like the budget, this is simply the Governor's proposal. It still requires legislative approval. Given that many legislators entire districts did not see any funding, we are certain you will see many proposals to change the formula, redistribute the allocations or simply use the funding in another manner.

When the House and Senate take up their budget proposals over the next month, we will get a better sense of how this issue will ultimately be decided. Until then these allocations are proposals and nothing more. We hope this helps clarify this issue.

Garrett Bradley, state Representative, 3rd Plymouth District

Earth Day cleanup April 22

The Cohasset Conservation Trust together with Cohasset High School's Jack Buckley and the Health Department's Tara Tradd are organizing the Second Annual Earth Day.

On the occasion of Earth Day, observed nation-wide on Wednesday, April 22, Cohasset students will meet at the St. Anthony's parking lot at 10:00 and be driven to several clean up sites.

This year, Bassing Beach, Waterfront Park and King Street around the Water Department will be the work sites for the students who pick up the litter which accumulates over the winter.

Motorists along the roadways of the waterfront and King Street should be especially cautious since there will be higher-than-normal perdestrian foot traffic during the clean up which takes several hours.

Signs will be posted on the streets and some students will be wearing flourescent vests. According to Debbie Shadd, chairman of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, this volunteer event involving Cohasset students is a great way to welcome Spring while cleaning up some of the town's properties.

Facebook for parents

By Diane K. Danielson
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Son, it's time we had a little chat."

"Oh gross, Mom, I know all about the sex stuff. I watch 'Animal Planet'."

"No, not that talk."

"Please Mom, I get it … drugs will fry my brains … I've seen the commercials."

"Actually, what I need to talk to you about … is Facebook."

How many of the Digital Immigrants (i.e. born before the Internet was invented) reading this would have an easier time talking about sex and drugs than about Internet safety? Well, you're not alone. But just because it isn't easy, doesn't mean we can't do it. It certainly helps to be familiar with MySpace, Facebook and other new technologies. Yet, even though I've been working with social media since 2003, I still learned a few things in a recent lecture by the DA's office about Internet safety.

First off, there are two important concepts when it comes to kids and the Internet:

1. YOU control your child's access or lack of access to the technology. It is not their personal right to be connected 24/7/365.

2. Even the smartest kid can do stupid things online.

So, where does one begin when it comes to Internet safety? No matter what your level of computer expertise, there are plenty of things you can do regardless of your child's age (and if your child is old enough to play Webkinz, then you need to keep reading).

1. All computers should be in public areas. You want to have the entire family walk by at anytime and see what other family members are doing online.

2. Use parental filters. Comcast provides customers with McAfee Security, which includes parental controls that allow you to block certain sites and set timers. There are other programs you can purchase, like www.netnanny.com, that filter out adult content and chat room/social networking applications.

3. Regularly check the history and temporary Internet file folders of your child's computer. How?

Parents and teens need to realize that college admissions officers, coaches, and future employers are all over social networking sites.

• History files: In Windows Explorer, at the end of the URL address bar at the top is a down arrow. Click on that and it will show you all the sites that your child has been visiting.

• Temporary Internet files: In Windows Explorer, click on "tools," then "Internet options." Find the "browsing history" and click on the "settings" button. Click on "view history."

4. If your child is on Facebook or MySpace, insist that they "friend" you (yes, you need to go get yourself an account) OR another trusted adult. I have a few nieces and nephews who I'm keeping watch over online. Note – the minimum age to have a Facebook account is 13, yet in a recent study out of the UK more than a quarter of 9- to 12-year-olds have lied about their age to join social networking sites.

5. Sit down at the computer with your child. See what videos they're watching on YouTube. Play some of their online games. For older kids, you can even have them teach you something. The key is communicating about computers so that you can more easily discuss Internet safety.

What kind of trouble can Junior get into typing away at the computer keyboard all night long? Basically, there are three biggies you want to prevent:

• Sexting – Sending lewd photos or commentary by text or instant message. Both the sender and the recipient can be prosecuted.

• Cyberbullying – Sending threatening or defamatory messages by text, instant message, through social networking groups, and/or live interactive gaming sites. You'd be surprised what a child might write and send when they feel protected by either online anonymity or hiding behind their keyboard.

• Internet predators – Teens will "friend" strangers on MySpace or Facebook to pump up their popularity. Unfortunately, this leaves open the door for predators to be "invited" into your child's world. Even if they don't come in to the network through your own child, they can get to them through a friend who might have let them into their circle. You want to ensure that your child has the good judgment not take these strangers up on their requests to MIRL (Meet in Real Life).

Hopefully your child will avoid the big three. Nevertheless, as mentioned, your children's' friends are just as likely to involve them in any of the above, whether they are willing participants or not. On top of that, the majority of kids today are posting inappropriate items on their MySpace and Facebook pages. These range from sexy photos, bong hits, sexual innuendos and other things that I couldn't imagine doing, let alone telling people about or posting pictures of.

Parents and teens need to realize that college admissions officers, coaches, and future employers are all over social networking sites. Your child may never know that the reason she didn't get into her college of choice was because she once joined a Facebook group called "I hate [a fellow classmate]." Don't let that be your child.

Old Howard revived in Quincy?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The routine went something like this:

Comic: I'm going to take you to Florida with me.

Girl: Are you going to Orlando with me?

Comic: Yes.

Girl: Are you going to Pensacola with me?

Comic: Yes.

Girl: Are you going to Tampa with me?

Comic: O my am I.

That was the extent of the humor at the Old Howard, the fabled burlesque theater in Boston's Scollay Square, as I recall it from a distance of 60 years.

The Old Howard came to mind the other day when I learned that a group called the Boston Babydolls wants to open a burlesque house and dance studio in North Quincy, and the only thing standing in the way is the city itself.

"The Combat Zone started out with innocent burlesque," said Brian McNamee the city councilor for the district, "and then the next thing you know, there's striptease, prostitutes, drugs and pimps."

I don't know anything about it personally but people told me there was striptease going on at the Old Howard — and the Gaiety, the Casino and the Park — which made Scollay Square the wartime goal of every sailor on shore leave in Boston.

So many Harvard students studied anatomy at 34 Howard Street that Charles Copeland, the eminent Shakespearean scholar, was said to have remarked that the Harvard curriculum concluded "Howard Athenaeum I, II, III and IV."

The founder, the Reverend William Miller, was certain that the world was going to end April 23, 1843, so his flock gathered on hillsides on that date to await their doom. When nothing untoward happened, possession of their church reverted to the laity.

For a while it was a legitimate theater. John Wilkes Booth played there and so did John L. Sullivan, a fledgling actor who was better known for other things. Gradually, the playbill and the clientele changed to vaudeville and burlesque.

The familiar names changed, too — the strippers, Gypsy Rose Lee, Ann Corio, Margie Hart, Lili St. Cyr, Tempest Storm and Sally Keith, the tassel dancer; and the comics, Milton Berle, Eddie Cantor and Red Skelton.

As the ads said, "There's always something doing at the Old Howard, from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m."

The Old Howard was closed in 1953, one of the most prominent victims of the old banned in Boston syndrome that characterized the city for so long. The building was destroyed by fire in 1961 and Scollay Square itself has disappeared under Government Center.

The Babydolls emphasize the dance studio part of their permit application.

"My students are looking for some fun," Miss Mina, a co-founder, told the Globe. "It's good exercise, a fun afternoon out."

They'll know come a Zoning Board hearing next Monday.

Exam anxieties

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Until today it had been a long time since I'd had a physical exam. I wasn't exactly avoiding it, but no news is good news, right? Anyway since I'm still relatively young and healthy it seemed safe to see a doctor, so I made an appointment recently and was asked if I cared who performed the exam. I said no, as long as it wasn't Jack Kevorkian. I'm quite the egalitarian, so when the assigned physician turned out to be a woman I was fine with the idea. After all, women have had to accept the proddings and pokings of male doctors for centuries, except in countries like Afghanistan where they protect women by preventing them from receiving any medical care above the ankles. So I greeted the young doctor stepping into my examining room, took a few deep breaths and put myself in my female friends' shoes for a while, curious to see if I would notice a difference.

Almost immediately I began fretting about my weight.

"Would you step on that scale there, Mr. Lengyel?"

"Oh Sure. I just had lunch though."

"That's fine."

"It was a very filling lunch actually, so you should subtract a pound or two, in your mind at least — My God, is this thing accurate?"

And he was telling her about the treadmill, and that he stays away from very filling lunches. Not so much ham, he was saying.

"As far as I know."

"I'm 10 pounds heavier here than in my bathroom. How is that possible?"

"It isn't."

"Do you have to write that number down? I can take off my jockeys."

"No no, that isn't necessary Mr. Lengyel. Hop up on the table please. I'll be right back."

She left the room and I lay there thinking about the gown I was wearing. I wasn't happy with the color, first of all. I've never looked good in brown. And the humiliating backless design — lately I've felt my backside is not my best side. For the first time in months I wondered what I smelled like. She was taking longer than I expected. What was she doing? No doubt she'd gone off to examine another, more attractive patient. Someone without any of this winter weight, because he had his own treadmill in the basement. "You're in perfect health," she was saying to him. "How do you do it?" And he was telling her about the treadmill, and that he stays away from very filling lunches. Not so much ham, he was saying. And she was nodding her head approvingly and writing everything down. She was literally sketching him in pencil on her medical chart, labeling various glands and organs.

The door opened.

"I was printing out some information for you," she said, "regarding that lipoma on your knee."

"The li-whatta?"

"It's a tumor, actually. But not the bad kind."

I have in fact had a lump on my left knee for a couple of years. Total strangers comment on it. It's that large and odd-looking. But I wasn't overly worried about it because I was too busy worrying about my expired car inspection sticker.

"I'm going to do a hernia test now," she said.

"Oh I never lift a thing," I said, perspiring a little. "I mean, I've done some bench presses, and I plan to do more very soon, but —"

"Would you rather I did a prostate exam?"

"Yes. Assuming that's in my neck."

"You know what?" she said. "You're in perfect health. You can get dressed and go now."

"Really? Oh thank goodness. I knew that scale was off."

"No it's correct, but I predict you'll lose about 10 pounds on the way home."

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset and has now had all his shots.

HEALTH NOTES

Doing our part for the earth

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Earth Day is taking somewhat of a beating nowadays. In the first place nobody knows when it is. Some say it's the Spring Solstice, others mention New Years, etc. But, be assured, April 22 is Earth Day in Cohasset and we'll do what we can to inspire awareness and appreciation for the old balls' environment. It needs all the help we can give it. Earth Day is time not only to assess our success protecting the air, water and land, but also to look to what other steps each of us can take to protect our families and our environment. All around Town, students, homeowners, preservationists and many others are getting out and helping in a big cleanup of the Town and we will make a difference. Here are 10 simple activities you can accomplish which will help to demonstrate the way to a clean environment and a healthy lifestyle:

Replace old-fashioned incandescent light bulbs in your home with newer, long-lasting bulbs. In the long run, you save money on energy bills and help produce fewer greenhouse gases.

Don't burn household debris and yard waste. Backyard fire pits create emissions of hazardous smoke that can contain high levels of dioxins. Instead of burning yard waste, create a compost pile.

Make sure that household chemicals and pesticides are securely stored safely out of reach of children and pets.

Earth Day is time not only to assess our success protecting the air, water and land, but also to look to what other steps each of us can take to protect our families and our environment.

If you're shopping for a new car, consider a hybrid model. Compared to similar cars, you'll get better gas mileage and save money, and your car will produce fewer emissions that create air pollution (including greenhouse gases).

Cohasset offers safe disposal for household toxins. Call the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) 383-0273 before disposing of old household chemicals, cleansers, fertilizer, motor oil, pesticides, batteries, paint or electronics and help to keep potentially hazardous materials out of landfills and from contaminating our soil and water.

When shopping for new appliances for your home, look for the Energy Star label. Only products that are more energy efficient than their peers can earn an Energy Star label. You will save money on energy bills, help reduce demand on power plants and reduce emissions to the air.

When using household cleaning products, pesticides or other chemical products, carefully read the label first to learn how to safely use the product. Never use more than called for in the product's instructions, and always follow any precautions and thus help protect your family, pets and the environment.

Recycle everything you can: paper, cardboard, cans, plastic, glass - even electronics. Find out from the RTF which products they are able to recycle.

Reduce your time driving alone in your car. Carpool as much as possible; combine errands to minimize trips; take public transportation to work, or better yet ride a bicycle or walk. You'll help reduce road congestion, and reduce emissions to the air.

Plant a tree! It gets you outside and doing physical activity. Because trees take in and store carbon, a tree not only provides shade, habitat for birds and wildlife, and beauty, but is a thoughtful legacy left for future generations.

These may be little things, but they are BIG little things.

'Eastwick' on the small screen

Bassing Beach. Warner Brothers, the movie crew and the A-list Hollywood stars literally took over the Cohasset streets and landmarks during the summer of 1986 to make the film.

It's not clear whether Hollywood will call upon the Cohasset's natural beauty and people as its Eastwick backdrop again. There have been no inquiries at the Town Hall to date.

Reported by various entertainment websites, the television pilot will be headlined by supermodel and actress Rebecca Romijn. The remainder of the cast includes Lindsay Price, Jaime Ray Newman and Veronica Cartwright (who had a supporting role in the 1987 movie).

Loosely based on the "Witches of Eastwick" feature film, the television pilot will revolve around three women who discover they have magical powers when a mysterious man comes to town.

According to imdb.com, there was an unsold television pilot of "The Witches of Eastwick" made in 1992. The pilot never made it in front of viewers.

Hollywood also came a calling to Cohasset for the filming of 1992 movie "Housesitter" starring Steve Martin and Goldie Hawn.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on five roll calls from the week of March April 6-10. There were no important roll call votes in the Senate last week.

CHANGES IN TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM (H 4047)

House 147-7, approved a complicated 223-page bill making changes in the state's transportation system. The measure creates a new transportation super agency, the Massachusetts Transportation and Infrastructure Authority (MTIA), run by a five-member board chaired by the governor. It also eliminates the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority. Other provisions include ending the T's policy that allows employees of any age to retire with a full pension after 23 years and replacing it with the same state practice that requires a full pensioner to be at least 55 years old and have put in 25 years of service; transferring MBTA, Tobin Bridge and Mass. Turnpike employees into the state group health insurance program and requiring the Registry of Motor Vehicles (RMV) to notify drivers 30 to 60 days prior to the expiration of their licenses. This would overturn a recent RMV policy that resulted in drivers no longer being mailed a notice when it is time to renew their driver's license. Supporters said that this long overdue reform measure would cut waste, end duplication, streamline the state's entire transportation system and save billions of dollars. Opponents said that the bill favors Boston residents, does not go far enough to reform outrageous salary, pension and health care benefits and questioned the claims of billions of dollars in savings. They argued that the bill is part of a so-called reform movement that is approving weak reform but will soon go back to the taxpayers and say that the gas tax must be raised. The Senate has approved a different version of the measure and a conference committee will soon hammer out a compromise version. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

NO TOLL HIKES WITHOUT LEGISLATIVE APPROVAL (H 4047)

House 20-135, voted mostly along party lines and rejected a Republican-sponsored amendment prohibiting any tolls hikes unless they are approved by the Legislature on a roll call vote. Only four Democrats joined the chamber's 16 Republicans and voted in favor of the measure. Amendment supporters said that the elected Legislature, not a faceless, appointed transportation authority, should have the final say on whether their constituents should pay higher tolls. They said the giving the authority unilateral power to raise tolls is irresponsible and unfair to taxpayers. Amendment opponents said that the Legislature should not micromanage the new transportation authority and noted that the Legislature is less likely to raise tolls. They noted that requiring legislative approval would be a concern to bondholders and could lower the authority's credit rating. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment prohibiting any tolls hikes unless they are approved by the Legislature. A "No" vote is against requiring legislative approval).

NO NEW TOLLS WITHOUT LEGISLATIVE APPROVAL (H 4047)

House 33-121, rejected a GOP-sponsored amendment prohibiting any new tolls from being implemented unless they are approved by the Legislature. The Republicans were joined by 17 Democrats who voted in favor of the proposal. Amendment supporters said that this would ensure that there are no new tolls implemented on roads currently without tolls unless the Legislature approves them. They argued that the Legislature is accountable to voters and should have the final say on new tolls. Amendment opponents said that the Legislature should not dictate toll policies to this newly-created and reformed transportation authority. They argued that giving the Legislature this power would hurt the credit rating of the authority. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment prohibiting any new tolls from being implemented unless they are approved by the Legislature. A "No" vote is against requiring legislative approval).

House 122-32, approved an amendment that would continue the fast lane transponder toll discount and the toll discount programs for residents of East Boston, South Boston, the North End, Charlestown and Chelsea. The amendment also requires that all revenue received from tolls be used "exclusively for the payment of existing debt service on the tolled roads and the cost of owning, maintaining, repairing, reconstructing, improving, rehabilitating, policing, using, administering, controlling and operating said tolled roads." Amendment supporters said that the toll discounts were eliminated in the version of the bill recommended by the House Ways and Means Committee and noted that this amendment ensures that they continue. They argued that tolls should be used solely for the benefits of the highway, bridge or tunnel from which it is collected. Some amendment opponents said that these toll discount programs only help Boston and Chelsea residents and cost the system some $12 million while making residents west of Route 128 prime targets for toll hikes. Others said that using tolls only for the highway, bridge or tunnel on which they are collected will result in insufficient revenue to pay off Big Dig debt because some of that toll revenue is currently used to reduce that debt. They argued that this would lead to the need for more revenue and a hike in the gas tax. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment continuing the toll discounts and using tolls for the structure on which they are collected. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

BEYOND 9 P.M.

House 133-22, suspended rules to allow the House to meet beyond 9 p.m. and continue until midnight if necessary. Supporters of rule suspension said that it is important to remain in session to finish action on the very important transportation reform bill. Opponents of rule suspension said that it is irresponsible for the House to act on bills late at night when taxpayers are asleep. The session continued and eventually adjourned at 11:55 p.m. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing the session to continue beyond 9 p.m. A "No" vote is against continuing beyond 9 p.m.).

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote

Energy audit coming down the line

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The state energy audit is fairly extensive and could give the town valuable insight into where its buildings could be more energy efficient or even harness alternative energy to cut down on costs.

When someone says the word audit, it usually isn't a good thing especially around tax deadline day April 15. But in the case of Cohasset an audit — and energy audit, that is — could be a very good thing.

With a vote of the Board of Selectmen Monday night, Cohasset will submit an application to the state for an energy audit. The audit, a requirement to be eligible for the state Green Communities Program, could open the town up for a variety of energy grants and funding.

"It's a win-win on every side," said Judeth van Hamm, the town's consultant on alternative energy. The energy audit is a state-funded program and it will not cost the town to participate.

The audit is integrated with the requirements of the Green Communities Program, so that signing up for the audit meets one of the criteria for obtaining funding from the state as part of the Green Communities Act.

The state energy audit is fairly extensive and could give the town valuable insight into where its buildings could be more energy efficient or even harness alternative energy to cut down on costs. It will include a list of energy conservation projects, their costs and estimated energy savings. When and where feasible, clean technology opportunities will also be identified.

According to a notice sent to the town from the state department of energy resources, this audit information can then be used to support a future application to utility rebate programs, potential state funding or to justify a municipal bond funded improvement program. Only towns that have completed an energy audit are eligible for potential state funding. Up to $5 million of total grant funding may be available in the program, according to the notice.

The audit will update and expand the energy use information already collected. It will cover energy uses beyond the seven main buildings; for example, it will also look all electrical meters.

Unlike previous energy audits performed by the gas and electric companies, the state energy audit will look at additional energy conservation options, such as insulation.

The audit will also conduct feasibility studies for clean technology that the community may consider, such as geothermal, where applicable.

"It is a huge service," van Hamm said.

The timing of Cohasset's energy audit, which could be a year from now, might work to their advantage, Van Hamm said.

"The state and federal programs are being shaped up right now so it's likely more funding will be available a year from now," said van Hamm.

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson said the proposed new Senior Center building could incorporate energy efficiencies and alternative energy elements.

The Water Department was required to abandon wells (at least for drinking water purposes) located behind the Cohasset Swim Center when the Greenbush line was restored. One of the ideas being floated around is to use the water from the wells to heat and cool the new senior center.

Van Hamm said the scheme could be a prime candidate for a feasibility study.

"It's the perfect location for that," said Carlson.

Keeping Cohasset fiscally focused

Budget planning committee could be formed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"The concept here is to have a committee get together and try to form a longer term budget process, thinking two to three years out."
— Sam Wakeman, Advisory Committee

The Fiscal 2010 budget is set in stone for the upcoming year, but some people in town are already thinking about next year's budget, and the year after that and so on.

A proposal to establish a "budget planning committee" was expected to be before the Board of Selectmen on Thursday evening after the Mariner went to press.

Advisory Committee Sam Wakeman would like to see the town be more proactive in the budget process and start to think and discuss what could be coming down the line two or even three years from now.

"It became evident starting in December with the state budget cuts, threats and lack of information that as a town we were forced into a guessing game," said Wakeman in a phone interview. With revenue projection on the local level more difficult to predict and the state local aid numbers in flux, Wakeman said the town had to make decisions as to how to reduce services to balance the budget in a short amount of time.

"The concept here is to have a committee get together and try to form a longer term budget process, thinking two to three years out," said Wakeman. While the committee and the town will still have to make assumptions about revenue, they can draw up models of the worst-case, expected case and best-case scenarios. From there the town can begin to have a discussion about what those assumptions would mean for the municipality from cutting services to entertaining an override.

"We want to have a proactive conversation on what can be difficult issues," said Wakeman.

The idea of establishing a long-range budget planning committee has been discussed briefly on two different occasions leading up to Town Meeting. Selectman Karen Quigley suggested it to the board during a Selectmen comment period in February. Wakeman brought forth a similar concept in March asking the board to commission a committee to look at develop long-range budget policies and scenarios.

According to a memo drafted for the meeting, the committee would have six key objectives: establish fiscal policies, monitor fiscal policies, create a long range budget process, review and monitor budget process, revise budget and process as needed, and look for and recommend efficiencies from inter-department cooperation.

The members of the group would be representatives from boards already deeply involved in the budget process. Two members from each of the following committees would participate on the Budget Planning Group: Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, School Committee and Capital Budget Committee.

While Wakeman recognizes these residents would have to do additional work beyond their own committee responsibilities, he said it was vital for those groups to be represented.

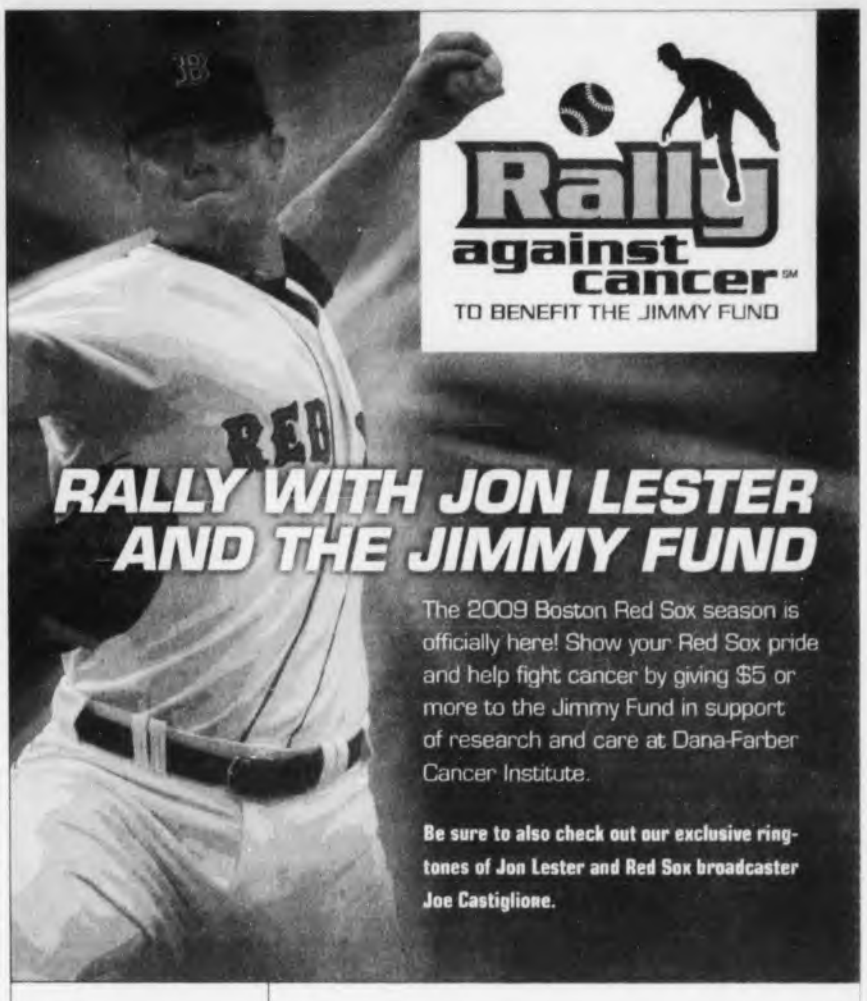
"These people are in the best position to know what is happening on their committee. Their input is critical to these issues," said Wakeman.

See next week's Mariner or www.wickedlocalcohasset.com for an update on this issue following the Board of Selectmen's Thursday meeting.

Help needed for Open Space update!

Come to one of two Stakeholder Meetings on Wednesday, April 29, at 6:30 p.m., or Thursday, April 30, at 10 a.m., in the auditorium at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

The Town of Cohasset is currently updating the Open Space and Recreation Plan and needs the help of residents. What do you consider to be Cohasset's most attractive landscape or natural feature? How should open space be further protected, preserved and managed in Cohasset? Should it be? What would you like the Open Space and Recreation Plan Committee to focus on in the next five years? These are some of the questions that we would like to hear from you about.



Come to one of two Stakeholder Meetings on Wednesday, April 29, at 6:30 p.m., or Thursday, April 30, at 10 a.m., in the auditorium at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

The Cohasset Open Space and Recreation Plan Committee has been hard at work with assistance from consultant Beals and Thomas Inc. to update the 2002-2006 Open Space and Recreation Plan. The updated Open Space and Recreation Plan will incorporate the community's ideas with an analysis of current trends to create a vision of open space and recreation and goals for the future.

The overall Open Space and Recreation Plan will be updated in compliance with the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, Division of Conservation Services regulations. Once the plan is completed and approved by DCS, Cohasset will be eligible for specific types of grant funding that currently the town cannot apply for because the 2002-2006 Open Space and Recreation Plan has expired.

The most important element in the Open Space and Recreation Plan Update process is the input of residents. The updated Open Space and Recreation Plan will include a description of the town's natural resources, demographics and an inventory of recreation and open space facilities and properties in Cohasset. Additionally, the plan will include goals and action items for the next five years. Much of this information will come from public input. Call Kristen Wilson, Beals and Thomas Inc. at 508-366-0560 for information, comments and if planning on attending one of the sessions.

Endowment Wall honors library donors

The Cohasset Library Trust recently installed an Endowment Donor Wall in the library entry. The wall honors the more than 20 persons who have, over more than 100 years, made significant gifts to the library. These gifts have created the library's endowment. Some gifts have been bequests in a donor's will; others have been gifts from friends or family to memorialize or honor individuals. From time to time, the Library Trust plans to offer short sketches of the persons whose names are on the Donor Wall.

In 1908, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on South Main Street had been open just five years. In that year, Alice Appleton Knowles, a longtime summer resident, died at the age of 54. In her will, she left the Cohasset Public Library the equivalent of $45,000 in today's money. Her gift was in memory of her parents, Francis P. and Harriet W. Appleton, also Cohasset summer residents. The income of the gift was to be used to purchase books "of history and biography in English or foreign languages." In an era in which few women were educated beyond high school, her generous gift added substance to the library's early collection. For 100 years, the income from her fund has been used to purchase books of history and biography for the library. In each has been placed a bookplate that says "This Book Donated by the Alice Appleton Knowles Fund." In this fiscal year, 17 books were purchased with the income from her gift.

The library gift was in the company of other significant gifts by the Knowles family. The granite watering-trough for horses located on the corner of Beach Street and Atlantic Avenue was a gift in memory of her husband, Henry Miles Knowles, who died in 1903. This was the only stone horse trough in Cohasset, and is inscribed "In Memory of Henry Miles Knowles October 29 1850 July 13 1903." When no longer useful as a watering trough, it became a lovely planter, which the Cohasset Garden Club maintains year-round.

Henry Knowles was in the paper business and his son worked for St. Croix Paper Company at the time of his mother's death. A Tiffany window at the Arlington Street Church in Boston was also given in Henry M. Knowles' memory.

According the 1900 Census, Henry and Alice Knowles lived at 326 Beacon Street, Boston, with their four children and three servants, and at 136 Atlantic Avenue, on the corner of Meadow Lane, in Cohasset in the summer. Her parents summered across the street at 143 Atlantic Avenue in a house that was replaced in 2000. Her son John became a year-round Cohasset resident, with a house on Jerusalem Road. Her grandson Robert also lived in Cohasset on Border Street.

Alice Appleton Knowles is listed as a benefactor on the Endowment Donor Wall.

The Cohasset Library Trust was established to increase and prudently manage the library's endowment. Tax support of the library has been declining as a percentage of Cohasset's budget for at least a decade. New gifts to the Cohasset Library Trust will join old gifts to assure the continued quality of this town treasure. A gift of $5,000 to the library trust earns listing on the new Endowment Wall.

Tidal flow should help harbor

Culvert project to get under way

In the fall of 2004, in an attempt to improve tidal exchange and reduce bacterial pollution in Cohasset Harbor the Conservation Commission and Harbor Health Committee sought to reopen the historic connection between the Gulf River and Bailey's Cove.

When excavated the corrugated metal culvert was not blocked but had collapsed dashing hopes for cleaner harbor waters and for the restoration of the small salt-marsh marsh known locally as the Parker Avenue Cut.

Then in 2006 state and federal agencies including Coastal Zone Management (CZM), NOAA National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) Habitat Conservation Division, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the non-governmental organization Conservation Law Foundation (CLF), came to the rescue providing technical assistance as well as identifying and pursuing grant opportunities that, in combination with local funding from Cohasset's CPC (Community Preservation Committee), enabled the project to go forward.

In 2007 Cavanarro Consulting conducted the feasibility, engineering and permitting phase, and in 2008 the project was permitted. This was greatly facilitated by a town/agency partnership that ensured goals and any potential permitting issues were identified and addressed through an interactive and consensus based process.

During the summer of 2008, the students at the Center for Student Coastal Research conducted pre-construction monitoring as part of a CZM Saltmash Restoration Grant.

Nearly five years later, the construction phase has finally begun. Over the next three weeks Cali Corp. will block tidal flow with metal plates and insert an elliptical concrete culvert. Headwalls and riprap will prevent erosion.

The expectation is that increased tidal flow between the Harbor and the Gulf will improve the health of Cohasset Harbor, and restore the salt-marsh's native grasses and wildlife. The hope is that increased inundation will have a negative effect on the invasive phragmities along the edge of Government Island.

Other ongoing coastal restoration projects, which affect Cohasset's coastal waters include the West Corner culvert to Straits Pond, the James Brook/Jacobs Meadow culvert, and the tide gates at Musquashcut Pond and Cat Dam.

This summer, visit Cohasset Harbor, stand on the wooden walkway and enjoy the new and improved view!

Border Street will be closed for several days during construction. Information is available on the Town's website.

Organic gardening skills at Holly Hill Farm

On April 18 from 9 a.m. to noon at Holly Hill Farm on 236 Jerusalem Road, the Northeast Organic Farming Association/ Massachusetts Chapter (NOFA/Mass) is holding a workshop on how to start and maintain successful organic gardens. The event is part of the Massachusetts Organic Gardening Workshop Day, which is designed to meet the recent resurgence of energy and action for backyard and community gardening. Similar events will be held in 12 other towns and cities throughout the state.

The Holly Hill Farm's managers, Hannah Hobbs and Ben Wolbach, will be teaching the workshop.

Topics that will be covered at the workshop include: starting garden beds, seed starting, organic soil fertility, organic soil amendments, mulches and cover crops, weeds, disease and pests, what to plant when, crop spacing, and succession cropping. Workshop participants are also strongly encouraged to bring their own questions to the workshops.

Workshop organizers say that the level of interest in gardening has never been as high as it is now in their own living memory. In 1943, however, in the midst of shortages related to World War II, nearly a third of all the vegetables consumed in the United States came from Victory Gardens, which were small plots planted in neighborhood spaces.

Julie Rawson, NOFA/Mass executive director and leader of another workshop in Worcester, said, "Sharing the knowledge people need to grow their own food has been the mission of NOFA since it began more than 30 years ago. Today, with the economic and ecological crises that we're in, I think a lot of people are once again turning toward backyard gardening as more than a hobby; it is also something essential for our well-being."

Cohasset boys tennis stuns Hingham

Doubles team notches winning point

On a cool windy day at the Milliken Courts on Tuesday the Boys Varsity Tennis Team wielded hot hands and shocked undefeated powerhouse Hingham 3-2.

Junior Mike Filbey got things started and scored the first point for the Skippers at Third Singles outwitting Hingham's Oliver Alderman with an array of topspins, slices and lobs 6-2, 6-4.

Hingham coach Bob Johnson did not seem overly concerned as strong play by his steady, experienced senior, Sanjay Rau led him past Skipper captain Dan Brady at the No. 2 singles, 6-2, 6-2. The top ranked Hingham first doubles team of Ryan Johnson and John Ripple outslugged Cohasset's Robbie Hill and captain Ivan Sceery 6-2, 6-4 while captain Victor Hartmann lost the first set to Chandler Semjen.

Sophomores Will Choi and Travers Craven lost a painful tiebreaker in the first set at second doubles.

Then the momentum changed.

Hartman kept his focus and relentlessly pounded heavy ground strokes to split sets with Semjen.

Craven and Choi kept their cool and snuck out the second set 7-5.

Suddenly it was a dogfight.

Hartmann played the best third set of his varsity career and displayed brilliant shot making, steel nerves, and much improved endurance to knock off Semjen 6-4 in the third to tie the match at two points each.

All eyes moved to the second doubles match. Cohasset trailed 5-4.

Choi and Craven fought off two match points and broke serve to tie the third set at five-all.

Both Craven and Choi attacked at the net and hit four winners in a row to move ahead 6-5.

Choi hit five of six first serves in the next game to hold serve and win the match 7-5 and took the third and pivotal point for Cohasset.

On Monday Cohasset defeated Carver 5-0 in league play with Hartmann, Brady, and Hill winning at singles and Garret Canney, Will Choi, Travers Craven, and Mike Filbey winning at doubles.

The team is now 3-2 (2-0 in league play) with Hingham and Scituate behind them.

Cohasset rides wave

Softball team beats Abington for first time in years

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset softball team took the experience gained by a close loss to perennial power East Bridgewater two weeks back and put it to good use in its next few games.

The extra confidence that came with knowing they could play with the best carried over as Cohasset beat Abington 6-2 last Thursday, and 11-1 on Monday.

The Lady Skippers improved to 5-1 with the wins.

Cohasset coach Rob Spofford said the Abington win was a big accomplishment.

"That was the first time Cohasset has beaten Abington since I've been watching them," Spofford said. "And I've been watching for seven years. Some people said it was up to 20 years. I don't know about that, but this was a great win for the program."

"I don't like to use the word rebuilding, but this is kind of a rebuiling year,"
Veteran Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan

Don't let the numbers fool you.

Yes, after seven matches, the Cohasset girls tennis team checks in at 4-3, but the more important number shows a 3-0 mark in the South Shore League, and two losses to Division 1 Hingham.

That is a good sign for longtime coach Gigi Meehan.

"I don't like to use the word rebuilding, but this is kind of a rebuiling year," Meehan said about the team that was in the state's final four last year. "We lost a lot of seniors to graduation this year."

This year Cohasset has a new senior presence, with eight on the team, including five senior captains.

Captains include Lauren Allen, who plays second singles, Fiona McBride, a utility player who plays both singles and doubles, Maggie McGoldrick, a first doubles regular, Kate O'Callaghan, who also plays in several spots, and Jean Thomae, who plays doubles.

Junior Maddy Altholz leads the charge from the first singles spot.

"Maddy played third singles last year," Meehan said. "Last year she was 42-1 in third singles. She gained a lot of match experience there. On almost any other team she would have been No. 1 last year. Now she's doing great."

Altholz is 5-2 so far, with both losses to Hingham.

"It's been a little tough because both of her losses have been to her best friend," Meehan said. "Roberta Bergstein beat her twice. When they play anything can happen. On paper it's 50-50 who's going to win."

The highlight of her season may have been against Notre Dame Academy.

"Maddy's biggest win was probably against Jill McQuiggen. Jill was undefeated last year at No. 2. That was a big win."

Making the win even bigger was the fact that both doubles teams won to give Cohasset a 3-2 win.

Altholz also beat Scituate's Kate O'Connor for the team's one win in a 4-1 loss to an outstanding Scituate squad.

Allen has won all her matches at second singles this season, after moving up from doubles last year.

Thomae has done well in doubles.

"Jean has had some big wins for us," Meehan said. "She's a dynamite doubles player."

High scoring offense leads to fast start

WWASSERS@CNC.COM

"We start early with a shock and awe style."
Cohasset coach Shannon Curran

When a team can score a lot of goals and play decent defense, it usually finds itself on the winning end.

That's been the case for a young Cohasset girls lacrosse team this season.

The girls have been netting goals regularly, and after a 19-5 win over Mashpee and a 16-5 win over Quincy on Monday, Cohasset was 5-0 before Thursday's showdown with Duxbury.

"We have a really solid attack," said first-year head coach Shannon Curran. "That's our strongest point. We have a good shooting percentage. Our seniors really set up our juniors to score."

Katie Gaumer led the way with three goals and two assists, while Mahoney added three scores and one helper.

Lindsay Hill had a pair of goals and an assist and Erler and Angela Cipolla both had two goals.

Kayla Farren, Alison Whelan, Amy Meikleham, Franklin and Grace Clougherty all scored single goals.

Madeline Leahy led all players in the midfield with 8 draw controls and 2 caused turnovers.

Curran has been pleased so far, even when the defense starts slowly.

"Our attack keeps us competitive early," she said. "We start early with a shock and awe style. Then the defense settles in."

Curran, who played and coached at UMass Dartmouth, said coming to Cohasset was an easy choice.

"The feeder program is so strong here that I know we're only going to need a few years to become a force in Division 2."

She also knows the boys coach.

"My uncle Stew is the boys coach," she said. "My whole family plays."

Curran's goal for this team is more than just winning.

"Every day I'm trying to get them to believe that they're as good as I know they are," she said. "I want them to recognize themselves and the fact that they can go as far as they want to."

Cohasset played Duxbury yesterday and will have a break through vacation.

"This is my first year," Curran said. "So I wasn't here to make schedules or keep everyone around. A lot of players are going away. Next year will be different. We'll be scheduling some games. A week off in the middle of the season is tough. We will still have practice for the girls who are here."

GRADE: Senior (Captain)
POSITION: Forward
STATS: A scoring machine for the Dragons throughout his career, Brust averaged 26.4 points per game this season, in which he eclipsed the 1,000-point plateau. A terrific shooter and ball-handler, Brust was a game-changer and big-shot player. A two-time PL All-star, Brust graduates [illegible] career points.

NAME: Matt Devine
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Center
STATS: Devine scored his 1,000th career point in his team's Division [illegible] a triple-double and averaging over 15 rebounds. Devine was also a team leader and defensive force on a young squad. He was a key factor in his team's 12-6 record that included a 12-game win streak that carried into the tournament. In Pembroke's finale, a 41-39 semifinal loss to Abington, Devine led all scorers with 15 points

NAME: Rodney Beldo
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Guard
STATS: A dynamic guard, Beldo was instrumental in getting Scituate to the Division 3 South Sectional Final. Beldo scored his 1,000th career points against Randolph in January. One highlight this season was his 37-point beauty in a tournament semifinal game against No. 1 seeded Wareham. Beldo also had 23 points, including a back-breaking three against a powerful Duxbury team in February. He averaged 19 points and six assists over the season.

SECOND TEAM

NAME: Brian Kurowski
SCHOOL: Abington
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: The senior forward was the Green Wavas' top defender, averaging14 points per game and was instrumental in guiding the Green Wave to the South Shore League championship and Div. 3 South title. Coach Don Byron called Brian: "an important member of our team. He is a two-year starter and one of our captains. He usually covers the opposing team's top scorer on the perimeter and still manages to get his share of the scoring."

GRADE: Senior
POSITION: [illegible]

NAME: CJ Taylor
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Guard
STATS: This two-year starter and Patriot League All-star was among the leading scorers on the team, averaging 17 points per game. Taylor tallied 19 points in a win over D-R in the Mansfield Tourney, guiding the Harbormen to the title game, where he scored nine and was named to the All-Tourney Team.

Kelly and Carly Salerno hit back-to-back homers in the fourth inning and pitcher Kelly Naeglin helped her own cause with a grand slam in the fifth.

Kelly's homerun gave Cohasset a 1-0 advantage, but when Abington's center fielder Kendra Fisher crashed into the fence and didn't get right back up, there was no real celebration as Kelly ran the bases.

One batter later, with Fisher up and telling everyone she would have caught it without a fence, Salerno hit one to the same spot in dead center, but higher and longer for a 2-0 lead.

After her comment, Spofford jokingly said his team could deliver another chance, calling the shot for Salerno.

"I complimented that player," Spofford said. "I have to tip my hat for someone who go so hard that she's hit the fence. I told her that's the way to play the game. I have to compliment a player so willing to make the play."

Kelly finished with three hits.

Spofford said he expected his team to score some runs.

"We knew we could get to their pitcher," he said. "She was a little off-speed. Once we've been through the lineup and seen her we felt we could hit her.."

The key was pitch selection.

"I told the girls to look middle-out," he said. "They were pitching the girls away. I said to take what the pitcher was giving. They did. That's a sign of good hitting. The three homeruns were hit to center, and right field. Kelly (Naeglin) went the opposite field."

Naeglin's blast was the kicker.

"That deflated them," Spofford said of the grand slam that gave Cohasset a 6-0 lead. "It changed the momentum. Two runs isn't a lot, but when you have a pitcher with Kelly's ability it makes it bigger."

Kelly, Salerno and Naeglin, hitting in the 3-4-and five spots have combined for seven bombs and 25 RBI in six games.

"The 3-4-and five hitters have really delivered for me," Spofford said. "And the girls ahead of them have been getting on base."

Through six games, Cohasset is batting .343 as a team and has scored 57 runs on 61 hits.

"We're hitting the ball well," Spofford said. "We hope to continue it."

While Spofford is pleased with the way his team is playing, he knows there's still room for improvement.

"We still have a issues on the defensive side," he said. "We've allowed 15 runs, but only two have been earned. I won't dismiss a 5-1 start. The girls have worked hard and they're very committed. We've got good pitching and hitting, but there are still things to work on. We have to cut down on the unearned runs to be a championship caliber team."

Fortunately, the errors have mostly been simple mistakes, not mental errors.

"The errors we're making are the kind we can work on with repetition and practice," Spofford said. "We're not making a lot of mental mistakes. We're making the right plays. I can't complain about it when the mistakes are just physical."

That said, Spofford knows if the errors can be cut down, his team can be a force.

"In the past if Cohasset made these errors they's be 0-5," he said. "With the pitching and hitting we have we've mostly been able to cover them."

One more reason for the early success has been the play of some of the younger players.

"The younger players have been coming around," Spofford said. "And Brittany Dunn has been a pleasant surprise. She's worked hard on her game."

Cohasset was at Harwich yesterday and will host a tournament with Avon, Pembroke and Randolph Friday and Saturday next week.

Save the date for CYSBA parade

The Cohasset Youth Softball and Baseball Association will hold its annual opening day parade and ceremony on Saturday, May 2.

All teams will gather in the vicinity of the Town Common Pond at approximately 8 a.m. and start the parade at 8:15.

The players and their coaches will proceed down North Main Street to Barnes Field where we will hold our opening ceremonies.

The Major League champions in softball and baseball from 2007 will be honored as part of the ceremony. This is a time-honored tradition and special event that brings out fans young and old.

Mark the date on your calendar and check back to the CYBSA website for more information as the event draws near.

Come and learn a new sport this summer, on the beautiful water surrounding Cohasset! Get a group together, we'll introduce the art and beauty of rowing, provide trained cox'ns and coaching and a lot of fun. Our sliding seat 4's are fast, stable and built for ocean rowing. There are early morning and early evening time slots throughout the week; all morning time slots on weekends. Specific times and all information/applications are posted on the CMI website: www.rowcmi.com. CMI also has Alden Shells for more experienced rowers as well as traditional rowing dories to get out and explore the harbor. We plan to have clinics for members to develop the skills and gain experience on the Aldens . So come check us out Sunday April 26th, 1-3 p.m. at the boathouse. Ted Williams League starting new teams

The Ted Williams Baseball League , a Massachusetts "not for profit organization", is seeking to start a 9-10 year old team in your town this spring. The Ted Williams League (TWL) has drawn local and national attention for its ability to create a children's sports environment that it believes to be much safer than that of traditional formats. The pilot program which began in September of 1997, based on a ten year study, now hosts eight divisions of players ranging in age from 5 to 50. The TWL divisions that host players, ages 8 -12, have decreased hit batters by 48 percent and in 11 season's of play have never had a single case of ' Little League Elbow .' (Little League Elbow, is a documented medical condition effecting 20 - 40 percent of all players this age.)

The TWL evaluates all players and then places them on teams in divisions by their ability rather than by their age. Therefore, the 9 -10 year old age bracket should be viewed as an "average age bracket."

Parents with players younger or older than 9 or10 that feel they would fit better in this division are encouraged to be evaluated.

The league is hoping to field teams in this division from six to twelve local towns.

All teams that play in our ten game spring season will automatically be invited to play in our first TWL summer tournament. The cost to play in the league is $99 per player and there is no evaluation fee. Any family that has not registered their players this spring for baseball due to the stress of our economic times should contact the Ted Williams League for information on having their player fees waived.

The league is also seeking parents, coaches and umpires that are interested in volunteering or becoming certified in any one or more of the leagues operating positions. For evaluation dates and additional information please call: (781) 293-2700 or email us at; tedwilliamsleague@yahoo.com

Last season, Thomae paired with Allen regularly.

There's more of a mix for her this year.

"Jean has played with five different partners this year," Meehan said. "She keeps playing well."

Danielle Sookiasian will get time on the court this season in both singles and doubles.

"Yesterday Danielle went three sets against Hingham," Meehan said. "She didn't win, but she hung in there. She was impressive."

Another combination that has been working is McGoldrick and Jenny Magruder. That teaming is 4-0 so far.

Tina D'Antonio has impressed and Ellie Baumgarten has looked strong.

"Ellie is a champion figure skater," Meehan said. "Between skating championships I think we'll see her get some matches."

Jenny Cahill should see playing time and Margaux Donze will play as well.

"Margaux played some doubles with Jean and we're trying to get her some singles," Meehan said. "She's someone to keep an eye on."

One thing that Meehan enjoys are numbers.

"We have 25 girls in the program," she said. "We never had cuts. If you want to play here you'll play. You never know who might emerge."

As an example, Meehan pointed to basketball star Sammi Lehr.

"Sammi never played tennis before," she said. "She came out this year and she's doing great."

The team is off this week for spring break.

Students thrilled with vacation week

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

With 22 school days left on the calendar for the seniors, it is with great excitement and sadness that I mention that I must soon depart from CHS and move on to bigger things.

Hello everyone! I hope you all had a wonderful Easter full of chocolate eggs and marshmallow Peeps. In addition to Easter-related festivities, there was a lot more that happened this week, especially up at the high school. This past Tuesday was the 6th annual PSO Telethon, and thanks to the efforts and contributions of the PSO and the community, we successfully raised over $2,000! Congrats to everyone involved! More big news up at the high school was that Wednesday this week was a half-day, meaning that we got out at 11:30 on a beautiful, sunny day while the teachers stayed and had meetings; fun for students, not so much for teachers. The band, however, didn't take a day off, for their "Jazz Night" was also this past Wednesday. Under the direction of Mrs. Moriarty, the jazz band swung into musical success with their beautiful music. Great job, band! The best news of all, though, is that next week is vacation. I think it is safe to say that many students (regardless of whether you're going to Belize, Italy, or simply staying home) are thrilled.

With 22 school days left on the calendar for the seniors, it is with great excitement and sadness that I mention that I must soon depart from CHS and move on to bigger things. This being the case, it is only necessary that I pass on my torch of wisdom and communication to a well deserving "senior-to-be." Who will this unknown soul be? It is a mystery that even I have yet to solve, but I promise you that a decision will be made. That being said, if anyone has any thoughts or suggestions as to who should take over the civil duty as "Life at CHS" author for next year, please do not hesitate to let me know. And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend and a great vacation! And to all those going away on a school trip to either Italy or Belize, be safe and have fun! Vaarwel!

Springtime in Montreal - From Beatles to vinyl

Ed Symkus
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

MONTREAL — You don't have to be a Beatles fan to enjoy Montreal this spring, but it wouldn't hurt. In commemoration of the 40th anniversary of the famous John Lennon-Yoko Ono Bed-In for Peace, the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts is hosting a free show "Imagine: The Peace Ballad of John & Yoko," through June 21.

The Bed-In happened at The Queen Elizabeth hotel in Montreal, May 26 to June 1, 1969. John and Yoko stayed in bed for a week to protest war, inviting press and celebrities, including comedian Tommy Smothers and drug guru Timothy Leary, to join them. They recorded "Give Peace a Chance" in their hotel room on May 31.

The new exhibit is a spectacular, multi-room remembrance, featuring music, photographs, posters and experimental films. There are even recreations of some of Ono's mid-'60s installations from the Indica Gallery in London, where she and Lennon met. Hardcore Lennon-Ono fans will get a kick out of a white ladder that leads up to a tray, from which hangs a magnifying glass, and a hammer hanging from a white board next to a tray of nails — there for the banging (it's one of the pieces that allegedly got Lennon fascinated with artist Ono).

I certainly had a flashback upon seeing 12 erotic lithographs from Lennon's 1970 "Bag One" art series and Ono's 1965 short film "Cut Piece," in which she sits on the floor, expressionless, while a young man slowly cuts off her clothing with scissors.

But this is no Beatle-centric museum. Another new exhibit at the MMFA focuses on Napoleon, with all sorts of portraits and busts of the general, some of Josephine's dinnerware and, impressively, one of those black-cocked hats he wore during the Russian Campaign. A modern gallery has a fine collection of works by the usual suspects: Monet, Renoir, Van Gogh, Degas, Matisse, Cezanne, Miro, Picasso, Dali and more.

I also stopped by Montreal's Museum of Contemporary Art (185 rue St-Catherine Ouest; www.macm.org), currently running a retrospective on Montreal abstract artist Claude Tousignant, whose featured geometrical works are dazzling but dizzying.

But I was distracted from my art appreciation. Staying at The Queen Elizabeth myself, I decided to pay respects by visiting Suite 1742, aka the John Lennon Suite. Even though there are gold records and photos of the Bed-In, which took place in the room, decorating the walls, everything has alas been rearranged (the bed is no longer by the window), and no ghosts of the first fallen Beatle have been reported. Still, if you'd like to create your own rock 'n' roll memory, you can book a night in the suite.

With music on my mind I set my focus on Montreal's record shops; Montreal has a reputation for its plentiful supply of used record shops — and I'm talking vinyl, not CDs.

I walked over to Cheap Thrills (2044 Metcalfe), where I found copies of the Aynsley Dunbar Retaliation's "To Mum, from Aynsley and the Boys," and John and Yoko's "Unfinished Music No. 2: Life with the Lions." Prices were reasonable: $5.50 for Dunbar, $19 for the Lennons.

Early spring can be cold and rainy in Montreal, and it sure was while I was there earlier this month, so I got to the artsy, funky part of town — a long stretch of St-Laurent Blvd. - by cab, and started visiting store after store (there are 14 used record shops listed).

I stumbled upon Le Pick-Up (169 Ave. Des Pins Est), where I found a great $1 bin, which had a copy of Pat Boone's "Howdy."

Then I discovered Beatnick (3770 St-Denis), a store so jam-packed, I knew I might hang out for hours. I only lasted two, but among my finds were a mint copy (inside and out) of the Rolling Stones' lenticular-covered "Their Satanic Majesties Request" and the first Blue Cheer album, "Vincebus Eruptum."

Though feeling all shopped out, while walking back to St-Laurent, I was drawn into Friperie Swing (151 Ave. Des Pins Est), a funky retro clothing store, where I found a really shiny green shirt for my wife, and the skinniest of silver neckties for myself.

From my room at The Queen Elizabeth, I had a spectacular view of Mary Queen of the World Cathedral from the window. So I decided to check out what was inside. Turns out the cathedral is a 1/4-scale model of St. Peter's in Rome, filled with sculpture and paintings down low, and murals and stained glass windows up high.

Alas, Mary was swept from my mind the next day when I entered the main sanctuary of the even more glorious and astoundingly colorful Notre-Dame Basilica, a cab ride away in the city's oldest section, known as Old Montreal. Notre-Dame, built between 1824 and 1829, was once the largest church in North America until St. Patrick's was built in New York 50 years later.

A lengthy drive over to the former Expo 67 grounds, on Ile Notre Dame, a man-made island built right in the St. Lawrence River, brought back memories of my visit there all those years ago with my family, when the 1967 "World's Fair" was jammed with millions of people. Among the few still-standing and well-preserved edifices is the imposing Buckminster Fuller-designed Biosphere, still called the Biosphere, which attracts visitors today as a science museum.

All of that exploring can make one hungry. So while in the city I tried the grilled salmon with lemon butter potato puree ($19.75) at Holder (407 Rue McGill), a lively, European-style brasserie; and a gourmet meal of fillet of bass in its crispy skin, on a bed of sauerkraut, with butternut squash and asparagus ($45) at the elegant five-star Beaver Club (in the Queen Elizabeth). I also stopped by Schwartz's Hebrew Delicatessen (3895 St-Laurent Blvd.), where the line goes out the door for the famous smoked meat sandwiches.

I spent a pleasurable couple of hours too at the enormous Jean-Talon Market (7075 Casgrain Ave.), one of two major indoor food markets in the city, where you can sample succulent tomatoes and delicious goat cheese, try out some refreshingly sweet ice cider, and buy everything from fresh meat to port wine jelly.

Anthology will be at First Parish on April 26.

Anthology, a professional women's vocal quartet, will perform "Songs of Protest and Social Unrest." Included on the program will be new works by eight composers who have composed these works specifically for Anthology. The performance will take place at First Parish Cohasset, North Main Street, on the green, at 4 p.m., on Sunday, April 26. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Anthology has commissioned eight new works for this program series. All eight composers were asked to compose a work based around the theme of "Songs of Protest and Social Unrest." The resulting works span a diversity of styles and texts. Also included on the program will be songs of protest from different eras and countries, including South African anti-apartheid hymns, union songs, work songs and political songs from bygone decades. Anthology is proud to be adding new music to the repertoire for women's voices, and has been working personally with the composers during the rehearsal process. The composers involved are Ashi Day, Stephen Feigenbaum, Erin Huelskamp, Eva Kendrick, Ivana Lisak, Carol Lubkowski, Russell Podgorsek and Michael Veloso.

Anthology's repertoire is a collection of classical choral music, hot jazz, Renaissance polyphony, world folk traditions and music from local Boston compositions. Anthology sings fresh new arrangements of old classics, discovering new repertoire in music from all centuries and all genres. Anthology is Michelle Vachon, Vicky Reichert, Allegra Martin and Anney Gillotte.

For more information about the concert, call Martin at 617-379-1219.

CSCR benefits its volunteers

As September approaches, seniors at Cohasset High School are making plans. What schools will they attend this fall? What are they going to do there? What other plans do they have for their future? Fortunately, many seniors are aided in these decisions by years of hard work – and play – at Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research. Not only has CSCR served as a location for many local marine research programs over the years, but now the experiences and skills learned through working at the center are coming in handy for many Cohasset seniors planning for the upcoming months and beyond.

Senior Jessie Fitts says her work with CSCR inspired her to take more advanced science courses in school, including AP Biology and AP Chemistry. These have, in turn, led her to consider several scientific majors, such as biology and environmental science. According to Fitts, CSCR has shown her that, "Science isn't all about measuring stuff and doing weird equations. It's also plants, animals and being outside." In addition to helping her discover this passion for science, CSCR also provided Fitts with more confidence, which she feels is a result of the warm, relaxed environment provided for the students to learn in. One of the most valuable lessons that she has learned from CSCR, said Fitts, is that, "…Science isn't scary. Science is fun."

In addition, the program encourages collaboration and leadership. During her first year with CSCR, senior Fiona McBride remembers, "The fishing was the best part. It was fun, and everyone worked together." McBride has participated in many CSCR projects, such as those at Damde Meadows and James Brook. She also joined the CSCR staff, dealing with administrative projects that have taught her a great deal about leadership. McBride said, "[CSCR] empowers you, giving you a chance to lead. You develop with it, from being taught to becoming a teacher." With all of the time she has spent at CSCR, McBride is not quite ready to let it go. Although she has not quite decided on college, she hopes to continue her role in projects like CSCR whatever the future may bring.

Another active CSCR participant, August Oddleifson, plans to attend Dartmouth College as a biology major. According to Oddleifson, CSCR greatly influenced his college choice. He said, "It showed me science from the perspective of the lab, it gives you a unique look at science." This unique look has come from a variety of projects with CSCR. After finishing the eighth grade he started monitoring Cohasset Harbor. Researching the bacteria microfilm in Cohasset Harbor with fellow senior Jean Thomae has proven his favorite project. In addition to the engaging projects, he also found that CSCR is an ideal activity. "…If you're trying to distinguish yourself for college, or really for anything."

Seventeen-year-old Ellie Baumgarten said, "CSCR cultivated my interest in environmental science." She joined the program during freshman year, and has found that many of the projects prepared her for the science courses she took later in high school. Over the past four years, Baumgarten has volunteered for many environmental projects including James Brook, Cohasset Harbor and wetlands monitoring, just to name a few. Many are very interested in the research done at CSCR because the results are sent to a professional lab, and several organizations depend on it. :As a result," Baumgarten said, "We have very high standards at CSCR."

According to senior Jonathan Choi, "You have to work carefully, for even small mistakes can result in very different data." To reinforce the importance of accuracy, the data is sent to a professional lab giving students a feel of what real-world research is like. Choi plans to major in electrical engineering, but hopes to continue involvement in environmental research as a side project. Increasing public awareness in issues such as pollution is another interest of Choi. As advice to any newcomers to CSCR, he said with a smile, "Prepare to get dirty."

DAR Good Citizens Awards presented

Col. Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met March 9 at the Lightkeeper's Residence in Cohasset to honor local recipients of the DAR Good Citizens Award. Sponsored through the local chapter, the winners recognized were David August Oddleifson of Cohasset High School, Melissa Striglio of Hull High School, Leah Damon of Rockland High School and Sheila Njau of Weymouth High School.

The DAR Good Citizen Award is given annually to members of the senior class of accredited high schools. Three students are selected by the faculty, based on the qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. The members of the senior class then vote for the recipient of the award. This program is also recognized by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

August Oddleifson of Cohasset High School is the son of Chris and Nancy Oddleifson. August is a member of the National Honor Society and has received a National Merit Scholarship Letter of Commendation. He plays varsity soccer and is a leader in the high school Concert Band and the Jazz Band. He has participated in the Appalachian Service Project. August is an Eagle Boy Scout and his project was to map Wheelwright Park using a GPS system. He also directed the troop to make a new hiking trail through the park. He attended the Boy Scout National Jamboree at Fort A. P. Hill in Virginia and was crew chief on a trip and 50-mile hike at Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, N.M. He also has been active with the Center for Student Coastal Research and helped the group secure a grant for further study. August works as a sailing instructor during the summer. He will be attending Dartmouth College in the fall and plans to seek a liberal arts education with a focus on science.

Melissa Striglio of Hull High School is the daughter of Robert and Sharon Striglio She is secretary of the National Honor Society, involved with Project Humanitarian, the Hull High School Theater Arts Program, an AP Scholar and was a Patriot's "Write-On" scholarship winner. She also plays varsity soccer. Active at St. Anne's, she is an Eucharist minister and involved with many community project. She has traveled within the state to work with inner city children and will be going to El Salvador to build houses with Habitat for Humanity. She is active in Girl Scouts and received the Bronze Award. She also worked on her brother's Eagle Award. Melissa has worked at Joseph's Pizzeria and is a babysitter. She plans to get a degree in the medical field.

The recipient from Rockland High School is Leah Damon. She is the daughter of Edward and Melissa Damon. Leah is treasurer of the National Honor Society and the Student Government Council. She also has participated in the French and Key clubs, indoor track and tennis. She has received awards for outstanding academic achievement in history and science. Out of school, Leah is active in community service. She has tutored middle school students, helped serve Thanksgiving dinner to the town's senior citizens and organized and planned freshman orientation. She works at Rite-Aid pharmacy. Leah will be pursuing a career in biochemistry.

Sheila Njau is the Good Citizen from Weymouth High School. She is the granddaughter of Rachel Njiru. She is editor-in-chief of the school newspaper, chapter president of Best Buddies and co-captain of the Wildcat Marching Band Color guard. She is also involved with the math team, student representative to the student council, and outdoor track and field. In the Rotary interact program, she volunteers at Father Bill's and at the Weymouth Health Care Center. Her interests are in dancing and the JAVA Program. She recently was selected to serve as the school's representative for the Principal Search Committee. Sheila hopes to pursue a career in the medical field. Her essay on "Our American Heritage and Our Responsibility for Preserving It" was sent to the Massachusetts DAR and she is one of the five finalists in the state.

Each student was presented with a certificate and wallet card stating they are local Good Citizen recipients. Their families came forward to help pin on the Good Citizen pins and were congratulated for their outstanding young adults. A small gift and a flag were also given to each Good Citizen. State Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley spoke congratulating each of the students and presented citations from the State House.

Marsom B. Pratt

Investment banker, former Cohasset resident

Marsom Pratt, 85, died March 17, 2009.

Mr. Pratt lived on Jerusalem Road in Cohasset with his first wife Bettina Pratt and their three children from 1953 to 1973. He was a director of the South Shore Bank and a Selectman in town. His children attended Cohasset public schools through sixth grade.

He was a man who was exhilarated by change. In 2002 in his 80th year he graduated from MassArt with a bachelor of fine arts degree, which he added to a bachelor of science degree from Princeton and and a masters degree in business administration from the Wharton School.

Following 20 years at Adams Harkness & Hill as Executive Vice President/Partner and head of the Municipal Finance department, he became an undergraduate art student. In order not to leave the studies that delighted him he changed his major frequently, managing to stay in school for 10 years prior to his graduation with high honors.

Nationally eminent in his field, he maintained pride in his service to the community as advisor to the Mass Health & Education Authority, organizing bond offerings for all of the major institutions of higher education such as Harvard, Tufts, Wellesley, etc. and hospitals such as Massachusetts General Hospital, Beth Israel Hospital and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Marsom B. Pratt

He was well known where he lived on Beacon Hill, Boston and where he greeted neighbors and passersby courteously and generously shared his knowledge of the area, art, politics and the world.

Mr. Pratt was an avid traveler and photographer and had visited every continent. On one occasion he disconcerted Paris breakfast regulars when he filmed himself and Laura, dressed in the green uniforms of local garbage collectors, as the two of them broomed themselves through the bar.

He and his wife Laura Pincus Bernard were married in 2000 on a boat on the Charles River in front family, friends and a brass band. He is also leaves his children by his first wife Bettina Pratt of Boston and their children Marsom B. Pratt II of N. Dartmouth; Laura Pratt of Brattleboro, Vt. and Drusilla Pratt-Otto of Brookline, their spouses James Woodberry and Stephen Pratt-Otto; his granddaughters Jenny Pratt-Woodberry, Kathleen Pratt, twin grandsons Lang and Sam Pratt-Otto, and his stepdaughter Daphne Bernard of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
APRIL 13, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Professional relationships grow stronger. But you might still need to ease some problems with someone in your personal life. One way could be to try to be less rigid in your views.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might be too close to that perplexing personal situation to even attempt to make a rational decision about it right now. Stepping back could help you gain a wider perspective.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Being asked to choose between the positions of two friends is an unfair imposition on you. Best to reject the demand and insist they try harder to work things out on their own.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change of mind about a workplace decision might be called for once you hear more arguments, pro and con. A personal event suddenly takes an unexpected (but pleasant!) turn.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Romance once again looms large for single Leos and Leonas, with Cupid favoring Taurus and Libra to inspire those warm and fuzzy Leonine feelings. Expect another workplace change.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A surprise gift — and, happily, with no strings attached — could come just when you need it to avoid a delay in getting your project done. Expect education to dominate the week.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone close to you might ask for your support as she or he faces a demanding personal challenge. Offer it, by all means. But be careful you don't neglect your own needs at this time.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected development could put your relationship with a partner or spouse to an emotionally demanding test. But your determination to get to the truth should save the day.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent agreement appears to be coming apart over the surfacing of unexpected complications. You might need to have expert advice on how to resolve the situation.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your keen business sense helps you get to the truth about a suspicious business deal. Expect to have many colleagues rally to support your efforts in this important matter.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who once moved in and out of your life over the years might now want to come back in on a more permanent basis. Give yourself a lot of time to weigh your decision.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Showing frustration over a delayed workplace decision might get someone's attention, but not necessarily make him or her move any sooner. Best advice would be to be patient and wait it out.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FIVE KEY TIPS FOR SEARCHING FOR SUMMER CAMP ONLINE

1. There are many online camp directories, camp search websites, and camp search tools. None offers a comprehensive way to search all viable camp options given specific search criteria. For those looking to explore a full range of options, www.camp-parents.com is a great place to start. There's a lot to know about finding a camp. Explore all sorts of advice for camp seekers, from the national experts on children's summer camps. Conduct a comprehensive online.

2. Directories and online camp search tools are not always free for the camps. Sometimes camps have to pay to be listed. This limits the number of camps included. Pay attention to who's sponsoring the online camp directory or camp search tool. How qualified are they to provide camp information? Information is only as good as its source.

3. Online search tools are binary—offering either/or choices. Make sure you know that results pages will only contain camps that offer ALL the search criteria you type in (results will be ruled out if they don't meet all criteria.) Sometimes you will need to search for one key search criteria at a time and then compare the search results.

4. Don't search exclusively online. Back up your search with an actual conversation with the camp director or camp representative. You'll want to have a personal conversation with the professionals who run the camps and supervise the counselors who will work with your child.

5. Spend the most time on camp websites. Click around. Look at the photography. Read the parent testimonials. Watch the videos. Examine everything from the philosophy to the daily schedule. Download the forms so you can enroll your child!

There is nothing like Dame Edna

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Farewell tours are almost de rigueur in certain show business circles. Cher has been on one for years. And so word that Dame Edna Everage - the self-described international housewife, therapist, fashion icon, guru, swami, and gigastar - would be bringing what she is calling "My First Last Tour" to Boston's Colonial Theatre this week sent chills, prematurely as it turns out, through the lilac-haired entertainer's legion of fans.

"I'm not trying to do a Cher with one of those endless tours. I'm just pretending to be on my last tour so people will hurry to the box office. The name is really just to sell more tickets. I'll probably do at least three farewell tours, but then I may have to wind down. I've been giving too much. People ask me all the time, 'Edna, you're such a rich woman and yet you still give so much back. Why are you still traipsing around the world?' I say it is because you need me," explained Everage by telephone last week from a Naples, Fla., tour stop. "You need cheering up and you need to get things in proportion again."

The Melbourne, Australia, native says she relates very personally to some recent U.S. government decisions.

"I am the Dame Edna stimulus package for my audiences. I am bringing my very own stimulus package to Boston. I'll be dancing and singing and wearing these beautiful clothes, about five different wonderful outfits, all designed by my son, Kenny. We've pared down on things like dancers, fancy scenery and charitable donations, so there's more to spend on myself. And I've doubled the expenditure on gladiolas. I fly them in by the plane load."

Dame Edna Everage will be at Boston's Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., April 16-19.

Anyone who has had a prior audience with the Dame knows that she often shares those long-stemmed flowers with her fans as part of an overall approach to her show that she says she learned from another show business luminary.

"I'm a big fan of Johnny Mathis. He has a magnificent voice and he is a marvelous entertainer. Johnny is one of the people, like me, who gives when he is on stage. Little Liza Minnelli is quite the opposite. Liza is my god-daughter, of course, so I can say firsthand that she is very needy. When I see people leap to their feet and scream 'We love you, Liza!' I know it's something that poor needy little Liza desperately needs to hear, but I can't bear it. I think neediness is a very unappealing thing in the theater.

"Not very long ago, two hairdressers came up to me after my show and said, 'We love you, Edna!' to which I replied, 'Well, I don't love you.' That is what I call honesty. I think people like the fact that I am not needy."

This may be Dame Edna's first last tour, but it is not her first visit to Boston.

"The audiences adore me in Boston. I come from Melbourne, Australia, which if it isn't already a twinned city with Boston ought to be. We have great affinities like architecture and beautiful atmosphere."

The Dame plans to soak up some of Boston's beautiful atmosphere when she is not on stage at the Colonial.

"What I like about Boston is its good used book stores. I'll be moving out and about a lot when I'm in town. You'll see me in all kinds of other places. I won't be wearing my gowns, of course, but I will be dressed in exquisite street clothes. I'll also be wearing a headscarf given to me by Queen Elizabeth. It's polyester with pictures of dogs on it, and it is just lovely."

The widowed Dame may be shopping for old books in Boston, but probably not for a new husband, unless a certain legendary male vocalist happens to be in town.

"Since my husband passed away, I have enjoyed my independence. I'm still very much footloose and fancy-free, but if I ever remarried it would have to be to Johnny Mathis. We haven't met yet, but I know that when we do he will forget about whatever it is that has kept him a bachelor all these years."

"Dame Edna – My First Last Tour," featuring Australian actor and writer Barry Humphries as his most famous creation, Dame Edna Everage, will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, April 16-19, for five performances only. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcross America.com

Round one of Wicked Local Web Jams is a wrap. Local bands New Son Rising, Easy Access, Jackson Wetherbee Band and Sick Kitty are heading into the semifinal round this week and they need your vote. Check out www.wickedlocalraynham.com and click on the Web Jams link on the homepage.

Norton-based New Son Rising ("Never Knowing") will go head to head with Easy Access ("Good Times") of Stoughton while Duxbury-based Jackson Wetherbee Band ("Sally Sees") takes on Sick Kitty ("Walk Away") of Plymouth. Voting in this semifinal round opened April 13 and will continue through April 26. Check out all four wicked awesome songs and vote to send your favorite band into the final round. Vote as often as you like – it's unlimited.

Is your band ready to rock online? We have one spot left on the Wicked Local Web Jams 2 bracket, which is set to launch in May. E-mail your band bio, photo and MP3 files to Alice Coyle at acoyle@cnc.com or Seth Jacobson at sjacobso@cnc.com For more information call 508-967-3505.

What do women really want?

Writer/comic Robert Dubac tells all in 'Male Intellect: An Oxymoron?'

Robert Dubac stars in "The Male Intellect: An Oxymoron?," April 16-10 at the Company Theater, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell.

It may seem that Robert Dubac was taking sides when he decided to call his one-man show "The Male Intellect: An Oxymoron?" On the telephone from Los Angeles last week, however, the actor/writer was quick to set the record straight.

"This show is definitely not all about male-bashing. There's nothing angry about it. This is really about the essence of men and women and what goes on between them. I make fun of both men and women," says Dubac of the show, which begins a four-day stint at Norwell's Company Theatre on Thursday. "This is a piece for all the guys out there who think that women don't know what they want. These guys believe that women just think they know what they want, but then when they give them what they want, they really don't want it. They want something else."

It was wanting something else that prompted stand-up comic Dubac - an opening act for everyone from Linda Ronstadt and Kenny Loggins to Jimmy Buffet - to become a monologist in the 1990s, when books like John Gray's "Men Are from Mars, Women Are from Venus" and one-man shows like Rob Becker's "Defending the Caveman" were all the rage. Dubac's show enjoyed a late 1990s sit-down run at Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse and prompted a recent sequel, "The Male Intellect: A Second Coming," which he hopes will be coming to a theater near you soon.

"My new show is all about the difference between truth and illusion in terms of things like reality vs. reality TV and sound investments vs. Ponzi schemes. I've been getting away from the male/female hypocrisies of language, but it has been such a long time since I played the Company Theatre, so they wanted to me to do the first one again. And even without any references to Dr. Phil or Oprah Winfrey, material on the battle between the sexes has proven to be remarkably evergreen. It's about a guy trying to figure out what a woman wants, and that is still a prevalent issue for many men. This is especially true because we're being taught by an older generation, our fathers, who are now a generation removed from knowing what works."

To make his story work, Dubac plays a range of different men – from Bobby, whose intended just ended their engagement two weeks before the wedding, to a long-married man, a male chauvinist, a ladies' man, and a senior citizen living in a retirement home – a group Dubac has dubbed "The Chauvinists." Dubac, who makes his home in Telluride, Colorado, has been married for 14 years now, but still has vivid memories of the time in his life that inspired his first play.

"What I learned from the women I've dated over the years is what really inspired me. I've also been inspired by the many dysfunctional men I've known and maybe one or two dysfunctional women, too."

"The Male Intellect: An Oxymoron?," starring Robert Dubac, will be at the Company Theater, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell. April 16-19. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

Cohasset artist holds solo exhibition in Miami

Cohasset-based artist Robert F. Merton unveiled his first solo exhibition, Temperatures, on Thursday, April 9, at The Buena Vista Building in Miami's Design District.

More than 120 of Miami's most influential art critics, dealers and personal and corporate collectors attended the invitation-only event. The exhibition featured 25 of Merton's paintings, a collection of abstract and gestural paintings that actively engage the viewer and evoke intense emotional responses.

Merton will be volunteering at the pre-school class at Osgood to guide the students to each create their own version of a "Temperatures" painting on individual canvasses.

Neighbors oppose condo complex

17-units proposed for James Lane

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The village zoning bylaw may allow it, but the neighbors made it known Wednesday night they don't want it.

At the first public hearing on a proposed 17-unit residential development at 8 James Lane about 20 residents came out to express concerns primarily about the density of the project — and the safety and neighborhood impacts that come along with it.

Stoughton-based South Coastal Development Group has put forth for a special permit a 17-unit condominium building to replace a small ranch house that currently sits on the half-acre property. The 26,000 square foot building will have three floors and an underground parking garage in the basement.

The Planning Board took its first pass at the project on Wednesday night. The public hearing has been continued to May 6 at 7:15p.m.

Residents of the close-knit James Lane neighborhood described the "country lane" atmosphere and the many people who use the street as a pedestrian cut through on their way to the village. Many said the proposed project did not fit in with the predominately small single-family neighborhood.

" The scope of the project to where it is doesn't match. James Lane is the sidewalk that doesn't exist on Pleasant Street," said David Bigley of 25 James Lane. The increased traffic of 17 housing units was a major concern of residents, especially considering the 17-foot width of the street.

"Two cars can't make it down the

Holly Hill's Belber recognized for work

A certified organic farm tucked away off Jerusalem Road is both a working for-profit farm and a hands-on teaching classroom.

Jon Belber is the education director of the non-profit arm of Holly Hill Farm, dubbed "Friends of Holly Hill Farm." Three seasons of the year he goes into area schools and welcomes groups to the farm with the primary goal of teaching them about sowing, growing and harvesting.

Last week, Belber was surprised at the annual meeting of Holly Hill Farm with the news he was a recipient of the Elizabeth Abernathy Hull Award, an environmental education award given by the Garden Club of America. The Garden Club of America offers the

Cedarmere road needs to be built

Planners want to see some progress

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Planning Board wants to see something done at Cedarmere property — and in the near future.

It seemed the town's patience with Leggat-McCall, the development company behind the Cedarmere project, has come to an end. The permitted 104 housing unit project located on a 41-acre parcel between Route 3A and Beechwood Street was permitted over two years ago. Site preparation began for the property and one house was built, but construction stalled when the real estate market soured.

It's been over two years since anything substantial was done on the site.

Mahmood Malihi of Leggat-McCall explained not much had changed in their eyes since he was last before the board to give an update in June 2008.

"From our point of view, nothing has changed in the market to give us the green light to move forward," said Malihi. He hinted that the project as permitted by the town might not be the project that eventually gets built on the site. "It's not the time to move forward yet…it is not clear that the highest and best use of the site is what is permitted."

"From our point of view, nothing has changed in the market to give us the green light to move forward."
— Mahmood Malihi of Leggat-McCall

However, Planning Board chairman Al Moore indicated the real estate market as it was could no longer delay some basic items of the permitted project.

Moore listed off a number of items the developers needed to address in the coming months. From providing a construction narrative to posting a significant bond as prescribed under the Conservation Commission's order of conditions to addressing an expiring Mass DEP permit, there were a lot of outstanding issues.

"We'd like to see some of that start to come together" and with detailed timetables, said Moore.

The most tangible demand the Planning Board made on the developer was constructing the road into Cedarmere approved in the permit. Right now, the 3A entrance to the property is just a dirt road without any utilities.

"It needs to come up to code," said Moore. "For the health, safety and propriety we want the road to be built and the utilities installed."

Complicating the issue — and making it more urgent — is the Planning Board permitted another subdivision project using frontage from the Cedarmere street.

Further, the Planning Board requested the developers address the look of the site itself.

"The overall appearance of the site in particular from 3A is rather shabby at best. The large piles of dirt…we're really not happy at how that looks," said Moore. "To sit back and wait another year is just not acceptable."

Top stimulus projects chosen

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's like playing a poker game without knowing the rules.

That's how Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson described the difficult process of narrowing down and prioritizing the 19 infrastructure projects put forth for consideration to receive federal stimulus money. Recognizing any of the projects are worthy of funding, the Selectmen have to try to figure out which projects are most likely and most needed to be funded. However, no one seems to know how the projects will be judged.

"Every community is running blind on this, no one knows how to evaluate (the projects)," to put the town in the best position to receive stimulus money, said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Yet, time was of the essence last Thursday evening because State Rep. Garrett Bradley was scheduled to meet with the Municipal Task Force the next day at noon.

The Board of Selectmen, of which

POLICE BEAT

Local grandmother falls for senior scam

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A Cohasset woman has apparently fallen victim to a scam during which a caller, claiming to be a grandchild, calls and asks for money.

Chief James Hussey said the resident reported the incident to police after reading about the scam in the Mariner.

Some time ago, she sent $4,000 to the caller, whom she thought was her grandson. The caller said he was in trouble and needed bail money, police said.

The woman made contact with her real grandson recently and confirmed that he was not involved.

Cohasset Police continue to warn senior citizens to be aware of the telephone scam that is preying on grandparents nationwide.

Police said a senior citizen in Scituate also fell victim to one of these scams and wired $2,500 to Canada from a supermarket in Cohasset.

The scam works like this: the grandparent receives a distressed phone call from who they believe is their grandchild. The supposed grandchild typically explains that they are traveling in Canada and have been arrested or involved in an auto accident and need the grandparent to wire money to post bail or pay for damages — usually amounting to a few thousand dollars.

It is believed that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' basic tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks.

Police are advising seniors to confirm the status of the individual by calling them directly or verifying the story with other family members before taking any further action.

Police also advise that any request to wire money through Western Union or MoneyGram should be seen as a "red flag" and an immediate tip-off that the call may be part of a scam. Funds sent via wire transfer are hard to track once received by scammers and are usually not recoverable by law enforcement or banking officials.

MV crash

A 2004 Saturn, owned and operated by a Weymouth woman, was traveling east on Beach Street when it apparently crossed the road, and hit a cement post and a tree in the vicinity of 88 Beach St. The operator was transported to the hospital and the car was towed, police said. Officers are trying to determine the cause of the accident that took place at about 1:43 p.m. on Monday (April 13).

B&E in progress

A Ridge Top Road resident called police after seeing two people exit his driveway at about 12:37 p.m., Wednesday (April 15). The couple left in a gray hatch-back-type car. A neighbor, who was doing yard work, also reported seeing the car parked on the street.

The homeowner found closet doors open and items on the floor. The front door, which had been left locked, was also open. The doorframe was damaged. Detectives processed the scene to gather evidence, Chief Hussey said. Information about the man and woman was also sent out to other police departments. The woman was described as having reddish hair, a ponytail and was wearing shorts, police said.

Solicitors

The police were inundated with complaints last Wednesday (April 15) about unregistered solicitors going door-to-door. Most of the calls came in the afternoon from addresses on Beechwood Street, Sohier Street, CJC Highway, and Surry Drive.

Cohasset has a bylaw requiring solicitors to register with the police where they can apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. In addition solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Larceny

A woman reported to police that her brown North Face coat, valued at $200, had been stolen from a coat rack in an unlocked, common hallway in a yoga studio last week. Inside the coat were her car keys and prescription sunglasses, police said. The keys were found in the parking lot next to the studio. The incident, reported last Thursday (April 16) at about 12:11 p.m., is under investigation.

Arrest

Police arrested a 48-year-old Brockton man after a traffic stop on Beechwood Street last Friday (April 17) at 1:10 p.m. An officer observed the vehicle the man was driving drifting over the white fog line and pulled the car over by the ballpark, The man presented police with a Brazilian passport and had no driver's license. Police charged him with driving without a license and he was cited for marked lanes violation.

Traffic stop

Police arrested a 23-year-old Scituate man after stopping him for speeding while conducting traffic enforcement on Route 3A on Saturday (April 18) at 9:45 p.m. A computer check revealed there were two warrants for the man's arrest. He was also driving on a suspended license. He was charged with the warrants and for driving after license suspension (subsequent offense). He was cited for speeding.

Courtesy booking

On Sunday, police arrested a Cohasset man, who was being sought by Abington police for domestic assault. The incident occurred in Abington; Abington police came to Cohasset and took custody of the 29-year-old Cohasset resident, Chief Hussey said.

Police Officer Regen Steverman looks over the scene following an accident on South Main Street in Cohasset Village last Saturday morning (April 18).

Two injured in S. Main St. crash

Upon impact, the Jeep jumped the sidewalk and careened into the front window of Cohasset Hardware

On Saturday, April 18, at approximately 8:51 a.m., the Cohasset Police Department's Emergency Dispatch Center received multiple 9-1-1 calls from cellular callers reporting that a car had just crashed into the front of 40 South Main St., which is the former home of the Cohasset Hardware Store.

On arrival, police officers found that a 1996 Jeep Grand Cherokee, which had been heading southbound on Main Street, from Hingham toward Scituate, had crossed the double yellow line and crashed into a parked 2008 Toyota Highlander. Upon impact, the Jeep jumped the sidewalk and careened into the front window of Cohasset Hardware. The building was vacant at the time of the crash and sustained no major structural damage.

The driver of the Jeep, who was identified as Mark J. Lamm, 25 years of age, from Hingham, received facial injures as a result of the crash and was transported to the South Shore Hospital by ambulance. He will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for negligent operation of a motor vehicle and failure to drive within marked lanes. While officials were interviewing Mr. Lamm on scene, he advised them that he suffers from a medical condition that my effect his ability to drive a motor vehicle. As a result of this information, the Cohasset Police Department has notified the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles and requested that Mr. Lamm's drivers license be suspended pending a medical evaluation.

A 17-year-old female passenger in Lamm's vehicle was also injured in the crash. She was treated on scene and subsequently transported to South Shore Hospital by ambulance with head, neck and back injuries.

Both vehicles were towed from the scene and owners of 40 South Main St. made arrangements to secure the property. The owner of the parked car is a 74-year old Cohasset resident.

Playground parking only at Beechwood

A resident of the Beechwood area informed Town Manager Bill Griffin that cars were parking in spaces for extended periods of time, thus limiting parking for those engaged in playground activities. In order to curtail the extended parking, Griffin recommended placing several "Playground Parking Only" signs near the ballpark.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson wanted to know why the cars were parking there and if they were parking overnight. Griffin didn't have specific information on who or why the cars are parking there.

Selectmen Fred Koed suggested the signs include posted hours, such as "Playground Parking Only from 8a.m. to 8p.m."

"I don't have a problem with people parking at night," said Koed.

The cost for the signs was negligible, said Griffin.

Ultimately, the Selectmen voted 3-0 to put up the signs simply saying "Playground Parking Only" and revisit the issue if there are additional complaints.

We'll make you smile.

Neighbors oppose 17-unit building for James Lane

street without one pulling off to the side," said Cynthia MacCleave of 9 James Lane. Her house is directly across the street from the proposed development. MacCleave also raised the issue of the development being located adjacent to a public water supply.

Lindsay Guild of 43 James Lane was both passionate and adamant in her opposition of the project, "I do not want this project ruining the sweet little neighborhood it is." She called the project both "disgusting" and "outrageous."

"I do not want this project ruining the sweet little neighborhood it is."
— Lindsay Guild, 43 James Lane

Paul Cleary of South Coastal Development Group said, as much as possible, they wanted to work with the various groups and neighbors to get a project that works.

"We're really a flexible development group. We study the local zoning and try to think about what the best match is for what the town is looking for," said Cleary. The developers are attempting to propose a project that falls within the parameters of the zoning bylaws in order to avoid applying to the Zoning Board of Appeals for relief.

While 8 James Lane may look like it would be part of a residential zone, it has been zoned as downtown business district since zoning was implemented in the 1950s. When changes were made to the village bylaw, the property remained in the business district when it was renamed the village business district.

A ranch house currently sits on 22,172 square foot (half-acre) property. The property abuts the Boys of Summer (formerly Strawberry Parfait) hot dog and ice cream stand, the MBTA right of way, and wooded town-owned property, which includes the Ellms Meadow well field.

As a general rule the village business district bylaw does not allow apartment units on the first floor in order to keep the village a business area. The Planning Board can grant an exception if the applicant demonstrates (and the Planning Board agrees) first floor residences would not have an adverse impact on the continuity of any retail or services located on the street.

"I don't see how a business can thrive on the other side of the tracks," said John Modzelewski, the town's consulting civil engineer.

Each of the 17 units will have two bedrooms and two baths. Each unit will be between 1,200 and 1,500 square feet. The project plans propose 20 underground parking spaces and nine exterior parking spaces. The building will be equipped with an elevator and each unit will have its own washer and dryer.

The units are intended for sale and the building will have a condominium-type agreement once the units are sold.

"This type of housing is not currently available in the Cohasset market place," Cleary said.

The architects of the building tried to incorporate some of the elements of the Red Lion Inn into the proposed construction.

South Coastal Development Group has a greater vision of redeveloping the 8 James Lane property along with the 2 Pleasant Street property, formerly home to the Boys of Summer (Strawberry Parfait) hot dog and ice cream stand. The adjacent properties combine for almost an acre of land.

"We consider this area the cornerstone piece in helping transition the village to a vibrant, economically vibrant community," said Cleary.

South Coastal Development Group specializes in mixed-use downtown and transit-oriented district development. They have property in Stoughton, Canton, Milton and the Greenbush area in Scituate. Some are constructed, some are recently permitted and some, like James Lane, are going through the permitting process.

"We know how downtown villages need to work," said Cleary in a interview with the Mariner. "Change in New England is coming with the creation of alternative housing that doesn't exist now, and doesn't exist on the South Shore."

Cleary found his way to Cohasset and the property through being an investor in Henry's Root Beer, a restaurant chain that formerly occupied the Boys of Summer stand. He is partnered with his brother, Steve Cleary, who owns the property at 8 James Lane.

The Cleary brothers were frequent audience members during the six-month process to develop the village zoning bylaws in 2007. Since the bylaw passed, they have been before the Planning Board informally several times to get feedback on the project.

"We tried to work off what was created through the village bylaw," said Cleary.

Culvert, Town Hall and flood control lead stimulus list three members were in attendance, determined to present three options to the state. One would be a high-end option (over $2 million), one would be a mid-range choice (about $1 million) and a project estimated for under a million dollars.

Topping the list was the Cohasset Town Hall restoration and rehabilitation project. There is an estimated cost of $6.7 million and the ability to generate 2,500 person-days of labor. The project has a town-wide benefit and it also falls into several categories targeted for stimulus funding: public safety, historic preservation and energy efficiency.

"This is the only way (the Town Hall project) is going to happen," said Selectmen Vice Chair Karen Quigley.

The mid-range option was a combined project to address the ongoing flooding issues of two key areas in town – Treat's Pond/Atlantic Avenue and Jacob's Meadow. Originally submitted to the state as separate projects, the Selectmen determined both areas are critically in need of in-basin storage to help reduce the flooding of public and private property. The project, which carried a $1.6-million price tag, involves the construction of several new stormwater storage areas and over 130 "best management practices," such as swales and raingardens. Some easements and/or land takings will be necessary.

The final project on the Selectmen's short list, but given top priority, is restoration of the Beechwood Street culvert. Given the deterioration of the culvert, the Selectmen saw this project as the most immediate threat to public safety.

In previous state inspections, the culvert was determined to be structurally failing and its collapse would endanger the entire Beechwood area of Cohasset, including police and fire response times.

"It's all pie in the sky really," said Quigley. Cohasset's $31 million worth of projects is wrapped into $11 billion of projects proposed by cities and town across the state.

"There's a lot of competition," said Selectman Fred Koed.

"But, the projects we're putting forward are good projects," said Quigley. Koed quickly corrected Quigley, "they are great projects."

Moore said he feels especially bad for the abutters of the site who sat through the meetings and were promised a wonderful neighborhood. Now for two years have been staring at dirt.

"We're concerned this has become a real blight on the town…we really need to clean the site up," said Moore. "It's probably going to cost money, but one way or another it needs to be cleaned up."

The Planning Board's consulting civil engineer John Modzelewski said in retrospect, the board should not have allowed the developers to clear the entire site. Moore said in the future they would look to have a phased construction plan for subdivisions.

Donated flag pole

Paul Adams of Cohasset has donated a flagpole to the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) at 40 Parker Ave., which he would like to install in the grassy area near the water on the left corner of the property facing the harbor. In addition to the donation of the pole, Adams is also paying for the installation.

The flagpole will fly the American flag and, when applicable, it will be used to fly the yellow warning flag if the Board of Health closes the beach due to high bacteria counts.

"It is going to be a nice addition to that little corner," said Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley. The Selectmen accepted the donation 3-0.

Budget planning group endorsed

The Board of Selectmen endorsed the formation of a long-term budget planning group.

The group will consist of two members from each of the committees involved in the budget process – Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee and School Committee. The committee would begin to address the town's finances looking forward two or three years.

"Isn't this what the Advisory Committee used to do?" asked Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson.

Advisory Committee chairman Sam Wakeman said when the Town Manager Act was passed, the Advisory Committee gave up most of its financial power.

"At this point we want to get other departments and groups involved in it to get that push," said Wakeman. "We expect controversy in this, but I think the exercise will be extremely beneficial to all involved."

Delahunt sponsors 'Foreclosure Prevention Workshop'

U.S. Rep. Bill Delahunt will sponsor a "Foreclosure Prevention Workshop" on Thursday, April 30, from 6:30pm to 8:30pm at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington Street, Quincy.

This workshop is designed to help homeowners, tenants and consumers get the facts, understand their rights, and learn about the various options that are available to them in avoiding the foreclosure process.

Delahunt has invited senior representatives from the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office and the Massachusetts Division of Banks to participate on the panel. At the close of the program, volunteer law students, housing counselors and the panelists will be on hand for one-on-one counseling.

Wind turbines public hearing closes

Planning Board to deliberate Wed. April 29

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We'll all have a chance to think things through, review the documents and return to have an intelligent discussion."
— Planning Board Chairman Al Moore

The fate of the proposed wind turbine project is now in the hands of the Planning Board.

The wind turbine project applicant has presented his best case for the two-turbine project. The townspeople from all different points on the opinion spectrum have been heard on the project. Hundreds of pages of data, opinion and research from the applicant and concerned residents have been submitted to the planning board office. The public hearing process, which began in September, has been characterized by many late nights, heated arguments, passionate soliloquies and plenty of controversy.

With little fanfare and an uncharacteristically small crowd, the Planning Board closed the public hearing portion of the application Wednesday night. With the closing of the public hearing, no new information can come before the board.

"At this point we've got what we've got," said Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey. The Planning Board now moves into the deliberation portion of the application in which the public can observe, but not participate.

After a brief polling of the board to get a feel for the member's major concerns and initial thoughts on the project, the consensus was to devote an entire meeting to begin a comprehensive discussion of the project.

"We'll all have a chance to think things through, review the documents and return to have an intelligent discussion," said Planning Board chairman Al Moore. This coming Wednesday, April 29 at 7p.m., the Planning Board will continue their deliberation on the application. Because of the poor acoustics and anticipated smaller crowd, the meeting will likely be held in the Selectmen's Office or in the basement meeting room.

The application is a landmark project as it is the first for the town and the first application under the Wind Energy Conversion Facility bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting.

The Planning Board has to decide whether the project as presented meets all the requirements stipulated in the town's zoning bylaws. If so, they can grant a special permit for the project, which typically is accompanied by a set of conditions.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, CCI-Energy, is proposing the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. The project is being called the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project.

Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, is the primary name on the applications.

The turbines will be 100-meters (328-feet) tall from the ground to the hub, or nacelle, where the blades originate. The three blades will extend 41-meters off of that hub making the tip of the structure 462-feet (141-meters) above ground.

Through the public hearing process, the Planning Board and audience members have heard about the various impacts and potential benefits the project could have on the town. There has been safety concerns raised over the project setbacks and proximity to adjacent properties, both commercial and residential. Potential ice throw was looked at closely. Noise, shadow flicker, visual impacts were also major topics during the hearing and will continue to be major issues as the board deliberates.

Below is a brief synopsis of what each Planning Board member saw as the major issues for the project:

• Clark Brewer said the board should keep in mind that the project is precedent setting and needs to consider all the potential implications approval of this turbine project will mean for future turbine projects in town. Evaluation of the turbines' performance and mitigation measures on and off site need to be considered. Compliance with all aspects of the bylaw was also forefront in his mind.

• Charles Samuelson's main concern was that any approval of the project would not burden the town: "my main hope and concern is the benefit to the town." He came to the meeting with a draft list of conditions he would like to see put on any project approval in order to protect the town.

• Stuart Ivimey said the deliberation process should be multi-stepped. First, the board should evaluate whether the project as presented meets all the requirements of the zoning bylaws, which includes several sections and chapters. He requested the board keep an open mind to the concept of does the project fundamentally meet the criteria of the bylaws. "We are weighing both the quantity and the quality of the data submitted by the applicant…from the onset I question a lot of the information, data, conclusions and methodology presented to us." Ivimey said the turbines will "define the visual character of the town for the next 20 years…we have to be convinced what we are approving has been proven to a high degree of certainty."

• Jean Healey Dippold, the newest member of the Planning Board, is not voting on the project because she was not sitting on the board during the majority of public hearings. Having sat through many of the public hearings as a resident, she cited the setback concerns and noise data as two areas that need to be evaluated closely.

• Chairman Al Moore saw it differently than his fellow board members. For him, the project came down to the visual impact. The height of the turbines was the one aspect of the project that could not be mitigated or addressed in a set of conditions. "They are going to be large, they are going to be the highlight of the Cohasset landscape." He said the potential benefits of the project had to be weighed against how the turbines will affect the town visually for years to come.

The performance will take place at First Parish Cohasset, North Main Street, on the green, at 4 p.m., on Sunday, April 26.

Anthology vocal quartet to perform at First Parish

Anthology, a professional women's vocal quartet, will perform "Songs of Protest and Social Unrest." Included on the program will be new works by eight composers who have composed these works specifically for Anthology. The performance will take place at First Parish Cohasset, at 4 p.m., on Sunday, April 26. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Anthology has commissioned eight new works for this program series. All eight composers were asked to compose a work based around the theme of "Songs of Protest and Social Unrest." The resulting works span a diversity of styles and texts. Also included on the program will be songs of protest from different eras and countries, including South African anti-apartheid hymns, union songs, work songs and political songs from bygone decades.

Anthology's repertoire is a collection of classical choral music, hot jazz, Renaissance polyphony, world folk traditions and music from local Boston compositions. Anthology sings fresh new arrangements of old classics, discovering new repertoire in music from all centuries and all genres. Anthology is Michelle Vachon, Vicky Reichert, Allegra Martin and Anney Gillotte.

BOUTIQUE

Warm weather beckons; follow its call to the Seaside Spring Boutique hosted by the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club. Local vendors will be displaying a range of specialty items such as unique jewelry & accessories, baby items, stationary, home accessories and gifts. While shopping, you can also visit the raffle table to support the Newcomer's favorite charity-Cradles to Crayons, a local charity dedicated to providing low income children all the tools they need to be safe, warm and ready to learn. All the raffle proceeds will benefit the charity. The Boutique will be held on May 2 from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Scituate Country Club, 91 Driftway. Admission is free and all are welcome. (www.scnewcomers.com)

50 YEARS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is celebrating its 50th Anniversary. On May 3rd, the Garden Club and the Cohasset Historical Society will join forces and present a special program commemorating the lives of women. "50 Years in The Lives of Women" will explore the changes we've seen as well as look at the things that have remained the same over the past 5 decades. Speakers for this event include Polly Logan; "In the Beginning; How the Community Garden Club of Cohasset Got Its Start": Fran O'Toole; "The History of the Club": Barbara Elliott; "The Changing Social Lives of Women": Mary Eisenhaure; "Our Domestic Engineering Role" and Judy Dickstein; "Technology and Its Effect". Please join this on Sunday, May 3, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Cohasset Historical Society in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. This program is free and open to all. Light refreshments will be served.

POST PROM

Attention Cohasset High Parents. Please dig out your photo albums! The post prom committee is putting together a video highlighting our children through the years. We are looking for photos that capture our seniors when they were young. We welcome pictures from birthday parties, sporting events, school and scouting events —dig deep! Please put your name on the back of all your photos (we will return them) and submit them to Pat Martin. Photos can be dropped off or mailed to her at 169 Linden Drive, or e-mailed to massmartins@comcast.net.

Also, a Post Prom Committee meeting is being held on May 7 at 7 pm in the High School Library. Come on in and show your support for the Graduating class.

SAILING

The Cohasset Sailing Club is excited to announce its new web site and 2009 season. The revised and expanded web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, has updated details on the club's many features, including the instructional programs beginning with fourth-graders (kids turning 10-years old by Labor Day 2009) and continuing on to teenagers and adults. Application forms can also be downloaded from the site and turned in at the 2009 Registration Weekend, which will take place at the Club on Government Island on Saturday, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Sunday, May 17 from noon to 2 p.m. Applications for membership and all programs, dock slips etc. must be made in person at Registration.

PEACE

Please join our walking team, Compassionate Cohasset, in support of Tina Chery and the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute's upcoming Mothers' Walk for Peace. The Walk will be held on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 10. The organization, a beneficiary of our the Second Congregational Church's Outreach program, provides many important & effective services including the difficult task of assisting families of homicide victims through grief support during the most difficult moments of crises. Put your "Faith into Action" by participating in the Walk or by pledging our Compassionate Cohasset team. There will be a carpool from Cohasset to Boston. For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781-383-6006.

CARES

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S. (Caring and Responding Economically and Spiritually), a collaboration of dedicated leaders from local faith communities and social service providers, presents an innovative program, Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums, designed to offer insight, information and vital tools to help members of our community negotiate today's challenging economic times.

Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums will take place on four consecutive Saturday mornings: April 25th, May 2nd, 9th, and 16th from 9 to 11 a.m. in the parish halls of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and First Parish Unitarian Universalist. The first forum, to be held at St. Stephen's, explores Housing and Finance. Christopher Oddleifson, President and CEO of Rockland Trust and CEO of Independent Bank Corporation, Steve Borgerson, VP of Rockland Trust, and Frank Campbell, President and CEO of Pilgrim Co-operative Bank will join local real estate professionals Janice Crowley, Coastal Countryside Properties, and Lorraine Tarpey, Coldwell Banker Real Estate. The panel will present expert information and advice on topics including loan modifications, foreclosures, financial security, real estate options and housing possibilities. Subsequent forum topics are Employment and Career Opportunities, Government at Work for You and Affordable Health Care. For more information please contact Connie Afshar at 781-383-6006.

That is all for this week. Send in your news and information no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Cohasset Police Officer Regen Steverman will be participating in the Susan G. Komen 3-Day Walk for the Cure. Each walker not only has the challenge of walking 60-miles, they must also raise $2,300. Steverman is in the midst of getting sponsors for the walk, which takes place in Boston from July 24 to 26.

Making strides against breast cancer

Officer Steverman to walk 3-Day for the Cure

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Last summer, Cohasset Police Officer Regen Steverman was one of the thousands of people inspired through their participation in the Breast Cancer 3-Day Walk. This summer, she will be back pounding the pavement on the 60-mile route in an effort to raise money for the Susan G. Komen for the Cure.

"It was something I always wanted to do and last year, I just said to myself 'why am I not doing this?"

After her experience last year, one that she describes as "amazing," there was no way she wouldn't participate this year.

Walking in the Breast Cancer 3-Day and raising money to find a cure for the disease is an issue close to Steverman's heart and family. Each step she takes and dollar she raises is in memory of her grandmother who lost her battle with breast cancer and in honor of her two aunts who are breast cancer survivors.

"I walk because if walking 60 miles can help even a little in the fight against breast cancer then it's the least I can do," said Steverman, 31. Each walker not only has the challenge of walking 60-miles, they must also raise $2,300. Steverman is in the midst of getting sponsors for the walk, which takes place in Boston from July 24 to 26.

Last year, Steverman signed up for the walk independently (without a team) and planned to walk it on her own. But that didn't last long. On the first day, a group of women asked if she was walking alone. When she said yes, they immediately said "not anymore" and welcomed her into their team. She walked the remaining miles and days alongside the group.

Along the way there were emotional and inspirational moments from the opening ceremony to seeing her aunt at one of the cheering stations to receiving a card reading "because you walk I have hope."

"You can't really describe the experience; it's just unbelievable," said Steverman.

The 60-mile walk grueling – and being a rookie 3-Day walker Steverman wasn't fully prepared. During the first day there was heavy rain and thunderstorms soaked her sneakers. Besides wet feet, she got blisters, shin splints and leg cramps. This year, she's definitely packing an extra pair of sneakers. The veterans not only came prepared with an extra pair of sneakers, but also decorations for their tent at night and plenty of pink accessories.

"There's no way to train for the walk other than by walking…it was a lot tougher than I thought it would be," said Steverman.

Despite her unforgettable experience at last year's 3-Day Walk, Steverman said there was one thing missing.

"Last year the only piece that was missing was walking with someone I was close to and having someone to share the experience with," said Steverman. For the upcoming walk, she recruited her best friend Shannon Snyder to walk with her.

Although the bad economy is weighing on individuals and families, Steverman is confident the search for a cure for breast cancer is a cause many have been affected by and are willing to contribute to.

"It's been amazing the way people are willing to give despite of the economy," said Steverman. "I hope I'm giving people a personal connection to donate to something important."

Steverman is one of two female police officers on the Cohasset Police force. She was hired as a full-time patrol officer in about three years ago. She grew up and still resides in Scituate.

To donate to Steverman's effort, visit www.the3day.org and click on "Donate" and search for Regen Steverman. For more information, e-mail rsteverman@cohassetpolice.com.

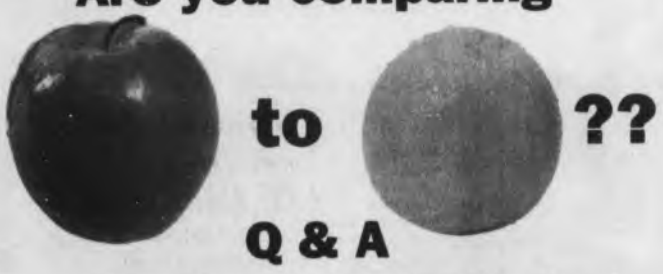
Clothing drive to benefit Cradles to Crayons



Spring cleaning? People are asked to donate gently used clothing and baby equipment to the Cradles to Crayons clothing drive to benefit needy children in Massachusetts. The O'Donnell family at 11 Beach St. will host the clothing drive from noon to 5 p.m., on Thursday May 14, and 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday May 16.

Cradles to Crayons collects clothing, baby equipment, school supplies and crafts, shoes, books and jackets and distributes these goods through a network of social service agencies benefiting children from birth through age 12.

Saturday's drive will include snacks and a jump house for kids. Interested in helping? Email kariod@comcast.net. Community service hours for Cohasset High School students available.

award to an individual who provides outstanding education to youth inspiring them to appreciate the beauty and fragility of the planet. The Cohasset Garden Club nominated Belber for the award.

"I know I have been working hard, but it was a surprise…very nice and thoughtful," said Belber. "It was very flattering many that people took the time to write letters of recommendations."

One of the recommendations written by Cohasset High social studies teacher Jack Buckley lists the many partnerships created between Holly Hill Farm and students at the high school over the past five years.

"Inspiration can never be measured, but we know for certain that Jon Belber is growing educational programs at Holly Hill Farm in measurable ways, and providing a growing number of South Shore students with experiences and memories that they will never forget," wrote Buckley.

Already the farm and Belber are in the midst of a busy spring season — welcoming students to the farm and visiting local schools. In the last two years, Holly Hill has carved out space dedicated to farm education: a small hoophouse (greenhouse) and an education garden. Both afford students space to get dirty and tend to plants without interfering with the regular operation of the farm.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Jon Belber hands Nardello to his intern, Rebecca Clifford, 13, of Scituate and an Inly School student, who will pot the pepper plant that will be headed for school gardens throughout the South Shore.

Rebecca Clifford, right, helps Jon Belber pot eggplants that will be headed for area school gardens.

Belber takes care to tailoring the lessons to school curriculum and make it relevant to the season.

"We always try to make the lessons very season appropriate. In the spring, we start the plant by sowing seeds, in the falll we're saving the seeds. The kids really get to understand the cycle of the farm and of the plants," said Belber. During summer farm programs, students get to make a weekly meal out of the vegetables they have helped to grow.

Last year, he orchestrated a "harvest festival" at a local school where the kids ate tomatillo salsa, garlic bread and kale chips from ingredients grown in the garden.

"It's a neat way to get kids excited about food," Belber said.

Literally hundreds of children make their way to the farm during the spring and fall. School field trips, after-school programs, girl scouts, boy scouts, church groups are all regular visitors.

"It's important to know where food comes from, how it grows. It's especially important for kids to have a connection to the environment…to have an awareness and appreciation of it," said Belber. He adds when kids to hands on work and feel a part of creating or growing something, they are more likely to retain the lesson.

Belber utilizes volunteer farm teachers for school groups in order to keep a small group atmosphere and he is always looking for more volunteers.

"The small group approach helps the kids to connect with the lesson and stay engaged," said Belber.

During his interview with the Mariner, Belber kept a close eye on his intern Rebecca Clifford, a seventh grader from Scituate's Inly School, as she planted seeds for snapdragons and broccoli.

"It's nice to train someone, but its also nice to have an extra set of hands," Belber said. Rebecca was working at the farm as part of her school's internship week over April vacation. The farm, it seemed, was a perfect fit for her.

"I like gardening and doing stuff outside," she said.

Clifford is just one of the hundreds of students who will do work in a small greenhouse set aside for educational purposed is filled with sprouting (or about to sprout) plant potted by students. Belber plans to bring many of the plants back to the classrooms so they can be transplanted into school gardens.

About 10 schools around the South Shore have classroom gardens planted under the instruction of Belber. In fact, Belber co-authored a curriculum guide for elementary teachers looking to integrate their school garden into classroom lessons.

Belber has recently been in the kindergarten and first grade classrooms at Osgood planting seeds with the children.

"After planting, water and sun, as I told them, work their magic," said Belber. There will be organic growing gardens at both Osgood and Deer Hill School primarily planted with plants the kids themselves started. The Cohasset elementary schools and middle school are among 10 schools in the area where classroom gardens are popping up under the instruction of Belber.

"Holly Hill is a great classroom for kids to see how farmers start up seeds," said Belber.

Overall Holly Hill is seeing an increase in interest in people wanted to learn more about how they can grow their own vegetable gardens and how they can do it organically.

"With the economy, people are looking for ways to save money," said Belber. Planting and harvesting their own vegetables is one way a family can save money and live more sustainable.

Beyond the school programs, Belber would like the Cohasset and surrounding communities to realize what a good community resource the farm is. In addition to the five-acre organic farm, there are over 130 acres of wooded trails behind the farm. Trail maps can be picked up at the farm.

Upcoming events at Holly Hill

- Sat., April 25, 1p.m.: Herb grower Darlene Beauvais for a workshop on Starting and Planning an Herb Garden. Participants will have a chance to learn from Darlene about a variety of herbs, such as rosemary, yarrow, thyme, oregano, marjoram and many others, which are grown at Holly Hill. Darlene was in charge of Plymouth Plantation's herbs for over ten years and she brings experience from growing her own herbs, writing extensively on their uses and selling at local farmers' markets. There will be a follow-up workshop in the farm on drying and preparing your herbs for winter. The cost for this Spring workshop is $16 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm and $20 for non-members.
- Weekends, May 16, 17, 23, 24, 10a.m. to 4p.m.: Spring plant sale.
- Saturdays, beginning May 16, 11a.m. to 6p.m., Farm Stand open (more days as harvest increases)
- Sat., May 16, 3p.m.: Workshop on preparing your garden for planting, $5
- Sat. May 23, 8a.m.: Bird walk with Alan Poole.
- Sun., May 24, 1p.m.: Workshop on maintaining your garden organically, $5
- Wed., June 24, dusk, Summer film series begins

Holly Hill Farm readies for plant sale

Farm Managers Ben Wolbach and Hannah Hobbs are in the midst of preparing hundreds of plants for the upcoming plant sale. A new greenhouse has afforded them more space to grow and cultivate more of the plants people will flock to the farm to purchase. The annual plant sale will take place over the two weekends in May, May 16, 17 and May 23, 24.

"Right now they don't look like much, but in three and a half weeks they'll be nice and tall," said Wolbach of the his tomato plants. They have made a concerted effort to have more plants available, especially the vegetable plants people will be looking for. Wolbach estimates they have increase the amount of tomato plants to be available for sale by 50 percent.

"We'll also have organic seeds and potting mix because some seed do better when they are planted directly in the ground — and it's cheaper to buy the seeds rather than the plant," said Hobbs.

SAILING CLUB

ELIZABETH MURRAY

While the winter was long and the mild spring weather has taken its time in getting here, the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) has been busy completing its plans for the summer 2009 sailing season. This is the first of a multi-part series updating the club's new developments and detailing its main features.

Jim Porter formally stepped down as commodore in February after five years of extraordinary service to the club. This participation is in keeping with his family's multi-generational involvement with the CSC — his father's service is commemorated by the namesake Porter racing series for adults that takes place on Thursday evenings. Jim's sons Nathan and Ian are two of this summer's returning instructors. Continuing the legacy of many former commodores, Jim will remain active as a CSC trustee.

Rich Ofsthun is the new commodore but a veteran member of the CSC — his involvement dates from 1994, almost immediately after his family moved here from Chicago. Growing up in Minnesota, "Land of 10,000 Lakes," Rich sailed M-boats, and embraced the opportunity to get back into sailing after a 14-year hiatus. Besides taking advantage of the town's immediate proximity to the ocean, "I wanted my kids to have as much fun as I'd had growing up around sailing. All three of my boys have gone through the Junior Program and Conor, my youngest, is a senior instructor." About four years ago Rich joined the club's board of trustees, from which ranks the commodore is chosen.

For this season's first launch, Rich spearheaded the development of a new and improved CSC web site, which is now live at www.cohassetsailingclub.org. This greatly expanded site will be continuously maintained and updated with program changes, weather-related announcements, race results, and photos, as well as links to other relevant sites. The CSC offers sailing instruction for children 10 years of age and older, teenagers, and adults, and sponsors a racing team. The club is undertaking a dock refurbishment this spring, and will have up to ten slips available this year, as well as kayak berths — both available for a fee. The slips offered by the CSC are one of the town's best values for keeping a dinghy and gaining instant access to the water. More details on the dock slip and kayak berths, as well as application forms, registration, and policies are posted on the web site. Registration for the 2009 sailing season takes place at the clubhouse on Government Island on Saturday, May 16 from 9:00 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Sunday, May 17 from 12 to 2 p.m. Applications may be downloaded from the web site, but registration must take place in person at the clubhouse.

Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums will take place on four consecutive Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. April 25, May 2, 9, and 16...

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S., a collaboration of dedicated leaders from local faith communities and social service providers, presents an innovative program, Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums, designed to offer insight, information and vital tools to help members of our community negotiate today's challenging economic times.

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S. (Caring and Responding Economically and Spiritually) has been meeting weekly since last fall exploring ways to reach out to community members providing reassurance and assistance to those among us faced with financial challenges. Community leaders are realizing that some residents are finding themselves economically vulnerable for the first time in their lives—and are possibly too private or too overwhelmed to seek needed help. The Saturday morning forums will provide expert information and resources helping individuals and families to move with confidence and resilience through times that present not only economic but spiritual challenges.

Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums will take place on four consecutive Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. April 25, May 2, 9, and 16, in the parish halls of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and First Parish Unitarian Universalist, in Cohasset.

The first forum, to be held at St. Stephen's, explores Housing and Finance. Christopher Oddleifson, president and CEO of Rockland Trust and CEO of Independent Bank Corporation, Steve Borgerson, vice president of Rockland Trust, and Frank Campbell, president and CEO of Pilgrim Co-operative Bank will join local real estate professionals Janice Crowley, Coastal Countryside Properties, and Lorraine Tarpey, Coldwell Banker Real Estate. The panel will present expert information and advice on topics including loan modifications, foreclosures, financial security, real estate options and housing possibilities.

The subsequent May meetings will address additional areas of concern including employment security, career opportunities, state and federal assistance programs and understanding options in health care.

- On May 2, at St. Stephen's, Cohasset, Sam Pease, Vice President of New Directions will offer advice on Employment and Career Opportunities in his presentation, Creating New Opportunities in a Challenging Economy.
- On May 9, State Representative Garrett Bradley will present Government at Work for You in the Parish House at First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church.
- On May 16, at First Parish, Amy Whitcomb Slemmer, CEO of Health Care For All, will lead Affordable Health Care, a forum on understanding the confusing web of available health care options including benefits available in the stimulus package,

Each meeting will start off with coffee and refreshments. The gatherings are designed to be interactive, providing attendees the opportunity to ask questions, hear advice from experts, and leave with tools to help them deal with financial uncertainties. The forums are free and all members of the community are invited. Guests are welcome to attend the entire series or select individual topics of interest

CSCR Summer Institute kick off is May 26

The CSCR Summer Institute kick-off event will take place at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, May 26, in Bancroft Hall, Lightkeepers, Residence, Government Island, Cohasset. The evening will feature a presentation on bio-film bacteria in Cohasset Harbor and a summary presentation of independent research conducted by seniors August Oddleifson and Jean Thomae. CSCR will also share its plan to produce a "State of the Harbor" document for the community.

This presentation is mandatory for all students planning on participating in summer research or CSCR staff work. A parent should accompany each student. Parents, as well as students, should attend to learn what CSCR does and its plans for the future.

The evening presentation will last only one hour, but will be informative. Students are expected to confirm their attendance by replying to Jack Buckley at jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Senior scam close to home

The scam targeting senior citizens that appears to be a Canadian export has hit home.

At least two local seniors, one in Scituate and another here in Cohasset, have fallen victim to the scam and sent money to someone posing as a grandchild in trouble.

The scammers appear to be targeting seniors old enough to have young adult grandchildren who might be traveling in Canada where they could conceivably get into some trouble and ask for a bailout.

Many "older" seniors, who are enjoying their octogenarian years, have a bunch of grandchildren and love them all.

So prevalent is the scam that the editor's own mother, a Scituate resident, received one of the scam calls and engaged the young male caller in a fairly lengthy conversation about the car accident he had had while driving a rental car in Canada.

"Why don't you call your Dad?" the grandmother asked. "Gramma, I can't tell Dad about this – you know how upset he would be…"

The editor's mother finally caught on but initially was prepared to help out the caller who described himself as her "favorite grandson" when he started the call. Since most of her grandsons live nearby (only one lives in New York) she then said, "Oh, Arthur…" and the conversation continued from there.

This attempted scam occurred several months ago. The crime appears to be continuing and affecting seniors nationwide.

While some may think seniors are gullible to fall for such deception – we know they are simply more trusting than the rest of us. Their generation is more innocent and less cynical. Those characteristics should be treasured and protected.

But all of us, who love grandparents everywhere, need to be sure they understand that scams, targeting them, are out there and are likely to continue.

Please let them know there is nothing wrong with hanging up the phone; it is not rude to do so in these cases. Be sure to encourage them not to be embarrassed and to contact family and the police right away if they receive this type of call.

While you are at it, it is also probably a good idea to have a "younger voice" on a senior's telephone answering machine – as further protection against those who could be targeting the senior's savings account.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. We promise to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Legion seeking donations for those deployed

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 is seeking donations of toiletries, batteries, Ziploc bags, snacks CDs, DVDs, and other items for those deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan. Donations may be dropped off at the Legion Post on Summer Street daily after 3 p.m. or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank branch on 3A. Personal notes or cards are encouraged.

Monetary donations are also accepted. Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with "Soldiers Project" written in the memo line on the check. Checks can be mailed to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Re: Sidewalks at Avalon Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen, Town of Cohasset, 41 Highland Ave. Attention: Chairman, Paul Carlson. A copy was provided to the Mariner for publication.

Dear Chairman Carlson:

The Board of Health has noted that the local press is stating that the Town may be considering accepting a cash payment from Avalon Cohasset in lieu of constructing sidewalks per the approved plans.

The Board is adamantly opposed to accepting a cash payment in lieu of the sidewalks. Sidewalks will provide residents the opportunity to walk to the train and commercial properties in the area reducing the use of automobiles and thereby reducing the carbon footprint which automobiles produce. Encouraging walking promotes better physical and mental health. Providing sidewalks to promote better health in the community is a win-win situation.

For the Board of Health

Health Agent

A big thank you to our Girl Scout volunteers

TO THE EDITOR:

April 22 celebrated National Girl Scout Leader Day, and we at the Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts are so honored to have the support and dedication of our 17,000 volunteers. Each day, week and month throughout the year, we rely on our volunteers to help implement our mission and programming to over 45,000 Girl Scouts.

Our volunteers, as with many organizations, are critical to our success. They provide our girls with the rich experiences they deserve and offer valuable programming in the areas of science, technology, engineering and mathematics, health and fitness, and leadership development. This perpetuates a culture of giving that is reflected in the tremendous community service impact our Girl Scouts make. These volunteers set the example.

The Girl Scout organization epitomizes a positive dependency on volunteers to be successful. Our incredible corps of motivated, inspiring volunteers expands our ability to reach out to girls in every community. Without them, there would be no Girl Scout troops to build these girls into leaders.

Thank you to the following dedicated volunteers in Cohasset that support Girl Scouting:

Motorists ignoring 'road closed' signs

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Border Street Culvert Replacement – It never ceases to amaze us how pre-construction publicity and "construction / road" closed signs are ignored by drivers. While we were at the Border Street construction site, cars would approach the work area like there was no tomorrow and screech their brakes as they come to an abrupt stop at the construction site. Oh well, we guess that's life in the "big city."

Construction projects are always very interesting. Engineers can draw lots of lines on paper, but when the construction starts what is in the ground is often quite different. For example, the new culvert will cross under gas, water and sewer lines. Due to the level required for proper operation of the culvert, the clearance under these utility pipes to the top of the culvert pipe is as small as two inches. That's really close for installing pipe and it won't be easy for the contractor to accurately slide the pipes into place. In fact, to clear the utilities, our engineers specified oval shaped pipe. This will provide the cross sectional area required to move the proper amount of water and still pass under thee other utility pipes.

The accompanying photo shows several pieces of the pipe that are being used. To give you an idea of the pipe size, the inside dimension of the pipe is 30 inches wide and 19 inches high.

Early this week the contractor, Cali Construction, placed the headwall for the culvert system. The head wall is a concrete slab with an oval hole in it that will be the end of the pipe at the meadow end. The photo shows the headwall being placed, but the oval hole for the pipe is not visible. Immediately to the left of the headwall you might be able to discern the edge of a steel plate. This plate was placed perpendicular to the water channel and serves as a dam to prevent water from harbor flowing into the work area. Pumps at the base of the head wall keep the work area dry by pumping any water that seeps by the steel plate back into the harbor channel.

As we write this article on Wednesday, the contractor has laid three sections of pipe from the headwall going toward the Gulf. It is planned that all pipe work will be completed by Friday so that the road can be reopened. However, like all construction the weather is always a wild card.

Little Harbor Water Sewer Project – The good news is that the asphalt plants are now mostly open for the paving season and the paving contractors have called their workers back from their winter vacations. We have mentioned before, that the DPW is actually doing the paving for the Little Harbor Project because they can buy asphalt paving less expensively than the main project contractor. The overall paving plan is to have the paving contractor in Town two days per week from now until the plants shut again in November. Already, the rain this week has interrupted this schedule so paving will be only done on Friday (4/24), weather permitting. By the time you read this you will know whether we will be successful.

The paving schedule is to do the following roads on 4/24:

- Jerusalem Lane
- 95/101 Atlantic
- 111/123 Atlantic
- Sandy Cove Lane (start if time permits)

The following week tentative plans for paving the following roads next week:

- Sandy Cove Lane (complete)
- Hobart Lane
- Lothrop Lane
- Sheldon Lane (if time permits)

Paying for naming rights

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The bridge that links Charlestown and Chelsea across the Mystic River is named for Maurice J. Tobin, the former mayor of Boston, former governor of Massachusetts, and former secretary of labor.

The problem is the owner isn't getting any money out of it.

That's why Massport is looking for a company with deep pockets — if there is one left in these days of federal bailouts — to lend its name to the bridge, for a fee, of course.

In the past, high schools have been named for benefactors or local notables...

"It could be the TD Banknorth Tobin Bridge," Thomas Kinton, the Massport CEO told the Boston Herald, citing a company that had a deal to put its name on the bridge's tolls.

Banknorth is in no position to deal now, having just given up the naming rights to what used to be, and still is for some people, Boston Garden. And Shawmut Center. And Fleet Center.

The New England Patriots used to play at CMGI Field but now play in Gillette Stadium, without moving, because CMGI couldn't afford the $120 million over 15 years.

It's getting out of hand, this business of selling naming rights. You can blame it all on the Buffalo Bills football team, which was the first to name its new playing field for the Rich Products Corporation in 1972.

Rich Stadium cost the firm a piddling $1.5 million for a 25-year arrangement, but when Reliant Energy bought the naming rights to the former Houston Astrodome in 2000 it cost them $300 million for a 32-year agreement.

Naming rights has led to some unusual names, like the Quicken Loans Arena, where the Cleveland Cavaliers play their home games, and the EnergySolutions Arena, home of the Utah Jazz.

The Nashville Predators play in the Gaylord Entertainment Center, the Oklahoma Red Hawks at Southwestern Bell Bricktown Ballpark and the Frisco Roughriders at Dr. Pepper/Seven-Up Ballpark.

Companies must think it's worthwhile laying out millions just to have their names mentioned when an event occurs at a local field or traffic is reported to be tied up on a bridge.

In the past, high schools have been named for benefactors or local notables, like Sylvester High in Hanover, Sumner High in Holbrook and Stetson High in Randolph.

Why not close the budget gaps by selling the naming rights so we could have Dunkin' Donuts High of Hanover, Coca Cola High of Holbrook and maybe Building 19 High of Randolph?

Think of the publicity that can be accrued when football teams from Jack Conway High of Marshfield and Dan Quirk Chevrolet High of Scituate meet on Ocean Spray Field.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Poor Peter III, sickly and not terribly bright, was hardly an impressive lad.

BIRTHDAY: April 21, 1729 (or May 2, depending on the historical source.) First of two parts.

Once upon a time there lived in Germany a poor little princess named Sophia.

Her mother paid little attention to her daughter. About her father not much is known. From early childhood Sophia was highly intelligent and anxious to please. Those were the characteristics that showed. What was not apparent at first was her enormous determination and ambition.

Destined to be married to another obscure German royal, she would not have made even a footnote in a history book. Fate, however, had another plan for this princess.

In 1744 at age fourteen, she and mother were summoned to Russia by the daughter of Peter the Great, Empress Elizabeth, who was very vain, very large, and owned some 20,000 dresses. The Empress was looking for a suitable bride for her fifteen-year old nephew, the grandson of Peter the Great, who would one day be Tsar of Russia.

Poor Peter III, sickly and not terribly bright, was hardly an impressive lad. His favorite pastime was dressing up in uniform and playing soldier. He worshipped Frederick the Great of Prussia and all things Germanic. Even so, the little princess managed to become his friend and confidante. She was a clever girl.

A few months after they met, a bout with smallpox left Peter disfigured and a psychological wreck. Still, one year after her arrival, they were married – a triumph for her, a tragedy for him, although no one knew it yet.

Eager to please the empress, Sophia adopted the more appealing Russian name Catherine. The next 18 years she later described as "full of tedium and loneliness." Peter played soldier and spoke German while Catherine studied Russian history and language, read Voltaire, and spoke with Russian nobility in French, at that time the diplomatic language of Europe. She found Elizabeth's court, lively with dancing, poetry, and music, too frivolous. She preferred fishing, hunting, reading – and gambling. All that plotting and risk-taking – so much like the art of diplomacy. She wrote, "I have a mind infinitely more masculine than feminine." Someone else later wrote, "It was always power, not pleasure that intoxicated her."

Although rumors persisted that Peter was sterile, impotent, or both, Catherine produced a son about seven years after the marriage. Was the father her much-favored handsome courtier Sergei Saltykov? The paternity of Paul I has always been a matter for speculation.

Enter Stanislaw Poniatowski, a Polish aristocrat and the first of the more memorable men in her collection. After serving his term with her, she rewarded him with the Kingship of Poland. It didn't last. Although she was usually generous to former lovers, she was not sentimental. Later on, in a continuing quest to enlarge her empire, she invaded Poland and deposed him.

Years pass. A more calculating Catherine considers her situation. It's 1762, she's 32 years old, and Empress Elizabeth is dead. Her husband, the unpopular Peter, was crowned Tsar on Christmas Day. He still openly adores Germany and is thus completely unpopular among Russians. She, certainly more striking in appearance, has converted to the Orthodox faith and is growing in popularity. Most important of all, she has the love and support of Grigory Orlov, lowborn but tall, handsome, and dashing, just like his four brothers, all loyal Officers of the Guard.

Catherine's coup occurred on June 28 when she mounted her horse in Palace Square, surrounded by the Orlov brothers and her loyal Guard and proclaimed "We have felt obliged, with God's help, and on clear and sincere wishes of our subjects, to take the throne as the sole and absolute sovereign."

With her son Paul Catherine left town for Peter the Great's nearby summer retreat Mon Plaisir and waited to be....exiled or executed or empress.

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

Spring is officially here for me when I see that hedge of forsythia come into bloom on North Main Street, just before the road dips down toward the Common.

It has been an interesting month at the Center. Patricia O'Flynn of the Samaritans came to one of our luncheons. She talked about depression – its symptoms and causes, also how to recognize it in others, and resources to call for emergency help.

We had a special treat at one of our luncheons. Greg Curtis entertained us with song. He sang inspirational pieces and songs we remembered from our younger days. It was truly a relaxing hour.

At another luncheon Carol Taylor and Linda Chuckran from the Welch Co. visited. Carol talked to us about the choices that can be made if the time came when we could no longer be cared for in our own home. She suggested that we look around for assisted living, which would best serve our needs.

Linda then read to us the history of the Easter Bunny. It seems he originated in Germany. She also played a few tunes on the piano. We played "Name that Tune," with prizes of spring flowers for the winners.

Eleanor Campbell had made bunny baskets filled with candies for each place setting. The tables looked so festive!

Last week Patty Smith, Director of Home Care for South Shore Visiting Nurses Association was there to talk to us about falls and the hazards causing them. We talked about how to make our homes safe in order to prevent falling.

Something new has come upon the scene. It is Cohasset Café and has been open for a few weeks. Come down to the Light keeper's Cottage and enjoy coffee, tea and pastry while chatting with your friends. An added bonus is the view of Cohasset Harbor. The Café is open every Monday morning until the end of June from 9 to 11 a.m. No need to make a reservation.

For a long time now it has been a dream of Cohasset Elder Affairs to have a building of its own. Now it looks like the dream may become a reality. If you would like to see the projected plans for a new Center, feel free to drop in at number 3 North Main St. where the plans are on display.

VETERANS

Veterans agent hours

Joseph R. McElroy, director of veterans services in Cohasset announces his office hours for the months of April, May and June at the Paul Pratt Library, Study Room B, located at 35 Ripley Road. If possible, call in advance at 781-383-0505.

May
Monday, May 4, 6 to 7:45 p.m.
Wednesday, May 6, 10 a.m. to noon
Saturday, May 9, 10 a.m. to noon
June
Monday, June 1, 6 to 7:45 p.m.
Wednesday, June 3, 10 a.m. to noon
Saturday, June 6, 10 a.m. to noon

Luncheons are scheduled

A Veterans Camaraderie Luncheon was initiated in September 2008, at Hearth 'n Kettle, 151 Main St., Weymouth, at the Main Street intersection. The next luncheon is May 20.

The luncheons allow the sharing of war anecdotes and help veterans avoid isolation, depression and collateral medical conditions that are often serious side effects of their experiences. Cost is $16 for a great meal. No reservations or prepayment are required. All veterans are welcome.

For information, call coordinators Paul Salvas at 781-337-0533 or Joe McElroy at 781-383-0505.

Senior Center explored on Our Town

"Our Town," co-host, Pat Martin, goes behind the camera to illustrate the proposed new Senior Citizen Center and how it can better serve Cohasset's senior population.

This special show also catches viewers up with the services the Council on Aging currently provides and details its popular upcoming event, the Antiques Appraisal scheduled for April 25 at St. Anthony's.

Tune in Monday, at 9 p.m., or Tuesday or Thursday, at 9 p.m., all on Comcast Channel 10.

Antique cars, vendors

A spring antique car show and fair will be held Sunday, May 17, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., at Golden Living Center, 1 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) in Cohasset. Craft vendors and owners of antique cars are welcome to participate.

For information, call Bob Rego or MJ Wood at 781-383-9060. Space is limited.

Cohasset Harbormaster, Lorrie Gibbons, transports students out to Bassing Beach.

The Cohasset Conservation Trust has teamed up with high school and middle school students to clean up litter in key locations for the second year in a row.

Ian Porter happily carries one of the many bags of collected trash to a central area for collection.

Earth Day

Students help cleanup Cohasset

Over 30 students participated in Cohasset's Second Annual Earth Day Wednesday, April 22. During a sunny break in the rainy and overcast day, students assembled at St. Anthony's in the morning to be divided into two groups: one to clean Bassing and Sandy Beach and the other to patrol Water Department property on King Street and Cohasset Trust property on North Main Street just north of Cedar Street.

Thirty-two garbage bags of trash were filled by the two work groups including pieces of car parts and hub caps from North Main Street, lobster pots, a cast iron muffin pan and a kitchen sink from Bassing Beach.

Thanks to the co-operation of the DPW which supplied bags and highway signs; Tara Tradd of the Health Department who supplied bibs and gloves; Jack Buckley and Mike Gill from Cohasset High School; and Harbormaster Lori Gibbons who ferried the students to Bassing Beach and transported the litter to the transfer station. The Water Department also contributed three cases of bottled water.

According to event organizer Debbie Shadd, president of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, Earth Day is a good time to welcome spring during the school vacation break while giving the students a sense of responsibility to clean up around Trust and town properties.

All the students who submitted their names will receive a personalized certificate acknowledging their participation.

John McGoldrick collected quite a few beer cans for the trash collection.

Wearing plastic gloves, Clara Baumgarten and Christine Guinee, lend a hand in cleaning up Bassing Beach.

Jack Buckley, Cohasset High School Community Services Coordinator, drags some old lobster traps and a beach chair along the shore of Bassing Beach during the second annual clean up.

Billy Mack comes out from the underbrush with one of many empty bottles strewn in and around the bushes.

COMMENTARY

WIGMORE PIERSON

She reflected on the oppression the tribe suffered for hundreds of years, and the hardships they endured when stripped of their traditions and their land.

It's been almost 400 years since the first Thanksgiving was celebrated by a small group of early settlers in Plymouth, Mass. The first Pilgrim celebration was made largely possible by the generosity of the Native Americans known as the Wampanoag Indians, who had lived peacefully in New England for almost 12,000 years when the Pilgrims arrived in 1620.

On April 4, 2009, Paula Peters was the first Mashpee Wampanoag Native American to deliver a keynote address to the annual gathering of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants. The event was held at Atlantica in Cohasset. Ms. Peters remarks were greeted warmly with a standing ovation by the 150 Mayflower descendants at the event.

However, Ms. Peters was not the first Wampanoag tribal member to be invited to address this group. In 1970, Frank "Wamsutta" James was asked by the Society to give a speech to commemorate the 350th anniversary of Plymouth colony, but his remarks were heavily censored by meeting organizers and he refused to deliver the censored version. Instead, on Thanksgiving that same year, he gathered native people from across the nation to hear his unedited remarks on the first "National Day of Mourning" for Native Americans.

In her moving and historic address on April 4th, Paula Peters, Director of Marketing at Plimoth Plantation and daughter of the late Russell Peters, the original chair of the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribal Council established in 1972, presented the indigenous and uncensored story of the Wampanoags to the annual April gathering. She reflected on the oppression the tribe suffered for hundreds of years, and the hardships they endured when stripped of their traditions and their land.

But she also extended an eloquent olive branch of peace to Pilgrim descendants at the April meeting, saying that "even while the Mayflower brought upon my ancestors intolerance, unspeakable dishonor, and people who took advantage of Wampanoag generosity and good nature, I do not hold this gathering responsible for those actions. Quite to the contrary, I hold this gathering responsible for the future."

Today at Plimoth Plantation, the bicultural story of the Wampanoags and the Mayflower Pilgrims is told in a way that is respectful and truthful to each heritage. Paula also reminded everyone that there were good things for Native Americans that came of the Mayflower's landing. There were "true friendships, and trade that advanced technology for the Wampanoag improving their ability to fish, hunt and farm." She also noted the exchange of culture and knowledge that enriched both the Colonists and the Natives.

Those of us fortunate enough to witness Ms. Peters' historic speech on April 4th and the warm reception of her audience will also remember the many parallels she drew between the Native Americans and the colonists - that even though we are living today in a melting pot of cultural diversity, we are, each of us, "people who refuse to relinquish the significance of our ancestry and instead cherish the preservation of the legacy of those who went before us" - be it Native American or Mayflower Pilgrim. Our common goal is to raise awareness of the experience of both Native Americans and the Mayflower passengers and to excite interest in the history of early America as the foundation for 21st century American values.

One and all had a deep sense of new beginnings made by a brave and generous Native American, Paula Peters, on yet another important date in our country's history: April 4, 2009.

HEALTH NOTES

Diagnostic decisions continue to change

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

...some doctors may no longer be familiar with the characteristics of illnesses now extinct in the US.

In medical diagnostics, not only is the volume of information on a subject constantly increasing, but the measurements and definitions of what is being measured are all changing as well. For example, mumps symptoms have been known since the Middle Ages. AIDS was initially discovered about 30 years ago, Autism in 1993 and Alzheimer's defined in 1909. Recent outbreaks of mumps have occurred because vaccinations for three such diseases, mumps, measles, and salmonella, were generally suspended after they had been eradicated and were no longer a threat in the US. In the past, those going to other countries were forewarned to receive vaccinations before going abroad. Meanwhile, some doctors may no longer be familiar with the characteristics of illnesses now extinct in the US.

On the other hand, enormous amounts of information have been gathered about all illnesses found in this country, to the extent that original definitions have undergone revision and will continue to change. So, identification of the ailment you have is based on the diagnostician's skill and knowledge. In such an environment, a patient would do well to gather sufficient information on his own to make a decision about the doctor or diagnostician of a problem – and even then, be skeptical.

When a doctor you're seeing mentions an ailment, he has to describe its effect on you. It may differ for someone else, but is pretty certain to occur the way it's described. When someone says 'why me' is he asking the age-old question about heredity or the environment – or something else? And who's to say? The diagnostician has to have such answers.

Measurement of an Illness — We have clocks accurate to the billionth of a second, but at some point the forces of a human's judgment and record of accuracy are a part of the medical decision process. The characters on the measurement yardstick change – and it takes time and training to recognize the new metrics.

A web page called Healthy Highway (healthyhighway.com) lists some 230 common ailments of which perhaps 30 may be called major; from AIDS and Alzheimer's through salmonella and stroke to warts and yeast infections. Selecting a few on which to comment about recognition, diagnosis and treatment can be an eye opener as to the requirements for specialists in the selected maladies. Lets look at a few maladies and their diagnoses and treatment:

Alzheimer's Disease — Alzheimer's is a form of dementia usually found in individuals age 65 and over. It is generally diagnosed by a brief test which includes verbally giving the patient three words and later asking him to remember what they were. Failure to do so indicates to the physician that the patient may have Alzheimer's. Such a pronouncement to most of us would be like a death notice, but to an otherwise healthy 65 year old who is competent and active despite the ailment, it's a very destructive and inappropriate piece of information that is far less important or serious to him than it would be to one aged 40 or 50. He may not need to worry about being KO'd by some disease which will debilitate him some seven to 12 years hence.

Diabetes — The most common type of Diabetes, associated with insulin resistance may be a hereditary tendency but is often accompanied by obesity and high caloric intake. Insulin levels are usually normal or higher than average but the body's cells are sluggish to respond to it. Lack of insulin activity results in higher than normal blood glucose levels. Diagnosis depends upon the results of specific glucose tests, results of a physical exam, symptoms, and medical history.

Salmonella (food poisoning) is not always someone else's problem or mistake. It can result from unsanitary conditions of food preparation and other contamination of edibles. Symptoms are nausea, abdominal pain, watery diarrhea, fever, vomiting, intestinal cramps. Diagnosis is typically through laboratory testing of a rectal, stool, or blood sample.

Diagnosis and appropriate treatment depends heavily on the skill, knowledge and judgment of the person required to make such decisions, but also on the collection and evaluation of information you, the patient, assemble about those involved in the process.

Help needed for Open Space update!

Cohasset is currently updating the Open Space and Recreation Plan and needs the help of residents. What do you consider to be Cohasset's most attractive landscape or natural feature? How should open space be further protected, preserved and managed in Cohasset? Should it be? What would you like the Open Space and Recreation Plan Committee to focus on in the next five years? These are some of the questions that we would like to hear from you about.

Come to one of two Stakeholder Meetings on Wednesday, April 29, at 6:30 p.m., or Thursday, April 30, at 10 a.m., in the auditorium at Town Hall.

The Cohasset Open Space and Recreation Plan Committee has been hard at work with assistance from consultant Beals and Thomas Inc. to update the 2002-2006 Open Space and Recreation Plan. The updated Open Space and Recreation Plan will incorporate the community's ideas with an analysis of current trends to create a vision of open space and recreation and goals for the future.

Call Kristen Wilson, Beals and Thomas Inc. at 508-366-0560 for information, comments and if planning on attending one of the sessions.

FOCUS Gallery to host renowned sailing photographer

On Friday, May 1 from 7 – 9 p.m., renowned sailing photographer, Onne van der Wal, will be at the FOCUS Gallery in Cohasset. Van der Wal has had an impressive career over the last 20 years as a specialist in yachting and sailing photography. Once a professional sailor himself, he got his start in photography while sailing with the 1981-82 Dutch Whitebread around-the-world race team on their winning boat, FLYER. He has crossed the Atlantic more than 10 times and he has raced in many transatlantic events. Most recently his ocean sailing has been on nautical photographic expeditions, which have taken him as far north as Spitbergen in the Norwegian Artic and as far south as Antartica. In the winter of 2003, he was fortunate to photograph a remarkable journey to retrace the steps of Sir Ernest Shackelton on the Island of South Georgia in the Falkland Islands.

Van der Wal's photographs have been featured in countless publications and in advertising materials for a long list of clients. His fine art photographs are in numerous private and public collections. He has also received sponsorship by CANON as a Canon "Explorer of Light" – a recognition given to only 50 photographers in the world.

The FOCUS Gallery at 15 Depot Court will host a slideshow presentation at 7 p.m. by Van der Wal, followed by a reception and a show of his fine art photographs. Copies of his book Wind and Water will also be available. Seating for the presentation is limited; please call the gallery at 781.383.0663 for reservations. The FOCUS Gallery specializes in original fine art photographic prints by a number of regional and internationally recognized photographers, including Mr. Van der Wal.

Cohasset artists featured in exhibit on the North River

The artistry of four Cohasset residents will be featured in Scenes of the North River, an invitational art show and sale at the James Library & Center for the Arts in Norwell on Friday, May 8, from 6 to 9 p.m. Tickets are $25 and will be available at the door. Proceeds benefit the nonprofit arts center and library. Art work will be available for purchase.

Cohasset artists invited to create new works depicting the North River are Tina Watson, JoAnne Chittick, Lisa Marder and Kimberlee Alemian.

Alemian's oil painting "Dusk on the North River" was inspired by the artist's numerous trips crossing the river on Route 3A when driving from Cohasset to Marshfield Hills.

"I have painted this river scene at different times of day and often stop to sketch and make color notations if I don't have my paints with me," said Alemian. "I never cease to marvel at the changing beauty of the river."

North River Scenes takes place every other year at The James Library, and will showcase 40 regional artists invited to create new works based on the theme of the North River. The party will include light fare, an ice cream bar courtesy of Coldstone Creamery, live jazz by Hingham violinist Sarah Gaut and a chance to meet the artists. The show will remain on view in the James Library Art Gallery through May 30.

Cohasset admiral to be honored May 14

The "Friends of Massachusetts Maritime Academy", a social and philanthropic organization of MMA alumni and friends will be sponsoring a testimonial dinner in honor of Rear Admiral Thomas E. Burke, U.S. Maritime Service, on the evening of May 14th at Atlantica on Cohasset Harbor. Proceeds of the evening, which will include a silent auction, will be committed to scholarships for cadets at MMA in Admiral Burke's name.

Admiral Burke is celebrating the 70th anniversary of his graduation from the Massachusetts Nautical School, the predecessor of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy and he has served his alma mater with distinction in several voluntary capacities for over 50 years. He had a distinguished war record during WWII serving in all theaters of the war and was one of the youngest ship captains of that time. A long-time resident of Cohasset, where he and his lovely wife Rita raised seven children, he went on to a very successful insurance career. A prominent citizen of the South Shore, Admiral Burke was one of the founders and benefactors of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Cohasset in Chowda Cup Tournament

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Dean Driscoll scored four goals and Vin Curran and Will Wise both scored twice as the Cohasset boys lacrosse team rolled to a 10-8 win over Sandwich in the consolation game of the Second annual Chowda Cup Memorial Lacrosse Tournament at Scituate High School on Saturday.

After an emotional 10-9 overtime loss to Scituate in the tournament opener on Thursday, the Skippers took control early, jumping to a 5-1 lead early in the second quarter.

Sandwich gave the good fight, chipping away down the stretch.

Cohasset led 9-4 at the end of three quarters when coach Stew Curran replaced goalie Jack Murphy and got the bench into the game.

"Jack Murphy had another great game," Curran said. "He had some great saves in the Scituate game. He made some big saves today. I pulled him in the fourth quarter and they scored four goals. Eric Wasel went in. He made a few nice saves."

While his team won the game, Curran wasn't thrilled with the way the team played.

"They played us hard," Curran said. "We had a chance to open the gap, but threw the ball away."

Curran was pleased with the way his son, Vin Curran played.

"Vin Curran had a good game,"

Pilczak tearing it up at St. Michaels

It's always great to get information about kids doing well at the next level, so here's one of them.

Saint Michael's College junior captain and infielder Tim Pilczak has been one of the most productive players for the Purple Knights' baseball team all season long. He's been a key in helping Saint Michael's win 9-of-11 games, to get Saint Michael's back to the .500 mark at 11-11.

Pilczak has started in all 22 games, either at second base, third base, or at designated hitter.

This season has been one of Pilczak's best of his collegiate career, as he is in the top five in all of Saint Michael's major offensive statistical areas. The junior leads the team with seven doubles and 12 walks, is fourth among starters in batting average at .308, and tied for fourth in base hits with 20 and runs batted in with 12. He also has an outstanding .434 on-base percentage, second-best on the team amongst starters.

With seven doubles this season, Pilczak has 24 for his career, just one shy of matching the program record.

Not too bad.

I'd take those numbers,

Congratulations to a number of Cohasset athletes who ran the Boston Marathon Monday.

Just thinking about running that kind of distance hurts my feet and legs.

I actually suffered an injury during the Marathon.

Somehow I pulled a hamsting somewhere near the end.

I won't say it was actually during the marathon, more like at the same time some people were finishing.

I got out of my chair to get a cookie and ouch, there it was.

True story.

Anyway, in honor of the brave athletes who ran, here are some of the top finishers from Cohasset.

Richard Kennedy, Barbara Wipf, Sarah Charron, Jennifer Gallagher, Suellen Durkin, Elizabeth Corry, Shelly Mahoney, Judith Stavis, Christopher Brinzey, Megan Brinzey, Jared Curry, Lindsey Kennedy, Michael Savage and Vaughn Littlejohn.

Congratlualtions also go to the runners who competed in the Shawn Patterson Memorial Race in Scituate on Sunday.

Looking through ht results, I was most impressed by second-place finisher Sally Slowpoke.

Sally, if you exist, nice run.

If not, thanks for the laugh.

One good sign of spring for me was being able to get out and hit the batting cages over the weekend.

I can't remember the last time I

Niki Cross playing professional soccer for St. Louis in new women's league

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

Having spent a majority of the past four months in St. Louis, Niki Cross finally had a chance to come home to Pembroke and visit with her family. Although, she only had about an hour or so to catch up and say a quick hello. She had a big game less than 36 hours later.

The 23-year-old Cross returned to town after spending the last several months training with her new soccer team – St. Louis Athletica of the Women's Professional Soccer League. That's right. Cross, a former standout at Notre Dame Academy (Hingham) and the University of Connecticut, now plays professional soccer.

"It's awesome," Cross said a day before St. Louis played the Boston Breakers. "I get paid to hang out with my friends and run around. It seems so absurd that that's my job description. (WPS) had kind of been sitting around for months, maybe a year and a half, ever since I got out of college, so I've just kind of been waiting and waiting. It just kind of got postponed, and that stretched out my plans of what I was going to do, where I was going to go, so it was a big boost that it happened with the combine."

Cross had spent a portion of the past two years training and playing with the SoccerPlus CT Reds of the Women's Premier Soccer League under current Boston Breakers coach Tony DiCicco.

"He's a great guy. I would've played for him in a heartbeat, but the cards just didn't fall that way," Cross said. "He's just so smart. He loves to study the game. I think he'll do great things with the Breakers."

Eight months ago, and three months before St. Louis drafted Cross in the inaugural WPS draft, she suited up for Umea Sodra, of the Swedish Damallsvenskan, a league considered the best women's league

Amy Rodriguez (8) and Kelly Smith (10) are all smiles after Kristine Lilly's strike in the 87th minute gave the Breakers a 2-0 lead over St. Louis Athletica in their home opener at Harvard Stadium on Saturday. The Breakers have brought professional women's soccer back to tow.

Women's pro soccer returns to Boston

Breakers hoping to attract local following

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

All boys who play sports growing up find their role models through professional sports. They admire professional athletes, hoping to one day join the ranks of Major League Baseball or become a pro football, basketball, hockey, or soccer player.

Girls never really had that chance. The Women's United Soccer Association suspended play in 2003 after the league collapsed when the expenses far outweighed the revenue.

Before the WUSA, which ran from 2001 through 2003, and from then until now, the only chance that girls had to play at a high level after college was to tryout for Team USA. Dreams of becoming a professional soccer player dwindled. But now there's a resurgence with Women's Professional Soccer, a Scored two goals in the team's 6-1 tourney win over Braintree. Also netted a goal in the team's 3-2 OT loss to Woburn in the semifinals.

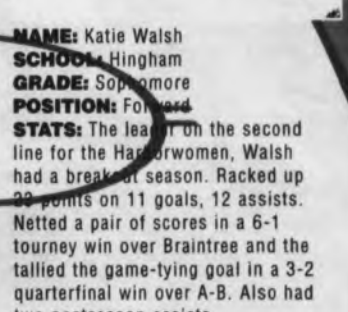
NAME: Julie Hannon
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: One of the top goalies on the South Shore and beyond, Hannon was the backstop of the [illegible] and allowed only five goals in [illegible] state tourney games, reaching the Semifinals. Allowed 20 goals in 23 games for a 1.15 goals against average.



NAME: Katie Conlon
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Forward
STATS: Conlon was the offensive leader for the Lady Rams this season, playing on the first line. Season totals found her with 24 points on 14 goals, 10 assists. She's been called the "difference maker" by coach Rich Shea. The high honors student guided the three-year old Marshfield girls to the postseason tourney for the first time.

NAME: Martha Findley
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Freshman
POSITION: Defensewoman
STATS: This talented newcomer made a big impact for the Lady Dragons this season. A skilled defensewoman, Findley was an essential part of a Duxbury stingy defense that allowed only 17 goals during the regular season and earned the No. 1 seed in the Div. 2 state tourney, reaching the semifinals.

NAME: Katie Walsh
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Forward
STATS: The leader on the second line for the Harborwomen, Walsh had a breakout season. Racked up 23 points on 11 goals, 12 assists. Netted a pair of scores in a 6-1 tourney win over Braintree and the tallied the game-tying goal in a 3-2 quarterfinal win over A-B. Also had two postseason assists.

NAME: Amanda Abramson
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Forward
STATS: She was one of the top scorers in the Bay State Conference's Carey Division, who came up with clutch goals time and time again for the Wamps. She is one reason Braintree finished with a 14-5-3 and will be one of the top teams in the state next season. During the spring, she is a member of the Wamps' defending Div. 1 South softball champions.

NAME: Samantha Fallon
SCHOOL: Pembroke (Whitman-Hanson/Pembroke)
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Forward
STATS: Fallon was a key to the offense that went all the way to the Division 2 State Championship game. A speedy forward, Fallon had big goals in the quarterfinals (one regulation, and a shootout) and the semifinals. Fallon had a knack for getting to the puck and breakaway speed.

NAME: Meg Muncey
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior (Captain)
POSITION: Forward
STATS: The leading scorer for the Duxbury girls this season, Muncey tallied points on goals, assists. Her consistent play on the first line helped guide the Lady Dragons to the Southeastern Mass. Girls Hockey League South title and appearance in the Div. 2 state semifinals.

NAME: Justine Hasson
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: She was selected by the Bay State Conference to receive the Boston Bruins Ice Hockey Sportsmanship Award. She was the leading of the highly vaunted Braintree offense. She was the spiritual leader for the Wamps as well. Coach Kevin Burchill calls her inspirational for instilling such as sportsmanship into [illegible] of her teammates.

NAME: Alexandra Davis
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Defense
STATS: Davis was a solid presence [illegible]ensively all season for WHP, [illegible] had a scoring touch as well. [illegible]r playoff goal against Concord-[illegible] gave WHP a 2-0 lead in a [illegible]-3 shootout win. Had assist in 3-2 semifinal win over Winchester and her defensive effort was a huge factor in keeping the Sachems potent offense in check.

NAME: Chrissie Bowler
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: Another stalwart on the first line, Bowler was the team's leader in assists with 30 on the season. Added 16 goals to finish with 46 points. Tallied two goals in a 3-2 quarterfinal win over Acton-Boxboro, including the game-winner. Notched an assist in the Div. 1 state semifinal loss to Woburn (3-2 OT).

NAME: Alana Woodford
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Forward
STATS: Woodford was the first line center, but also played some defense for Scituat'e first-year varsity squad. Was named to the Southeastern Mass. Girls Hockey League All-Star team and played in the game at Gillo[illegible]. Also plays lacrosse.

NAME: Becky [illegible]hy
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: Converted to forward this season after a stellar year as a defensewomen, Murphy's transition was seamless. Compiled 23 points this season on 12 goals, 11 assists. Scored the opening goal of the game in the Div. 1 state semifinals against Woburn and had an assist in a 3-2 quarterfinal win over Acton-Boxboro.

NAME: Beth Findley
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: [illegible]of the premier goalies on the South Shore, Findley posted a 1.20 goals against average with six shutouts and was in the net for 14 of the team's 19 victories. Girls Youth Lacrosse in action

U-15, Duxbury 14, Cohasset 8

The U15 team played one of the best teams in the state. Cohasset came out on fire as Hope Kissick flew down the middle of the field and rifled one home in the first minute of play.

Mariel Teague (two goals, three assists) was the next to score, feeding Kissick (five goals) in front for another goal. Goalie Olivia Blackburn made five saves in the first half.

Tied 6-6 at the half, Duxbury scored the next five goals. Cohasset battled until the final whistle. Kate Bodner, Suzanne Reichardt, Sydney Blanchard, Sarah Karp and Kylie Coffman all fought for loose balls and charged up the field to move the ball into the offensive zone.

Seventh grade, Cohasset 9, Braintree 7

The Cohasset seventhth grade girls gained an early 4-1 lead over with some scrappy play.

Katie McKenna, made nine terrific saves, including two on unopposed Braintree penalty shots. At defense, Shannon McGowan generated two interceptions, two ground balls, and an assist. Emily Robbins had two clean stick checks to cause turnovers; picked up a ground ball in traffic, and initiated some excellent clears. Katie McCabe, alternating at defense and middie, picked up a key ground ball.

Mikayla McGrath, playing both middie and attack, started the scoring with the first of her three goals, and played pesky defense with three ground ball victories and an assist. Christina Tedeschi snagged two scoops, assisted on Kathryn Dunn's first goal. Isabelle Seal played great defense at middie, contributed a key scoop and set up a goal with an assist to Tedeschi. Maggie Littlejohn snagged two grounders and popped two assists. Middie Isabelle Dunne picked up one ground ball and tallied a goal with a hard shot on a fast break. Micaela Durkin played great defense, tallied an assist and picked up two ground balls - she also dominated several draws against a very strong Braintree middie.

Caroline Evans came up with two key ground balls to help set up scores and was very effective on the rides.

Fifth grade, Cohasset 9, Braintree 5

The Fifth graders from Cohasset crushed Braintree 9-5. A team record eight players scored. Among the scorers were Abby McLean, Lanie Schwartz, Haley Marshall, Corey Golden, Madigan O'Neill, and Alexandra Leahy. Reagan O'Donnell stumped the Braintree defense and the goalie when, surrounded by opponents, she pivoted out, turned and scored. Callahan O'Neill made the other impressive move of the game. Running toward the goal as three Braintree girls triple-teamed her, she completely confused them with a 180 pivot and pass to another team player. In another great moment, Kyle Burke, playing a defensive middie position, moved the ball most of the field and scored. Bennett Tierney and Grace McMeekin made notable attempts on goal. Sophie Wolfe had a great game in net. Bridget Condon intercepted several Braintree passes. Grace Lucier, always double teamed, picked off severalBraintree ground balls, moving the ball out of the defensive end. Julia Richardson did an outstanding job of moving the ball out of the defensive end to her teammates.

U-11, Cohasset 4, Duxbury 3

The U11 Blue beat Duxbury 4 - 3 while controlling the ball the better part of the game.

Clare Glavin did a terrific job in the net while Maggie O'Donnell swept the crease for loose ground balls. Olivia Coveney executed a nice draw as center middie while Minnie Stavis and Libby Mullaney ran several transitions. Nikki Federle scored the first goal setting the pace. Kaitlin McGovern followed with back-to-back goals on either side of half time. Up 3 - 2 in the second half, Olivia Sanderson sealed it by netting the fourth goal.

White teams win

The Cohasset U11 White team traveled to Braintree on Sunday and played two separate 7 vs. 7 games. The White team allowed only one goal in both games combined. This week's offensive MVP's were Madeline Littlejohn and Marcella Flibotte. White's defensive MVP's were Margot Robbins and Elle Hanson.

he said. "He had two goals in the first half. He was only in his second day back from a broken hand. The attackers did a good job. Seven of our 10 goals came from the attack."

Curran said his bench earned playing time.

"The kids who don't play a lot work as hard as the kids who do," he said. "I wanted to get everyone involved."

Cohasset survived a challenge in the second quarter when they killed a pair of penalties that had them down two men for 30 seconds.

Dana Valentine and Alex Kinnealey both played well.

"Dana played great defense and Alex did a great job on faceoffs," Curran said.

Cohasset improved to 6-3 with the win.

Two of the team's losses were one-goal losses to Scituate and Xaverian, two of the top teams in the state. The other was against Duxbury, who hasn't lost a game to a Massachussets team in several years. That included a 99-game-and-counting win streak against said teams

The Skippers were back in action yesterday and have Norwood coming up.

"We're 6-3 now and we're ranked in the top 12 or 13 in the state," Curran said. "We gave Duxbury a decent game. As a team we're happy. We just need a little more offense from the midfield on the attack."

got out to swing until my wife decided she wanted to go hit baseballs.

After driving some pretty solid line drives with a regulation size Little League bat, yes I always like to swing something small and light, leaving me totally open to jokes (my teammates on a Florida team years ago laughed at my wooden Wade Boggs special toothpick until I broke it fouling off a pitch by a guy who had just been released by the Oakland A's because he was too wild, but that's a different story), I felt so good that I had to go back with the kids.

My seven-year-old daughter has never been into sports, so it was really fun to get in there and teach her how to take a good swing. I was even happier when she hit the ball pretty well the second time she tried. After she missed every pitch in her first try, it didn't look like she'd want to try again, but she did.

It was pretty nice to see.

Had a strange dream the other night. So strange that I actually worte it down when I woke up so I wouldn't forget.

I was walking along, minding my own business when I came upon a group of women playing either basecross or lacraseball.

It was an amazing combination of baseball and lacrosse.

Using a ball a little softer than either a lacrosse ball or a baseball, they were playin baseball, but the pitcher used a lacrosse stick to pitch.

Hitters used a baseball bat, but fielders all had lacrosse sticks. The rules were the same, but players could tag a runner out by poking them with the stick.

They could also throw the ball at a runner for an out.

It was actually fun to watch.

Give it a try sometime.

If people look at you like you're wearing a tin foil hat on your head, which I may or may not have been wearing in said dream, I had nothing to do with it. If it catches on, send those royalty checks . You know where to find me. I might even take off the hat.

in the world. She then went to Florida for a WPS combine. Shortly thereafter, St. Louis selected Cross in the draft.

"I really didn't want to get a job and stop playing," said Cross, who graduated from UConn in 2007. "As much as I like going overseas, I really didn't want to spend six months in Sweden. I liked it when I went. For me it was probably a good thing that I did go."

In Sweden, Cross played against some of the world's top soccer players, including Brazilian superstar Marta, who now plays for the Los Angeles Sol of the WPS.

"We played in the same city. My team was kind of the lower (than Marta's)," Cross said. "Their team kind of rolled over ours. She's so technical, so in tune with what's going on. She's a great player to watch, but (not) when you're playing against her."

Getting used to the language barrier while in Sweden didn't go as bad as one may think.

"When I was in Sweden, it wasn't too bad because a lot of the Swedish players, they spoke English," Cross said. "That was to my advantage. You pick up on little things like, 'man on.' You learn how to say that in Swedish. The whole concept of what they were saying in practice was hard because you would miss out on the whole point. Someone would translate it, but there was no exact translation, so you would miss a little."

"Our coaches don't speak any English," Cross said. "Our assistant coach does, and we have a translator, so things are slower. You're staring at him, saying, 'What did he say.' You kind of understand him, but he's literally speaking another language. But our translators will translate it, and we say, 'That doesn't make sense.' There's a lot of pointing, pulling the players here. He draws motivation out of you. He's awesome, so humble, and so knowledgeable about the game. He just loves it. You can see it every day in practice. The Brazilian players, it's interesting. One of them doesn't know any English, and you can see her slowly progressing and learning English, and that's awesome. You're having a conversation with her, and it's all actions, and you don't understand anything."

The daughter of Noel and Gerd, Cross was a four-year letter-winner and captain at Notre Dame Academy. Cross was named All-State, All-New England, All-American, McDonald's All-American and ODP All-American during the course of her high school career. She also played for Crusaders United, one of the most successful club soccer teams in Massachusetts. She also is a product of Pembroke Youth Soccer. Recently, prior to the start of the WPS season, Cross worked with Liz Lima at South Shore Select.

"I worked with their developmental program and their academy, which was great just. Watching how much they know at the age is just absurd," Cross said. "You underestimate them."

Cross' siblings also have a soccer background. Megan, 28, played for Boston University, as did Matt, 25, and Jon, 21, currently plays for the University of Massachusetts Boston. Cross said that in addition to her family, her brother-in-law John Hannon is a huge supporter.

"My family, they're great. They have more confidence in me than I do, so they always think I'm going to play, when for me, I'm trying to be realistic about it," she said. "They're so into supporting me. I think they bought 60 tickets (to last Saturday's Athletica game against Boston). I think they're very happy for me, and it's one more game they get to tailgate at."

Cross said she has yet to play in a regular season game (Athletica have only played two games thus far), but she said there's a chance she'll get on the field this season.

"The six-month season is so long, and our teams are so small," she said. "We have a lot of kids in and out with the national teams. I think for any of the players in the league, or in my kind of situation, there's room for getting your chance. I think it's such a competitive atmosphere. In the beginning I was playing in some of the scrimmages, and I've slowly been in and out in practice, but right now you kind of have to fill your role as a supporting teammate, doing the things you've got to do in practice."

Cross works as hard as she possibly can to earn a spot on the field. She knows that she's playing with the best of the best that the world has to offer.

"All the players that are playing, they started on their college teams and held that leadership role, and now it's like you've picked all the kids off of those teams and put them together," Cross said. "I think any of the players are definitely qualified. And it's not what you've done, it's what you're doing now."

Cross still said she can't believe she has been given the opportunity to play at such a high level with some of the best players in the world.

"It's awesome," she said. "Lori Chalupny, just watching her, and Hope Solo, they've got their gold medals, and now I'm playing on the same team with them. As much as it is a privilege, it's like 'I can play with people like this,' and it's kind of a cool thing to watch and a cool thing to compete with."

league that will feature the world's top soccer players.

"It's great for any profession, whether it's a sports profession, business profession, for young girls to see women doing things that they want to," said Kristine Lilly, a two-time Olympic gold medalist and member of two U.S. women's teams that won the World Cup. "Because if you don't see that, you tend to not think it's possible. So now that we have women's professional soccer back, these young girls can say, 'You know what, maybe I'll do that one day.' So they have that goal. Guys have that dream. They want to be in the NBA, they want to play professional baseball."

Lilly plays for the Boston Breakers, a team that calls Harvard Stadium home. The Breakers look to add to the lore of Boston sports, Lilly said. A midfielder/forward, Lilly has a ton of experience. She's the most capped U.S. soccer player (male and female) with 340 appearances.

"It's great to have women's soccer back because we need a women's sports team in Boston," Lilly said. "We're hoping to continue the tradition that the Boston teams have had so far and bring a championship here to Boston."

Breakers head coach Tony DiCicco has coached at the highest level and is the most successful U.S. national team coach. The former U.S. Women's National Team Head Coach, who led the U.S. to the 1996 Olympic gold medal and the 1999 World Cup victory, brings an unheralded 103-8-8 record to Boston.

"Boston's a great sports city, and we want to be part of the success every year Boston enjoys with their sports," DiCicco said. "There's a lot of talent in the league. I think we have players that can light it up. We have a lot of players who have been in big arenas and big matches before."

Locally, high school and college players and coaches are buzzing. The girls know they have something to aim for after college. They have the opportunity to fill one of more than 100 roster spots throughout the league rather than fighting for one of roughly two dozen spots on the U.S. national team.

Pembroke's Niki Cross is a prime example. She starred at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham before moving on to the University of Connecticut. This year, she was drafted by St. Louis Athletica of the WPS.

"I think it gives them motivation," Cross said. "They don't have to move on to that office job (after college). You still get to be a kid for an extended career. Another thing I think is great is that instead of looking up to male role models , younger kids have females to look up to, and they've been looking for a team (other than) the Revolution."

Duxbury High School Head Coach Emerson Coleman, who led the Lady Dragons to the Division 2 state title in the fall, said the WPS provides an opportunity for high school and college players to learn what it takes to play at such a high level.

"Now they have a chance to watch the game at an elite level and support them," Coleman said. "I think it's great for women's athletics and to have it locally. There's a chance that it's not the end of their dream. It's like the WNBA. Before that, there was no place (for female basketball players) to chase their dream. I think it's wonderful, and I hope they do a good job managing it."

That sentiment echoed throughout last month's Boston Breakers' press conference.

"Kids coming out of college, they have something to look forward to," said two-time Olympic gold medalist Heather Mitts. "For me, I only had male role models growing up. I think that's why we take advantage of the role that we're in now because we know how rare it is and how special it is."

Mitts has confidence that the league will survive this time around. The way the WUSA collapsed led to its suspension of play and the end of women's professional soccer here in the U.S. Back then, according to women on the Breakers, the league was owned by one entity, whereas now, each team has an individual owner. Add the level of talent that each team has - the Breakers' roster also includes Angela Hucles (midfielder) and Amy Rodriguez (forward), who played for the U.S. team that won gold at the 2008 Beijing Olympic Games.

"We know how great we can be, and I think it's a matter of gelling," Mitts said. "It's just a matter of the players that have been asked to come over here, the international players, the national team players, so we can be the best team in the league."

And that's exactly what Carver High School head girls soccer coach Jason Tassinari hopes. Tassinari, who coached Emerson College's women's soccer team from 2004-2007, looks forward to seeing the Breakers succeed this season.

"I'm very, very excited," said Tassinari, who also coaches Crusaders United club soccer teams on the South Shore. "It's giving girls female role models within their sport, which I think is important. "Having a professional team in your own backyard is so important. And the women's game is tremendously exciting to watch."

The Breakers opened their season April 5, losing, 2-1, to FC Gold Pride, a team featuring 1999 World Cup champion and two-time Olympic gold medalist Brandi Chastain. In its home opener this past Saturday, Boston beat St. Louis Athletica, 2-0, on goals from Lilly and Kelly Smith. The Breakers' next home game comes May 2 when they host the Los Angeles Sol.

During the preseason, the Breakers scrimmaged Boston College. Current Eagle and former Braintree High School phenom and two-time All-America selection Amy Caldwell said the game against the Breakers was, "an eye-opening experience."

"It's probably the highest level I've played in a while. I was impressed," she said. "I was definitely nervous, especially with Kristine Lilly out on the field, but once you the game got going, you forget about who you're going against."

Caldwell, who registered 112 goals and 58 assists and helped Braintree win two state titles during her four-year high school career, said she likes that soccer doesn't have to end in college.

"It's definitely exciting and just something else to be playing for," said Caldwell. "I would say the speed of play was the biggest difference (comparing college soccer to the professional level). Everything is played so fast. After playing them we worked on switching our point of attack."

Each WPS team is allowed to have five international players. The largest contingent in the league comes from Brazil, including superstar Marta. The Breakers have the female version of David Beckham in Kelly Smith, who played for the Arsenal Ladies in the English Women's Premier League and has served as a member of England's national team for the past 14 years.

"There are some of the best female players from all around the world to teach us their style of play so that we can continue to evolve our game," Mitts said. "Obviously when I'm practicing against Kelly Smith, and when I'm practicing against these players they're going to make me a better player. It just helps to make us better over."

Will the international players gel with the U.S. national team players and some of the best college soccer players this country has to offer? Will the Breakers become part of Boston's storied sports history and bring a championship to the city?

"There's going to be a lot of talent on every team, and I know that we really look good on paper," said Rodriguez, the league's number one draft pick. "But it's how it all comes together on the field."

RECREATION NOTES

Two-session Safe Boating Course offered to youth, adults

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit recreation@townofcohasset.org or call 781-383-4109.

USCGA Boating Safety Course, Paul Pratt Memorial Library – The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a two-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however, certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and younger who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. USCGA instructors will teach the course, which will take place from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturdays, May 2 and May 9, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library. To register, visit the Web site at cohassetrec.com, as soon as possible, as the class will be limited in size. There will be a $40 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the text book and class materials. Checks may be payable to the Town of Cohasset or register online at cohassetrec.com. While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children age 12 and younger be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of the class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal watercraft. State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

Sunday Afternoon Jam Sessions, Cohasset Recreation Center – Aspiring musicians can come down to the Recreation Center Sunday afternoons, from 4 to 6, and get together and play music. Music industry veteran and Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz is teaming up with Cohasset Recreation for the jam sessions. Thanks go to Crossroads Music of Hanover for this new program. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Amps and drums will be available on site provided by Crossroads Music. Cost is $6 per visit or an all-access pass of $20 for five weeks.

Kids Love Crafts, Recreation Center – This program, for children ages 2 through 4, will take place from 10 to 11 a.m., on Thursdays, May 7 through June 11. Cost of the six-week session is $60. This program will feature ooey, gooey arts and crafts, stories and songs. Watch children make a mess and have some fun as they create crafts. Space is limited to 10 children with a parent.

Red Sox Games – Join Cohasset Recreation and watch the Boston Red Sox play this year. Package price includes bleacher seats and roundtrip transportation. For Cohasset residents only, with a one-game limit per family with a maximum number of tickets of five within that immediate family. Price per person is $36. All games are at 7:05 p.m. Buses will leave Cohasset at 5:30 p.m. and return at approximately 10:30 p.m. Friday, May 8 versus Tampa Bay Rays. Tuesday, Sept. 15, versus LA Angels. Applications are available in the Recreation Office.

Yoga, Cohasset Town Hall – Hatha Yoga classes. Featured will be moving meditation including gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Meets Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. Cost is $8.

DAY TRIPS

New York, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Saturday, May 16 – This special trip to the Big Apple will give attendees a choice between spending the day in New York shopping and touring or admission to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Fee of $49 includes round-trip motor coach transportation, guide, and $69 with admission at the museum plus audio head sets. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6 a.m. and returns around 10:30 p.m.

Cabbage Island Clambake, Sunday, June 28 – Experience Maine's first and finest authentic Downeast Clambake. Fee of $119 includes round-trip motor coach transportation to Boothbay, round-trip boat transportation to the island, clambake and guide. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 7 a.m. and will return around 6 p.m.

Antique Appraisal Day to returns to Cohasset

Skinner, Inc. appraisers, including Stewart Whitehurst, are coming to Cohasset for the third annual Antique Appraisal Day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, April 25. People can bring in their antiques to be appraised or for large pieces, several good photographs can be used by the appraiser. Be sure to include photos of any special markings, numbers or other details that may assist in the appraisal process.

The event is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs and will take place at St Anthony's Parish Center, 10 Summer St.. Appraisals are $12 per item, or $30 for three items. Excluded items include coins, stamps, jewelry and musical instruments. A maximum of three items per individual will be allowed. Snacks and refreshments will be available to enjoy while waiting to meet with the appraiser.

Proceeds will help the efforts to make the dream of a new senior center a reality in Cohasset.

For more information, call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 or John Campbell, president of the Friends at 617-909-5687.

Zumba class offered

Zumba, the fastest growing fitness craze is coming to the American Legion. Join others for some steps and giggles from 7 to 8 p.m., on Tuesdays, and 6 to 7 p.m., on Thursdays. Classes will take place upstairs at the Legion, 98 Summer St. Cost is $10 a class.

Zumba is a dynamic class full of Latin and exotic music flavors. The routines feature aerobic interval training with a combination of fast and slow rhythms that tone and sculpt the body. It targets areas such as glutes, legs, arms, abs and the heart. It is a mixture of body sculpting movements and easy to follow dance steps. Don't worry, people don't have to know how to dance to Zumba.

5 ways to save money & the environment

- Go paperless. Pay bills online to save natural resources, save on late fees, save time & stamps.
- Use Direct Deposit. You save $5.88 in time & gas every time you deposit a check electronically. And you help save taxpayers 75 cents per government check direct deposited.
- Turn off your computer at night and save $90 on your electric bill per year, according to The Department of Energy.
- Stop idling. Waiting with the car running for more than 10 seconds uses more gas than starting it up again.
- Leave messages for family (or co-workers) on a dry-erase board instead of using sticky notes.

CMHS Jazz Night included a full repertoire

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

The entire event was a huge success and well received by the audience.

Last week, the Cohasset Middle High School hosted the annual Middle/High School Jazz Night. Both Jazz I and Jazz II participated, and they invited a professional guest jazz ensemble as well: the Rusty Scott Quartet. The event was held in the upper floor of the Cohasset High School lobby.

The Jazz II band, consisting of middle school students, performed first. They kicked off the evening with the Dixie jazz standard "Basin Street Blues." The piece had a swing tempo and featured soloists Robbie Hillman and Bobby Nahill, both on trumpet. The next piece was "All About the Blues," by Peter Blair, which featured the trumpets and piano throughout the piece. Soloists were Joe Buckley on the flute and Ben Williams on alto saxophone. "Yardbird Suite" by Charlie Parker, which featured the percussion and bass, switched gears to a bebop dimension. Trumpet soloists Harry Helbock, Julien Geyer, and Robbie Hillman were featured. The Basie-style piano tag at the end of the piece was very enjoyable and wrapped up the whole piece nicely. Before the final song for Jazz II, Mrs. Moriarty took time to explain that Jazz II is an intramural activity, with practice after school, showing the students' dedication. Jazz II wrapped up their evening with "Ain't Misbehavin" in which all the instrumental sections were nicely showcased, with soloists Anthony Nahill on alto saxophone and Zoe Meyers on piano. The Jazz II Ensemble gave a fantastic performance.

The Jazz I ensemble performed their set of songs next. Mrs. Moriarty took this opportunity to speak a little about what the students had done that day prior to the concert. Both ensembles worked with the Rusty Scott Quartet, learning jazz techniques. Ticket sales from the performance make it possible. Jazz I opened with "At The Buzzer," an upbeat swing tune with well-articulated dynamics. August Oddleifson and Mark Seraikas traded solos on the tenor saxophone, as did Andrew Littauer and Ian Porter on drums and percussion. The next piece was the classic "All The Things You Are," which had a laid back, tropical mood. Andrew Burnett (alto saxophone) and Conor Ofsthun (trumpet) opened the piece with a duet and Conor Ofsthun later soloed. The band followed with the Brazilian standard "Girl From Ipanema." The saxophones provided a driving beat beneath the rest of the band throughout the song. Soloists were Garrett Canney on trumpet and Austin Meyers on bass. Jazz I finished with Glenn Miller's "Little Brown Jug," a jazz classic. The piece had the upbeat swing of 1940s dance music. There were many soloists: August Oddleifson (tenor saxophone), Tucker Oddleifson (trumpet), Mark Seriakas (tenor saxophone), Jean Thomae (piano), Conor Ofsthun (trumpet), and Austin Meyers (bass). The whole repertoire was very well played.

There were a number of thanks were extended to Mr. Marks, Ms. Berkowitz, and the administration and faculty for their support of the arts. The annual C.P. Harvey Jazz Award, given in honor of jazz patron C. P. Harvey, was given to senior Conor Ofsthun. In addition to these awards, the five seniors in the ensemble extended their thanks to Mrs. Moriarty for her years of teaching them.

The Rusty Scott Quartet, the guest band for the day, performed a set. The quartet is comprised of Tim Mayer, a tenor saxophone player, Keala Kaumeheiwa, bass player, Steve Langone, drummer, and Rusty Scott, a pianist. They played some jazz songs with a lot of soloist improvisation. Their first piece, "Remember," featured each individual instrument in a very laid-back style. Their next piece, "The Lurker," an original, featured a lot of bass, giving it a slightly creepy, mysterious mood. They continued on to a rumba, with the piano providing a driving rhythm throughout the piece. In addition to this, there was an impressive drum solo. The Rusty Scott Quartet finished their set with an original piece: "Freezeout." It featured the saxophone particularly well.

The finale consisted of a combination of The Rusty Scott Quartet and a few members of the Jazz I ensemble. Each member in the combo ensemble was featured in a short solo. The members were (in addition to the Rusty Scott Quartet) Conor Ofsthun (trumpet), Garrett Canney (trumpet), Mark Seraikas (guitar), Will Wise (drums), August Oddleifson (tenor saxophone and clarinet), Austin Meyers (bass), Ian Porter (percussion), and Andrew Littauer (drums). They did an excellent job, with an impressive blending of original sound and rhythm. The final piece of the evening, performed by all of the bands (Jazz II and I and the Quartet), was "Scat Cat." It was swing jazz, with just a little bit of blues. There were some really outstanding soloists and the audience was on its' feet when they were done. The band even preformed an encore, called "Jam," with lots of solos and was conducted by Tim Mayer, saxophone player for the Quartet.

The entire event was a huge success and well received by the audience. Tim Mayer, the tenor saxophone player in the Rusty Scott Quartet, had this to say about the whole event: "I was really impressed with the program. It's hard to believe that it is only seven years old. The students are really focused and great to work with. It really was a joy."

CCD classes hold service drive

By Danielle Healy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently the ninth-grade CCD classes participated in a service drive collecting backpacks filled with daily necessities such as blankets, clothing and gift cards, and donated them to the Shattuck Shelter at Hope Found. Each backpack contained an inspirational message written by a CCD student from the Shattuck Shelter. The backpacks were distributed to help people living on the streets during this cold, winter season.

Two of the CCD teachers, Mrs. Lorraine Healy and Mrs. Janeen Culhane, and a few of the ninth-graders, Kyle, Christina, Danielle Healy and Erika Botts, delivered the backpacks. The heartbreaking faces scattered around the room seemed to glow with a warming smile and thankful eyes as the backpacks arrived. Seeing this firsthand validated that the small deed done by the ninth grade class was a big help and support to all these people.

Homeless people around New England were given warm clothes to wear, a meal ticket to look forward to, and a chance for survival in this cold winter. If you would like to help the Shattuck Shelter, look for the ninth grade CCD Flip-Flop and Running Attire Drive in the upcoming months. Just by helping out you're giving someone the love and support they need to start getting back to a fulfilling life.

HAPPENINGS

Deer Hill student art show

"Favorites 2009," the Deer Hill Student Art Show, will be on view April 29 through May 21. A Gala Art Opening will take place at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, April 29, at the school, 208 Sohier St., Cohasset.

The exhibit represents the artwork of all Deer Hill students. Each student has chosen his/her favorite artwork of the year to be included in this exhibit. There will be refreshments and music. Admission is free and all are invited to attend.

In addition to the art show, Deer Hill will be celebrating the grand unveiling of a permanent clay installation created by Deer Hill fifth grade students, and the premiere of the video documentary, "Hats for Rosie's Place."

For more information, call Ann Berman, art teacher, at 781-383-6115.

Outreach program on cancer in women

Friends of Dana-Farber Cancer Institute invite women from the South Shore to a community outreach program from 10 a.m. to noon, on Tuesday, April 28, at South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road. Featured speaker will be Dr. Ursula Matulonis, chief of gynecological oncology.

Dr. Matulonis will share with attendees the progress and hope for a cure for women's cancers. Accompanying her will be Janet Porter, chief operating officer of Dana-Farber who will speak about the new Dana-Farber/South Shore Hospital Oncology Center. The morning program will include a film clip from ABC News' Charlie Gibson, featuring the children in the Jimmy Fund Clinic and the steelworkers building at the new Yawkey Center at DFCI. A light brunch will be served.

Music scholarship

In celebration of its 50th anniversary season, Choral Art Society is pleased to announce the William T. Adams Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship, created in honor of our founder, will be awarded to a graduating senior student from the South Shore who plans to pursue music as a major in college.

This year, the scholarship award will be in the amount of $1,000. The opportunity to apply is being offered to students in the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton, and Scituate. The socieity will consider students applying for further study of music in all areas of concentration – conducting, history, literature and theory, performance, music management and merchandising, theory and composition, etc.

The recipient of the scholarship will be announced on May 30th at a gala performance of Mendelssohn's St. Paul, a Choral Art Society undertaking in conjunction with the Braintree Choral Society and accompanied by the Braintree Festival Orchestra, to be presented at Thayer Academy's new Center for the Arts in Braintree. The winner may be invited to perform at our winter concert in December '09. The award will be disbursed after successful completion of the first semester of the student's freshman year as a music major.

Kitchen tour

Spectacular kitchens in a number of distinctive Hingham residences will be on exhibit during the Roomscapes Luxury Design Center's (RLDC) Hingham Luxury Kitchen Tour, Saturday, May 9. All proceeds from the tour will support South Shore Art Center's exhibitions and education programs. The tour begins at 9:30 a.m. when ticketholders will register and tour the new RLDC showroom in Rockland. Artwork, provided by South Shore Art Center Gallery Artists has been incorporated into the design center and will be on display. Cameron Snyder, CKD, will present a slideshow with photos of the "2009 National Design Kitchen Contest Winners & Design Trends," at 10:15. The kitchen tour will take place from 11 a.m.-1 p.m.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
APRIL 20, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're doing better on the flexibility issue, but you still need to loosen up a bit to show you can be less judgmental and more understanding about certain sensitive matters.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your personal aspect continues to dominate this week. But try to make time to deal with important career-linked matters as well. A change of plans might occur by the weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Excuses are not really needed for much of the confusion occurring this week. However, explanations from all parties could help in working things out to everyone's satisfaction.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That surprising (but pleasant) recent turn of events continues to develop positive aspects. But be prepared for a bit of a jolt on another issue that needs attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Creating a fuss might bring you that attention you want. But are you prepared for all the explaining you'd have to do? Better to use more subtle ways to make your bid.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With education continuing to be a strong factor this week, this could be the time to start learning some new skills that can later be applied to a bid for a potential career move.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might do well to reconsider some of your current time priorities before you get so deeply involved in one project that you neglect meeting a deadline on another.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) With an important decision looming, you need to be careful about the information you're getting. Half-truths are essentially useless. Get the full story before you act.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Find out what everyone's role is expected to be before accepting that workplace proposal. Getting all the facts now could prevent serious problems later on.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A flexible position on a workplace matter could be the best course to follow during the next several days. A personal issue also benefits from an open-minded approach.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Involving too many people in your workplace problem can backfire. Remember: Allegiances can shift. Ask trusted colleagues for advice, but don't ask them to take sides.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Before submitting your suggestions, take more time to sharpen the points you want to make. The clearer the presentation, the more chance it has to get through when submitted.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your clear sense of who you are gives you confidence when you need to tackle difficult situations.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Gretchen Peters performs at Driftwood Cafe

Grammy-nominated singer-songwriter Gretchen Peters along with opening act Lisa Martin will perform Saturday, April 25, at the Driftwood Folk Cafe in Kendall Hall at First Parish Church in downtown Plymouth. In addition to having penned some of today's best known songs (Martina McBride's "Independence Day" and Faith Hill's "The Secret of Life"), Peters has released seven solo albums that have been embraced by critics and fans on both sides of the Atlantic.

The show begins at 7:30 p.m. Tickets cost $20 and can be purchased at www.driftwoodfolkcafe.com.

"I think great songs are born," Peters said. "They are born with all the urgency of childbirth, born out of pain, anger, joy, wit, and delivered by instinct, skill and love."

Gretchen Peters

It is this passion for the song that fuels all facets of a career that has brought Peters to the Grammys twice as a songwriter, won her a CMA Song of the Year award for the groundbreaking "Independence Day" and taken her on repeated sold-out tours across the UK and Ireland.

Peters' compositions have been recorded by such musicians as Bonnie Raitt, Bryan Adams, George Strait, Shania Twain, Billy Ray Cyrus, Lee Ann Womack, Martina McBride, Carrie Underwood, Alabama, Trisha Yearwood and Faith Hill.

"This is not jukebox music – the stuff that exists to fill in the pauses in conversation. This is the conversation," Associated Press said.

"If Peters never delivers another tune as achingly beautiful as 'On a Bus to St. Cloud'... she has already earned herself a spot among country's upper echelon of contemporary composers," according to People magazine.

In 2004, Peters caught the ear of folk legend Tom Russell and he invited her to sing on his next two projects, introducing her to a new audience of folk fans in the USA and Canada. Peters released Burnt Toast and Offerings in August 2007. A holiday album, Northern Lights, was released in late 2008, followed quickly in early 2009 by a collection of songs about the West entitled One to the Heart, One to the Head, another collaboration with Russell, which is already achieving cult status in folk and Americana circles. Circus Girl: The Best of Gretchen Peters is due out in Europe May 11.

Recession-priced NYC: Big Apple serves up big deals

Jenny Miller
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Times may be tight, but bargains abound in the Big Apple this year. The city that never sleeps was, in recent years, also a city that was seldom cheap. However, with local billfolds rendered slimmer and the once-frenzied influx of tourist dollars having slowed, New York is currently teeming with prix fixe restaurant deals, deep retail discounts and slashed hotel rates. As evidenced by the ubiquitous signs advertising sales and specials, if you've got anything to spend, it will go a lot further in New York now than it would have even a year ago. Read on for deals and resources. As specials may change, it's a good idea to call ahead to confirm prices.

The Empire State Building is among attractions everyone wants to see.

Dining

From the made-to-order, four-for-a-dollar Chinese fried dumplings at Vanessa's Dumpling House to the suddenly timely "Recession Special" at hot dog purveyor Gray's Papaya (two dogs and a fruity drink for $4.45), bargain seekers in New York have never had a shortage of ways to fill their bellies. However, even offerings at the other end of the spectrum have seen reductions recently. It's still not cheap, but for those who want to splurge, the nine-course tasting menu at Mario Batali's opulent Del Posto recently went from $175 to $125. And though the twice yearly Restaurant Week has ended its winter session, a number of places have kept their prix fixe bargain menus and many spots are upping the service ante, offering bite-sized hors d'oeuvres, a complimentary glass of bubbly and even "pre-desserts" on the house. Apiary, a sleekly designed newish spot with an emphasis on seasonal, local cuisine, is offering its $35 three-course dinner menu Monday through Thursdays until Labor Day, with no corkage fee for those who want to BYOB on Monday nights. And haute Chinese newcomer Shang, housed on the second floor of the design-conscious new Thompson LES hotel, lets "starving artists" order a $35 menu at the bar lounge every night, in the dining room all night Mondays and Tuesdays, and from 6 to 7:30 p.m. other nights. A perennial good deal is the burger at Burger Joint, housed somewhat incongruously in a wood-paneled enclave with vinyl booths, shrouded behind curtains at the otherwise ritzy Le Parker Meridien hotel; $7 buys an acclaimed cheeseburger.

Entertainment

The TKTS booth is one of the ways to score discounted tickets to Broadway shows — half-price the day of. Many travelers already know about the Times Square location, but for less jostling and sometimes better selection, check out the South Street Seaport booth. Off Broadway and off-off Broadway are nearly always a good deal — pick up a copy of Time Out New York (on newsstands), or visit that magazine's Web site (www.timeout.com/newyork) to see what's playing. Through June 28, the Public Theater's Public Lab is staging a series of pared-down $10 productions. Another good resource is the city's newly launched official visitors' site NYCgo.com, where the "Deal-o-Matic" feature has some reduced-price theater tickets, along with discounts on tours and museum admission. Many museums offer free or discounted entry on certain days and times. At the sprawling Metropolitan Museum of Art, the suggested donation is $20, but the official policy is to pay what you wish. Friday afternoons are a good time to view contemporary art — the Museum of Modern Art has free admission from 4 to 8 p.m., and the Guggenheim Museum invites you pay what you wish from 5:45 to 8 p.m.

Accommodations

Hotel rooms can be one of the biggest hurdles to an affordable New York visit — and even at reduced prices, room rates will still likely cause sticker shock. Inquire while booking about specials such as a third night free, as many hotels are using this sort of value-added promotion, rather than slashing rates outright. Rooms at the venerable Waldorf Astoria, near Central Park, could be had at press time for around $200 per night by booking through Expedia (www.expedia.com). The W Hotel Union Square's contemporary downtown digs can also be had at special rates; the buy-one-get-one special offered on the hotel's Web site lets you save 50 percent on a second night for each full-price night you book, putting rates around $250 per night. Scour the travel Web sites for truly budget offerings and deals that may not be available by booking directly through hotels. A good one to try is hotelconxions.com, which has a number of one- and two-star places below $200 and even at $100 per night.

Frugal fashion

The best way to keep up with up-to-the-minute sales and special deals is through shopping Web sites such as Racked.com, which posts its "Dealfeed" updates several times a day. New York Magazine's fashion blog the Cut (nymag.com/daily/fashion) also has a daily "Deals and Sales" entry that posts each morning and charts discounts for the coming few days. Refinery29.com is another site to try, and the truly devoted can sign up there to have sale updates sent to their in-boxes. Find more travel features and the Get Away with Fran blog at www.wickedlocal.com/travel.

IF YOU go...

GETTING THERE: Delta (www.delta.com), Continental (www.continental.com), Jet Blue(www.jetblue.com) and US Airways (www.usairways.com) all offer direct flights from Boston to New York. A quick scan of travel Web sites at press time yielded prices as low as $69 each way. Though it's not much cheaper than flying, Amtrak (www.amtrak.com) is a lower-hassle option for a short trip, and since the train takes you right into the city you can avoid having to pay a taxi fare from the airport. Springtime Amtrak fares start at $62 each way. Another option is the LimoLiner (www.limoliner.com), a bus service from Boston to New York, with fares $69 to $89 each way — the fancy buses have leather seats, lots of legroom, movies shown on personal screens and laptop hookups. And if your eye is firmly to the bottom line, opt for the so-called "Chinatown bus," also known as Lucky Star bus lines (www.luckystar.com), which travels hourly from Boston's South Station Bus Terminal to New York's Chinatown starting at just $15 each way.
EATING THERE: Try Apiary (60 Third Ave.; 212-254-0888; www.apiarynyc.com); Burger Joint (118 W. 57th St., behind curtains in Le Parker Meriden hotel lobby; 212-708-7414; www.parkermeridien.com); Del Posto (85 Tenth Ave.; 212-497-8090; www.delposto.com); Gray's Papaya (various locations around the city); Shang (187 Orchard St., in the Thompson LES hotel; 212-260-7900; http://shangnyc.com); Vanessa's Dumpling House (118 Eldridge; 212-625-8008).
EXPLORING THERE: Guggenheim Museum (1071 Fifth Ave.; 212-423-3500; www.guggenheim.org); Metropolitan Museum of Art (1000 Fifth Ave.; 212-535-7710; www.metmuseum.org); Museum of Modern Art (11 W. 53rd St.; 212-397-6980; www.moma.org); Public Theater's Public Lab (212-967-7555 for tickets and information; www.publictheater.org); TKTS, visit www.tdf.org/TKTS.
STAYING THERE: For the W Union Square, check deals online at www.starwoodhotels.com/whotels, or call 866-924-8746 and mention promo code ZBT. For The Waldorf Astoria, visit www.waldorfastoriacollection.com; or call 212-355-3000.

No decision on wind turbines

Lengthy deliberation yields no conclusion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Five hours of deliberation, four motions proposed, three Planning Board members seemingly in favor of the two-wind turbine project, two huge wind turbines proposed for off Route 3A, one Planning Board member only willing to approve the project with one turbine and, at the end of the night, no decision.

Despite what seemed to be a 3-1 split decision on approving the project as it was submitted, the Planning Board hesitated to take that leap. Because of the town's zoning bylaws, anything less than a unanimous vote on approving the project will effectively deny it.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, CCI-Energy, is proposing the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber.

The project requires a special permit from the Planning Board and a "super majority," four out of five members agreeing for approval, is needed for approval. In the case of this project filing, former Planning Board member Mike Westcott is no longer on the board and because recently elected Planning Board member Jean Healey Dippold did not sit as an elected official at all the hearings, which date back to September, she cannot vote. That means in order to approve the project, the remaining four members mush be in agreement.

As the clock struck midnight, one motion was finally approved: a motion to continue deliberation to this coming Wednesday, May 6 at approximately 8p.m.

The Planning Board spent several Community Garden Club celebrates anniversary

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If there ever was a stereotype for members of a garden club, it would probably be a group of ladies with hats on sitting around drinking tea.

But, members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset say that is simply not the case for their active group.

"We're hard working; we give back to the community," said long-time member Nancy Gilmore.

"We're down and dirty in the dirt, so to speak," chimes in Leonora Jenkins, current president of the Community Garden Club, which gets a chuckle from her fellow garden club members. "There's a great diversity of age, talent and interest."

Selectmen: Keno not in the public interest

Town to appeal DiNero's license

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town is going to take on the Lottery Commission.

A majority of the Board of Selectmen voted to appeal the decision of the state Lottery Commission that granted DiNero's Restaurant a Keno license.

The Selectmen felt a Keno license would not enhance DiNero's already successful, established business and adding gambling to the predominately residential neighborhood would not be in the public interest.

Neighbors of the adjacent Grace Drive neighborhood where some homes overlook DiNero's reiterated their longstanding issues with the traffic, parking and noise levels associated with the restaurant.

"The introduction of Keno is going to exacerbate the problem," said Mary Fran Olson of 800 Jerusalem Road. "I hope we can prevent this from happening."

Maria Plante of 798 Jerusalem Road said she was surprised when this decision came down.

"It's confusing that the state can completely disregard what I call home rule," said Plante. A long-time resident, Plante said parking, particularly on a Saturday night, is "absolutely horrendous."

"Traffic and noise are still big concerns," said Plante.

The issue of licensing Keno, a state lottery game, at DiNero's has been going on since 2002. The Board of Selectmen in both 2002 and 2005 objected to the installation of Keno at DiNero's primarily due to abutters' concerns and traffic and parking congestion. At the end of April, the state Lottery Commission overturned the town's decision and granted DiNero's a Keno license.

There is one other Keno licensed establishment in town — Cohasset Food Mart convenience store on Route 3A.

In 2002, the Selectmen declined approval of DiNero's Keno and the Lottery Commission upheld their decision in 2004. Later that year, DiNero's

Town prepared for swine flu

Emergency plans are in place

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If necessary, Cohasset health officials are ready.

With lots swirling in the news about the swine flu, health officials say they are prepared and are keeping on top of the latest reports about the disease.

Judy Fitzsimmons, retired public health nurse who was filling in for public health nurse Mary Goodwin on Wednesday, said emergency plans have been in place in the event of a pandemic flu for several years.

"We will follow the lead of the Department of Public Heath and implement our emergency plans," said Fitzsimmons. "We are as prepared as anyone."

There are now five confirmed cases of swine flu in New England.

In the two Massachusetts cases, two school-aged children in Lowell contracted the disease while vacationing in Mexico last week. According to state health officials, the children's cases were mild, they remained at home and were expected to make a full recovery.

Massachusetts was the sixth state to have confirmed cases of swine flu; one American in Texas, a toddler, has died of the swine flu.

A legion of volunteers, who regularly help with the town's flu clinic in the fall, stand at the ready if a swine flu outbreak comes closer to home.

"We'll be able to implement the emergency plan very quickly," said Fitzsimmons.

On Tuesday, Fitzsimmons said Goodwin was out delivering information packets to strategic locations in town — the schools, the library, day care centers and long-term care facilities. Local medical offices are being kept notified and understand how to test for the swine flu.

POLICE BEAT

Solicitors come back with the spring

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

One of the signs of spring in Cohasset is the onslaught on door-to-door solicitors. The police log continues to be peppered with complaints about unregistered solicitors in town.

Lt. William Quigley said the Cohasset bylaw that requires certain solicitors to register with the police can be a deterrent once the word gets out. He said most of the companies that hire these solicitors simply move on to another town when they learn they must register.

A registered solicitor should be wearing an oversized paper badge on a halyard that includes his or her photograph, the town seal, the signature of Police Chief James Hussey, and an expiration date.

Police encourage residents to call them if an unregistered solicitor arrives in their neighborhood.

Police encourage residents to call them if an unregistered solicitor arrives in their neighborhood. Problem areas include Hull Street and part of Jerusalem Road near the Hull line where the town line is not clearly marked.

The Cohasset bylaw requires solicitors to register with the police where they can apply for a $25 license. Solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

CHIEF OF POLICE

OUI arrests

• At 10:39 p.m. on Wednesday (April 22), police arrested the 62-year-old operator of a 2004 black Saab for drunk driving. An officer observed the car going twice the speed limit of 25 mph and crossing over the double yellow line along S. Main Street. The officer stopped the car and after talking with the operator, a Scituate resident, determined he had been drinking. The man failed field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest for OUI (alcohol), marked lanes violation and speeding.

• At 6:48 p.m. on Saturday (April 28), a 61-year-old Weymouth man was arrested for drunk driving (third offense), police said. An officer was at the Gulf Station when a motorist told the officer about an erratic operator northbound on Route 3A. The officer radioed ahead and another officer pulled over the 1998 Nissan Altima. In conversation with the driver, the officer determined he had been consuming alcohol. He was arrested for OUI (third offense), which is a felony, punishable by prison time. He was held over the weekend at the police station and was arraigned on Monday.

Turtle sensors

A concerned caller notified police at about 11:30 a.m. on Thursday (April 23) that there were two men walking along Route 3A dressed in camouflage and carrying shotguns. As it turned out, the men were monitoring spotted turtles along the Greenbush line, as required for environmental purposes, police said. The men were carrying a tracking antenna that the caller mistook for a shotgun. Some of the turtles have been equipped with sensors so they can be tracked.

Dog walker

A concerned resident notified police right away on Saturday night when her motion detector went off. Investigation revealed the detector was inadvertently set off by a neighbor walking a dog along the street, police said.

Car towed

A 2003 GMC Envoy was towed from the parking lot behind the library on Thursday night (April 23) when the officer ran a registry check that showed the registration was expired. The car belongs to a Cohasset woman.

Bike found

Police have custody of another abandoned bicycle. This bike, which was found behind the library on Thursday (April 23) at 11:19 p.m., is a Fuji, and is black, yellow and red, police said.

Graffiti

Police are investigating vandalism to the bridge on Gammons Road on which a vandal painted graffiti.

A Gammons Road resident reported the incident on Friday (April 24) at 8:46 a.m. Black spray paint was used, police said.

Break-in

An office belonging to an electronics business in the First Fitness building off King Street (Route 3A) was broken into last Friday (April 24), police said. The door was pried open and someone went through the office. It does not appear that anything was stolen but the incident remains under investigation.

Party animal

In what appears to be a bizarre joke of some sort, police found a dead raccoon on the sidewalk on Brook Street on Saturday morning (April 24) at 10 a.m. Someone had put boxer shorts on the raccoon, a necktie and a sign that said "party animal." There were no visible signs of trauma on the animal so police are not sure how it died. However, touching a dead, wild animal can expose a person to a range of diseases.

Neighbor dispute

A 79-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court on an assault and battery charge after he allegedly threw a bucket of water across a fence at his neighbor, a 37-year-old woman. The incident is the latest in an ongoing neighborhood dispute, police said.

Bike stolen

A 42-year old Atlantic Avenue man reported the theft of a red, 21-speed bike valued at $2500 from his garage on Saturday (April 25). There did not appear to be forced entry to the garage. The incident is being investigated.

MV crash

A 76-year-old Hingham man driving a 1998 Infiniti pulled in front of an oncoming 2002 Toyota at the intersection of N. Main Street and Forest Avenue on Saturday causing an accident, police said.

The Infiniti was headed north on King Street toward Forest Avenue. The Toyota was headed down Forest toward the intersection, when the Infiniti made the left. The Hingham man was cited for failure to grant the right of way. He was transported to the hospital with what appeared to be minor injuries. A 43-year-old Cohasset woman drove the Toyota. Both cars were towed.

GPS stolen

An overnight guest at the Red Lion who is from Oklahoma City reported to police that the portable GPS unit was stolen from his 2009 Kia, a rental car. He reported the theft at 12:42 p.m. on Sunday (April 26). The GPS unit is valued at $300, police said.

Gobble, gobble

A South Main Street caller reported hearing what he thought was a woman screaming from behind his house. Officers investigated S. Main, Castle Road and surrounding areas and found nothing. An officer stood by and later determined the noise was wild turkeys, police said.

This time of year, groups of bachelor gobblers will rejoin up with hens and form large groups as the mating season begins. The voice of the wild turkey is loud. Males produce a heavy "gobbling" noise. Male and female wild turkeys also use a variation of calls to express fear, call young, and signal others.

hours going through the town's wind energy conversion facility zoning bylaw and other relevant zoning bylaw section by section. While most of the items were easy to determine if the application complied, or could be conditioned, it was no surprise the big issues discussed during the public hearing process were the ones the Planning Board had the hardest time coming to a conclusion on. Namely visual impact, noise and shadow flicker were the topics the Planning Board delved into the most.

As the clock struck midnight, one motion was finally approved: a motion to continue deliberation to this coming Wednesday, May 6 at approximately 8 p.m.

The biggest issue for the board, and in particular vice chair Stuart Ivimey, was the noise impacts. Of all the impacts associated with the turbine project, the wind bylaw gives the most specific and objective guidelines when it come to noise — the project cannot increase the ambient noise levels by 10 decibels or more.

Ivimey said he was not convinced by the analysis presented by the applicant.

"Something was always a little bit wrong," said Ivimey. He did not trust the sound data was correct or would meet the standards of the bylaw once the turbines were built. "The onus is on the applicant to prove something to us and that burden was not met."

However, Ivimey said allowing one turbine, the rear one, to be built would resolve any problem he had with noise impacts, as well as the majority of his safety concerns and minimize the visual impact on the town.

"I feel very strongly…I will find it very, very difficult to vote for both turbines," said Ivimey.

That being the case he moved to approve the project with the condition only the rear turbine be built. The applicant, who was sitting in the front row, was not allowed to comment on whether they would be amenable to a one-turbine project.

From the outset, Chairman Al Moore said he desired the decision to be unanimous either way it went – with an approval or denial.

After several minutes of discussion, Ivimey's one-turbine approval motion was not seconded.

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson proposed they approve the project as it had been presented, with two 100-meter, 328-foot wind turbines. His motion was seconded by member Clark Brewer.

However, the motion never proceeded to an official vote. It seemed clear that Samuelson, Brewer and Moore were willing to vote in favor of the motion. Ivimey made it clear he was not going to change his mind.

"I wanted so much to like this project…I wanted nothing more to see the town generate some of its own energy. I feel so bad for the applicants and Paul Barry (the owner of the property). The sound engineer let you guys down terribly," said Ivimey. "Big things like this do not create less problems than predicted, they create more. We want to be as conservative and protective as possible."

The process and the ensuing long periods of silence was almost comical, at times dramatic, and frustrating for everyone in the room as the Planning Board mulled over the options and the reality of the decision sunk in.

Chairman Moore leaned back in his chair and pulled at his hair. Samuelson made his best persuasive effort to convince Ivimey that he should trust the experts, particularly on the noise data. Ivimey listened, but remained resolute. Clark Brewer stared intently at whoever was speaking.

Exasperated and tired audience members who had sat through nearly five hours of the deliberation vocally begged the Planning Board to "get it over with" and vote on the project tonight. When Samuelson brought up a motion to continue deliberation to next week, the remaining audience of about five residents audibly groaned and protested.

Even Ivimey seemed frustrated in his fellow board members lack of proceeding to a vote, "I'm not playing poker here…I'm not offing is my point," he said. He was answered with silence. "We're kind of out of options here."

More silence.

Town Counsel Rick Hucksam stepped in, "what this is saying is you are not ready to vote, you're not ready to act."

Samuelson reiterated his motion to continue deliberation until next Wednesday, it was seconded by Moore and approved 3-1 (Ivimey was the nay vote).

After the meeting, the project applicant CCI-Energy Jim Sweeney expressed disappointment in the proceedings.

"We are disappointed we were not given the opportunity and the Planning Board was not given the opportunity to clarify the sound study," said Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy.

Wind bylaw needs changes

Residents propose special town meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"The spirit is still there and we'll try to do something…this is not supposed to be an argumentative us-against-them process…"
— Conrad Langenhagen, Sanctuary Pond Road

Wind turbines have been the hot topic in Cohasset for a number of months. As more information came out on the two-turbine project currently before the Planning Board many have called into question the zoning bylaw that allowed it to happen.

To that point, two citizens came before Selectmen on Monday to request a Special Town Meeting to entertain the complete withdrawal of the wind energy conversion facility bylaw. The proposal also suggested placing a moratorium on all future wind turbine project applications until the bylaw could be rewritten.

Conrad Langenhagen and Jeff Patterson, both of Sanctuary Pond Road and members of a resident group called the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee, were the proponents of the request.

"We know anything we do now would not affect the current project, but we've learned a lot about wind turbines during this process. I think we've all had our eyes opened a lot," said Langenhagen, who has been a vocal opponent of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project for myriad reasons from safety to possible negative effects on property values.

After getting a lukewarm response from the Selectmen and other speakers, Langenhagen and Patterson decided to withdraw their request and reconsider the best way to approach the issue.

According to a written proposal sent to the Selectmen by Lori Langenhagen, the withdrawal of the bylaw would allow the town to draft a new zoning bylaw that addresses many of "shortfalls" in the current version. The outline suggests the bylaw has several subjective measures and does not provide adequate criteria to protect the town from visual impacts, safety hazards, noise, or shadow flicker.

Patterson said the bylaw does not address the state's Green Communities Act, particularly in the how the project should and could benefit the town. In talking to both turbine supporters and non-supporters, Patterson said both points of view felt if the town is giving up some of its natural beauty, there should be a direct benefit to the town.

"We want to come up with some constructive solutions…call a time out, learn from other towns putting up turbines, see how the Green Communities Act shakes out and reconsider the bylaw," said Patterson.

Selectman Fred Koed did not see the urgency in calling a Special Town Meeting because as far as he knew there were few other swaths of land capable of siting a turbine and most, if not all, were town-owned. He said the town was not in the financial position to move on building a wind turbine in the near future.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer did see the urgency and the shortfalls in the bylaw. In particular, it falls short in its protection of the very essence of Cohasset — its aesthetic appeal. At the start of the wind turbine conversation a few years ago, he said any turbines were envisioned to be built and maintained by the town.

"Over a period of time, (the bylaw) evolved to where none of those initial thoughts are in the current bylaw," said Dormitzer. According to the master plan developed in the early 2000s, the aesthetic character of the town was the most valued quality.

"(In this bylaw) no consideration is given to that essential vision…we are ignoring it with this project that has a 450-foot tower," said Dormitzer. "We need a moratorium."

It seemed Dormitzer stood alone in his support for a bylaw revision and moratorium on wind turbine projects.

Selectman Vice Chair Karen Quigley said this request was "jumping the gun" and could set a bad precedent.

"The Planning Board has given careful consideration to the points brought up (by residents in the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project)…and whether the bylaw can be work is still being determined," said Quigley, adding a suggestion to rewrite the zoning bylaw would be more appropriately done with the Planning Board which oversees zoning bylaw development.

Patterson said their effort was not intended as a shot at the Planning Board, rather a realization that the bylaw is not perfect and could be improved upon.

"We want to try to change and improve the standard so the Planning Board can have a better tool to apply to a project application," said Patterson.

Andrew Willard, chairman of the Alternative Energy Committee, defended the wind bylaw. He said many other towns in Massachusetts have approved turbines without even having a wind turbine specific bylaw.

"Cohasset has gone well beyond the needs of other towns," said Willard. "Changing the bylaw after the fact is changing it so no project can come forward," said Willard.

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson said his board would not be adverse to working over a period of time to amend some aspects of the bylaw, but felt the concerns of residents could and would be adequately addressed in the current bylaw and with the current project.

Ken Ingber, the attorney representing CCI-Energy, the developer of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project, said the Langenhagens and Patterson had been "vociferous in their comments and opposition of the project." He seemed to imply they might have ulterior motives to their request for a bylaw rewrite.

Immediately following Ingber's comments, Patterson said they would withdraw their proposal for a Special Town Meeting.

"We brought this forward in good faith and we tried to do it in a way that would be constructive, now we are being accused of having ulterior motives," said Patterson, who thanked the board for their time and consideration.

"The spirit is still there and we'll try to do something…this is not supposed to be an argumentative us-against-them process, I think we all want to look out for the best interests of Cohasset, both collectively and individually," said Langenhagen.

Any citizen can call a Special Town Meeting by gathering the signatures of 200 registered voters. An article can be placed on a Special Town Meeting warrant with 100 signatures.

After the meeting, Langenhagen said he wasn't sure what the next action would be.

"Primarily anything we do we want to do it in a collaborative way," said Langenhagen. "We want to make sure whatever we do is done right."

Posing with one of the refurbished windows that would be put into place in the old part of the Cohasset Town Hall last Friday are form left David Campbell, David Farrag (chairman the Town Hall Restoration Committee), Greg Campbell and David Wadsworth (town archivist).

A window into Town Hall restoration

The preliminary restoration of the outside portions of the Cohasset Town Hall is under way. The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee received a grant of $300,000 from the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) at Town Meeting Approval in 2008.

The restoration project includes the historic windows (most of which are the originals from the late 1800s) along with improvements to the gutters, chimney, pilasters, drainage, and front roof.

In 2006, the Cohasset Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee was created and charged with overseeing the feasibility study for the old portion of the town hall to review the usage of space, functionality and make recommendations for improvements. The current restorations are preliminary and distinct from the plan for a full renovation of the inside, which envisions more useable space and a complete update of the facility.

The Committee is currently exploring multiple funding sources including federal stimulus funds.

Campbell Construction of Peabody, Massachusetts, is completing the current restoration work. Campbell Construction was the winning bidder for the project and is well known for its restoration of town halls and historic buildings in other parts of Massachusetts. Campbell Construction most notably restored the Edgartown Lighthouse on Martha's Vineyard. The restorations are expected to be complete by early summer.

Dan Paquette of Peabody, an employee of Campbell Construction, tests the workings of a refurbished window in the old part of Town Hall.

Democrats host yard sale for scholarships

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its annual yard sale at 23 Hill St. from 8 a.m. to noon, Saturday, May 16. This annual yard sale has been run by the Committee for many years to raise scholarship money for Cohasset High School graduates. Cohasset students graduating from schools other than Cohasset High School are also encouraged to apply. Scholarship applications may be picked up at the guidance office at Cohasset High School.

The Scholarship Committee will choose a worthy student to receive scholarships from the Democratic Town Committee and award these students with their scholarships on Class Night at Cohasset High School.

Donations for the yard sale of items in good condition, with the exception of clothing, will be gladly received at the above address each weekend beginning May 2nd and 3rd from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. until Friday, May 15th. Items may also be dropped off from 6 to 9 p.m. weekdays starting May 4th. In past years Cohasset residents have generously donated such items as: books, kitchen ware, furniture, baby equipment and small furniture, bedding, paintings and small boats. Call Donna McGee at 383-9115 to arrange for an item to be picked up.

Real 'American Girl' in fashion show benefit

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HURRAY FOR MAY!

Hello Cohasset. The weather is so nice these days, hooray! Happy beginning to the month of May, Cohasset!

FASHION SHOW

For the second year in a row, Plimoth Plantation invited girls to audition for the American Girl Fashion Show at Plimoth Plantation. More than 150 girls tried out for a spot on the runway, and 55 girls were chosen, including Freya Roberts of Cohasset.

The living history museum played host to the American Girl Fashion Show, Friday through Sunday, April 24 to 26. The program showcased a runway of historical and contemporary fashions for girls and their dolls.

Local models, like Freya, presented the fashions, while commentary, music and decorations created a memorable experience for girls and their families.

In addition to the show, a tea, including an array of sandwiches and sweets was served in a tent setting as guests learned how styles have been influenced and transformed over the years to reflect history, culture and each girl's individual style.

All proceeds from the American Girl Fashion Show benefit Plimoth Plantation Education Department.

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations to Colin Regan, a Cohasset Student who was named to the Merrimack College Dean's List in the Fall of 2008.

SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team 2009 season sign-up for returning athletes will be held on Saturday May 2nd from 8-11am at the Teen Garage (please note the change in venue from the Town Hall stated in previous weeks!) For more see today's sports section!

PHOTOS WANTED

Attention Cohasset High Parents. Please dig out your photo albums! The post prom committee is putting together a video highlighting our children through the years. Photos can be dropped off or mailed to Pat Martin, 169 Linden Drive, or e-mailed to massmartins@comcast.net.

Also, a Post Prom Committee meeting is being held on May 7 at 7 pm in the High School Library. Come on in and show your support for the Graduating class.

OUR WORLD

The Our World Museum has openings for several of the preschool age programs including Cooking, Music and Nature as well as a few spaces with Mr. Kevin Dykas and his Big Top Circus program held on Tuesday and/or Thursday afternoons from 3:30-4:30 pm. Call the museum at 781-383-3198 or send and email to us at ourworldprograms@comcast.net. Also, we are accepting applications for our Creative Kids Club Summer Sizzler programs for ages 2-10. A variety of themes, hours and days for 12 weeks beginning the start of June.

CENTERPIECES

Many thanks to the talented artists at the Cohasset High School, who hand-painted shoes for centerpieces at the Spring Fashion Show. The event was hosted by the Social Service League and took place at the Cohasset Golf Club on April 16th. The shoes, donated by Talbots, will be displayed at the Cohasset Consignment shop through May for the public to enjoy....so come on down!!

PEACE

Please join the walking team, Compassionate Cohasset, in support of Tina Chery and the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute's upcoming 13th Annual Mothers' Walk for Peace. The Walk will be held on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 10. The Louis D. Brown Peace Institute, a beneficiary of the Second Congregational Church's Outreach program, provides many important services including the difficult task of assisting families of Boston's homicide victims through grief support during the most difficult moments of crises. Put your "Faith into Action" by participating in the Walk or by pledging our Compassionate Cohasset team! There will be a carpool from Cohasset to Boston. For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Coffee and company

Friends of Elder Affairs start Cohasset Café

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A hot cup of coffee, freshly baked blueberry bread, a water view and a good conversation can be the ideal combination to start the day – and the week – off right.

For seniors in the community they are now can get that chance to enjoy a leisurely morning among friends at the "Cohassset Café."

Each Monday morning through June, the Friends of Elder Affairs is hosting a morning coffee event for seniors at the Lightkeepers Residence. Just in its third week, the Café is drawing about 30 seniors.

"We really wanted to come up with a place where seniors could come and get together," said Mary Kay Richardson, vice president of the Friends of Elder Affairs. When the idea was mentioned at Friends of Cohasset Elders meeting, someone suggested the Lightkeeper's Residence as the ideal location.

"From the minute we introduced the idea, everybody liked it and it just snowballed from there," said Karen Oronte of the Friends of Elder Affairs. The Friends of Elder Affairs is a non-profit group formed to support and fundraise for the town's Department of Elder Affairs.

"The seniors all chit chat easily and they are with people who otherwise might not cross paths," said Oronte. With quiet music playing in the background – Michael Buble and Frank Sinatra are favorites – the Lightkeepers' Residence was a buzz with voices.

"We wanted to provide seniors with the opportunity to meet their friends and get out of the house," said Linda Elworthy, director of Elder Affairs.

Elworthy had her first opportunity to attend the Cohasset Café this Monday; she was thrilled with the program and the turnout.

"There's a stigma attached to the luncheons at the senior center…that only a certain group goes there. There are some people here today that will not darken the door of the senior center," said Elworthy. With the picturesque location and friendly, low-key atmosphere, the Cohasset Café is drawing some seniors who aren't otherwise involved in senior center activities.

"We hope the seniors will come to this beautiful place and will be inspired to help us build an equally beautiful senior center," said Elworthy. Seniors in attendance were quick to bring up the possibility of a new senior center.

"With a high percentage of the town population being seniors, I'm sure it will be utilized. With a new building we'd be able to offer more programs," said Larry Ainslie.

"I think it is a great thing for seniors," said Florence. "But, you do have to get up a little early."

In fact, Larry said he is breaking one of his retirement rules to go to the Cohasset Café – no appointments before noon, "I'm making an exception here," he said with a smile.

For a $2 donation – just slightly more than a medium regular cup of coffee at Dunkin Donuts – seniors have the opportunity to drink in views of Cohasset Harbor and enjoy the company of old and new friends.

Audrey Poe, a senior who was checking in attendees, has high hopes for the program.

"Hopefully more newcomers will come; it would be nice to have a showing," said Poe. "It's a beautiful spot."

With each passing week, the Cohasset Café seems to be drawing more participants and volunteer bakers. This past Monday was the third week of the café.

"People came in, dropped off goodies, stayed for a cup of coffee then went on with their day," said Elworthy.

As evidence of the growing popularity of the Cohasset Café, this Monday shortly before 11a.m. Richardson announced to applause they were out of coffee.

The Cohasset Café will continue each Monday from 9 to 11a.m. through June (with the exception of Memorial Day), then go on hiatus for July and August to return in the fall.

Treats Pond easement issue not easy

Selectmen negotiate for Sandy Cove access

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Treat's Pond saga continues.

This week, the question before Selectmen centered on the town's right of easement to access the drainage pipe located on Sandy Cove.

For months the Board of Selectmen has been working with six Sandy Cove property owners in an effort to establish an easement to the beach for the primary goal of clearing out the drainage pipe located on the beach. The town's easement issue first came into focus in June of last year (see sidebar for a brief history) when the property owners and the town could not come to a consensus on what rights the town was granted in a 1964 easement given to the town by Elizabeth Bigelow.

Signing this easement agreement is important because without a legally and physically clear way to access the beach, the town could be unable to clear out the outfall. Residents who routinely get flooded during heavy rain have said in previous meetings the clearing of the outfall is the only way to alleviate the flooding.

Despite the many months working on the easement document — and the many town counsel hours — the Board of Selectmen still has issues with some of the content and intent found in the latest easement draft. Although the town has an easement to access Sandy Cove and the drainage pipe, the pathway is overgrown with vegetation after many years of not being used. For many years, the town has used Lothrop Lane to access the beach and the pipe. The proposed easement moves the town's access to a more established path on the Treat's Pond side of the beach.

"I think it is fair to say the property owners' priority is to ensure this easement does not do anything to strengthen the earlier easement. The town does not want to take a step back. It took a lot of lawyers' time to come up with this solution," said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Selectman Fred Koed didn't think the easement agreement struck that balance quite yet. What disturbed him the most was the fact town counsel advised them that the easement, in its latest draft, could be construed against the town at a future date. The most prominent example, he said, was according to the agreement the town could not expand in diameter or width, extend, or relocate the existing drainage pipe.

"I feel it kind of ties the town's hands behind its back," said Koed.

Instead of an easement that simply moved an easement the town has, he said the negotiation has turned into a "chess game" with the end goal of getting the Treat's Pond flooding issue resolved by sending water to the harbor or by blasting ledge in someone else's neighborhood.

Selectman Karen Quigley said she agreed with Koed's sentiments, perhaps even to a greater degree.

"I am so frustrated today. There are houses getting flooded and property owners keep coming back with changes to the easement (agreement). I'm at a point where I'm ready to say, take a front end loader right down the original easement," said an exacerbated Quigley, who said it would be irresponsible for the Board of Selectmen to sign the agreement in its current form.

> "I feel it kind of ties the town's hands behind its back."
> — Selectman Fred Koed

"Quite frankly I think there are certain individuals who do not intend to sign this (agreement) ever," said Quigley.

Selectman Ted Carr, who has been the lead on the easement negotiations, seemed to share in his fellow selectmen's frustration.

"I agree it has become unnecessarily difficult to reach what should have been a very simple agreement," said Carr. He primarily sees the issue as one of public safety — when Treat's Pond/Atlantic Avenue floods, it is very difficult, if not impossible for emergency vehicles to access two homes next to the pond.

The easement agreement would be in effect for five years from its acceptance by Land Court for filing. The new path to the beach that applies to this new easement crosses the properties of 83 Atlantic (Manchester), 85 Atlantic (Connolly), 87 Atlantic (Greaney), 89 Atlantic (jointly owned by the above), 91 Atlantic (Houghton), 95 Atlantic (Sceery) and 99 Atlantic (Hart).

Peter Whittemore of 47 Elm Court has been present at nearly all the discussions on Treat's Pond and its related issues. He said the property owners holding up the easement agreement were being inconsiderate in not realizing the clearing of the pipe is key to keeping the area from flooding. In addition, he said the property owners when they purchased the property also signed on to the stipulations of the town's 1964 Bigelow easement.

"Someone is being very obstructionist…If you are willing to spend four grand on an appeal of a Keno license, I think the town can spend a few thousand more to protect an easement and be good stewards of conservation land," said Whittemore.

Michael Sceery of 95 Atlantic Ave., one of the Sandy Cove property owners that get flooded, said he was not keen on any restrictions being placed on the town's ability to repair or update the pipe. He previously signed a draft easement that did not include any such restrictions.

John Connolly of 85 Atlantic Ave., who is one of the easement property owners and has not signed any version of the easement, said at its very core the easement accomplished its purpose: providing the town a legal access to maintain the drainage pipe. However, he said, the residents wanted to ensure the town wasn't given blanket authority to replace, relocate or extend the pipe. He and several other property owners wanted to be sure the town requested their permission before making any changes to the pipe.

Eli Manchester of 83 Atlantic Ave. and one of the negotiating property owners said the residents were not adverse to having the town fix the pipe.

"What (the town doesn't) have the right to do is make the pipe bigger or add an extension," said Manchester.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson suggested the board let the lawyers have another go at the easement agreement and come back. With the passage of a Town Meeting article in March, the Board of Selectmen is authorized to accept an easement agreement from the six families whose property the easement would cross.

Brief history of the easement

In 1964, the former property owner Elizabeth Bigelow granted the town an easement to Treat's Pond and its drainage pipe. In its simplest terms, the town was given the right and responsibility to maintain Treat's Pond as a marsh pond. The easement granted to the town is vague, but it does include the pond itself and the associated drainage pipe that runs from Treat's Pond to Sandy Cove.

For many years, the Department of Public Works with a backhoe has accessed Sandy Cove to clear the pipe on an occasional basis (usually during or after a significant rainfall) via Lothrop Lane, a paved private road. The clearing of the pipe allows the pond to drain and, according to residents, is effective in alleviating flooding.

However, the town does not have an easement to traverse Lothrop Lane to gain access to the Sandy Cove and the pipe's outfall. Given the pipe is located on the opposite end of the beach and the lack of easement, the residents of Lothrop Lane requested the town to enforce their legal easement at the opposite end of the beach.

It wasn't that easy. Because the easement path hasn't been used in many years, it had become overgrown with vegetation and is home to wildlife.

Ulmer sisters, local shop team up

> Green Eyed Monster will donate a portion of all bag sales to Tree People, an environmental non-profit focused on critical water issues.

Reusable bags have been on the eco-radar for quite some time, but are you sure that your tote is the most sustainable bag on the block? Or are you still choosing paper or plastic when at the grocery? Enter Cohasset natives, Kimberly and Ashley Ulmer, and their eco-business, Green Eyed Monster, offering a reusable tote that is not only manufactured in the U.S.A. but is made of 100 percent post-consumer recycled cotton. This bag uses up material that is already present in the world, without adding to the heap. And you can help reduce your carbon footprint by bringing your own bag, as the average American uses over 800 disposable bags a year.

Green Eyed Monster's Web site, www.greeneyed.com, hosts online design competitions to generate limited edition artwork to feature on each bag. Each bag is a wearable, reusable, green piece of art. You can now grab yours at a brick and mortar shop in downtown Cohasset Village thanks to David Bigley and All The Best Natural Foods. Given the importance of shopping locally, especially from an ecological stand point, the Ulmer sisters were thrilled to team up with All The Best to bring Green Eyed Monster to their hometown.

The bags have hit the streets of Cohasset and are available for sale at All The Best Natural Foods. What better way to celebrate Mama Earth and support your local economy than to shop locally with the purchase of such a truly unique, eco-friendly product? As members of 1 percent For the Planet, Green Eyed Monster will donate a portion of all bag sales to Tree People, an environmental non-profit focused on critical water issues.

Green Eyed Monster continually hosts design competitions, so you can look forward to collecting limited edition runs of each print while putting your eco-foot forward. And remember, a reusable grocery bag is only as good as your memory before you leave for the market, so keep a few stored in your car that way you'll never be without, like when you're shopping locally at All The Best.

All the Best Natural Foods located at 93 Ripley Road, Cohasset is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. For more information, call 781-383-3005.

Clothing drive for Cradles to Crayons

Spring cleaning? People are asked to donate gently used clothing and baby equipment to the Cradles to Crayons clothing drive to benefit needy children in Massachusetts. The O'Donnell family at 11 Beach St. will host the clothing drive from noon to 5 p.m., on Thursday May 14, and 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday May 16.

Cradles to Crayons collects clothing, baby equipment, school supplies and crafts, shoes, books and jackets and distributes these goods through a network of social service agencies benefiting children from birth through age 12.

Saturday's drive will include snacks and a jump house for kids. Interested in helping? Email kariod@comcast.net. Community service hours for Cohasset High School students available.

Rescue at sea

Harbormaster, fire and police aid distressed kayaker

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The nearly 90-degree day on Tuesday had more than a few people thinking it was summer.

While the air temperature was unseasonably warm, the water temperature hasn't caught up — and the discrepancy put a 36-year-old man in serious trouble.

A 911-call came in at 7:38p.m. on Tuesday night from Whitehead Road about a swimmer in distress 200 to 300 yards offshore. The caller had heard the swimmers cries for help. Fire units responded to Whitehead and saw the swimmer struggling.

It's unclear whether the kayak was swamped or was overturned, either way the kayaker could not right the boat.

Paramedic firefighter Jonathan Hickey donned a survival suit and began to make his way out to the swimmer while tethered to shore.

In the meantime, Harbormaster Lorrie Gibbons, off-duty firefighter Lieutenant Bob Protulis and police Officer Dan Paul Wilson headed out in a skiff to the scene. Jay Graham, the resident who made the 911 call, kayaked out in a neighbor's kayak to stay with the swimmer.

The kayaker in distress was pulled from the water and driven back to shore. With the ambulance and other Cohasset units tied up on Whitehead, a Scituate mutual aid ambulance was called in to transport the swimmer to South Shore Hospital with hypothermia. The man was conscious, alert and talking on the way to the hospital. Silvia said he expected the man to make a full recovery.

Dispatch also contacted the Coast Guard who diverted a nearby helicopter on a training mission to Cohasset Harbor. By the time the helicopter arrived, the swimmer had been pulled into the boat. The helicopter hovered over the water rescue to provide light to the now dimming day.

It is estimated the man was in the water for 30 to 40 minutes.

Shortly before the 911-call came in a cold front moved in very quickly kicking up the seas and the wind was blowing steadily from the northwest, said Gibbons.

"Even though it was 90 degrees, the water temperature was still 40 degrees. With that temperature, survival time in the water is always questionable," said Fire Chief Robert Silvia. It is estimated the man was in the water for 30 to 40 minutes.

Silvia said the kayaker did some things right by wearing a life jacket and staying with his kayak so rescuers could more easily spot him.

Kayaking on his own, close to dark and so early in the season with little boating activity in the area was risky, Gibbons said. She suggests kayakers always travel with a friend and to keep a close eye for changes in weather.

"(This man) was very fortunate someone heard his calls for help. It was so dangerous and the water so cold," said Gibbons.

Other responding fire personnel were Captain Frank Mahoney, Lt. James Curley, and firefighter paramedics Dan Smith, Rob Martin, and Robert Nadeau.

Fitzsimmons said residents should practice common sense health precautions should be practiced to prevent getting or spreading any type of influenza: wash your hands often with soap and water or with an alcohol-based hand sanitizer; cough or sneeze into a tissue or into your elbow instead of into your hands; and if you're sick, stay home from work or school and limit contact with others to avoid infecting them.

If a resident has flu-like symptoms, Fitzsimmons advises them to call the doctor's office first to ensure they take appropriate precautions.

"So far we are dealing with something very mild, but that could change and we're prepared for that," said Fitzsimmons.

According to a press release from the state Department of Public Heath, swine influenza is a respiratory disease of pigs caused by type A influenza viruses. Outbreaks of swine flu happen regularly in pigs. People do not normally get swine flu, but human infections can and do happen. Most commonly, human cases of swine flu happen in people who are around pigs but it's possible for swine flu viruses to spread from person to person as well. Swine flu is not transmitted by food and you cannot get swine flu by eating pork products.

For general information on swine flu and the status of the nationwide outbreak, visit www.cdc.gov/swineflu. For more information on the Massachusetts response, and how to care for someone at home who has the flu, please visit www.mass.gov/dph. Also visit the town web site:www.townofcohasset.org received approval from the Planning Board to renovate and expand the restaurant, including adding parking spaces.

DiNero's approached the town again in 2005 after completing the renovation and expansion of the restaurant. Citing nearly identical reasons to the 2002 objection, the Selectmen denied the application in 2005. DiNero's appealed and the Lottery Commission sided with the restaurant.

Selectmen are still in their 30-day timeframe in which they can appeal the decision to Superior Court. According to Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, the appeal will hinge on whether a Keno license at DiNero's serves the public interest. The estimated legal cost of the appeal is $4,000.

Greg Sullivan, the attorney representing DiNero's, pointed to the restaurant efforts in the last five years to address the concerns of the neighborhood and the town. The restaurant expanded in 2006 adding seats and parking spaces.

"I hope we can prevent this from happening."
— Mary Fran Olson, 800 Jerusalem Road

"In the time between the first time the town objected to the second time they objected, my client expended resources to address the issues raised by the town," said Sullivan. "My client's intention is to operate a Keno license reasonably and responsibly."

Sullivan said other restaurants owned by Frank Plotner, the former Hingham Bay Club and Ocean Club in Hull, have all had Keno without incident.

"There's Keno, but it is not a problem," said Sullivan. "It is not the boogie man some of the abutters make it out to be."

Dormitzer felt the board had been consistent on this issue, "I care about the neighborhood and the people abutting."

Dormitzer said the Selectmen voted to add several legal on-street parking spaces in recent years because it was a business interest.

"Keno I don't think enhances the public interest of the neighborhood," said Dormitzer.

Selectman Fred Koed, who voted against the Keno license in both 2002 and 2007, had an issue with the lottery commission second guessing and holding the town to a high standard of proof when they say Keno would increase traffic or noise.

"(Keno) is not in the interest of the greater community. Our responsibility is managing what we believe is best for the town. One of the responsibilities we do have is acting on behalf of the neighborhood and understanding their concerns," said Koed.

He didn't buy the argument that DiNero's had addressed the parking and other concerns with their expansion because while they did increase parking, they also increased their use.

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson saw it differently.

"The state ruled and given the likelihood of winning is small, I think we're sending money down the drain on unnecessary litigation. It's a well run restaurant, can't see how it would turn into a gambling den," said Carlson.

The Board of Selectmen voted 4-1 (Carlson was the sole 'nay' vote) in favor of appealing the DiNero's Keno license decision.

Walk for ovarian cancer

On Monday, the Board of Selectmen gave the organizer of the Ovations for a Cure ovarian cancer benefit walk permission to move forward with the event. The walk is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 13 at 1p.m.

Sheila Sullivan, a long-time Cohasset resident who recently moved to Hull, came before the board. Ovarian cancer is the number one gynecological killer among women as it has few outright symptoms.

"It's a deadly cancer because of the lack of symptoms," said Sullivan. Since the walk's inception in 2006, the non-profit Ovations for a Cure has pledged over $1.25 million to research, educated about 225,000 women and physicians throughout the US.

The walk will start and end at the South Shore Community Center and follow the same route of other charity walks — Elm Street to Atlantic Avenue to Sandy Beach to Jerusalem Road to Forest Avenue to North Main Street.

BRIEFLY

Budget planning group

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson and Vice Chair Karen Quigley were named to the recently formed "Budget Planning Group."

The selectmen-appointed advisory board will begin to look at and develop a long-range financial plan for the town. The board will recommend fiscal policies and look for efficiencies within the town. Members of the group will include two representatives each from the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee, the School Committee and the Capital Budget Committee.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Aesthetics matter

This is not a stance for or against the proposed wind turbines off Route 3A.

This is just an acknowledgement that in a town like Cohasset, aesthetics matter – a lot.

In fact "looks" here are important enough for the Design Review Board to have been recently reconstituted.

We think it might even be wise to go a step further and have an "aesthetics protection commission."

You might laugh, but next door in Hingham – that is essentially what they have with their numerous local historic districts.

Local historic districts (like the one that governs the Town Common area) carry a lot of legal weight. (Can you imagine our town common without its perimeter of colonial homes?)

Local historic district commissions can control the color you paint your house, additions (like fences or porches) to a home that might change the streetscape, and so on.

We think it might even be wise to go a step further and have an "aesthetics protection commission."

A drive through Hingham and one quickly realizes that these protections have played a huge role in maintaining the character of the town (that once included Cohasset). Hingham, which is poised to celebrate 375 years of incorporation, has one of the largest collections of well preserved, 17th, 18th and 19th century homes in the country.

We need to take a step back and remember why we travel to interesting places. More often than not – it is either the pleasing tropical climate, the history of the place or its attractiveness.

Cohasset is literally blessed with natural beauty and character. Its spectacular ocean vistas, interesting architecture, quaint New England colonial appeal, pristine Town Common, village, parks and aesthetic diversity all come together to create an ambiance that puts our town on the map.

The entire mix makes Cohasset a place set apart. Cohasset is unique, even on New England standards.

Could there be improvements? Absolutely. As Route 3A businesses and shopping areas are "redeveloped" in the years ahead, we hope that more attention will be paid to the streetscape along that corridor.

But once off Route 3A – our little Cohasset is an oasis. If one travels to other parts of our country – you will quickly find "sameness," a spread of strip malls with acres of asphalt, and the loss of a Main Street or downtown area.

This week Selectman Ralph Dormitzer reminded his fellow board members that in the Master Plan developed in the early 2000s, the aesthetic character of Cohasset was reported as the most valued quality.

So there we have it. In light of huge economic and other pressures – caring about aesthetics can seem almost silly.

However, here in Cohasset – the beauty and character of the town, define us.

We cannot let that slip away.

Cleanup was a group effort

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, I'd like to thank everyone who helped make our second annual town-wide Earth Day Clean-Up so successful.

On a beautiful morning last Wednesday, over 30 student volunteers, together with adult supervisors, cleaned up Bassing Beach, a section of King Street near the Water Department, the Trust's Albert A. Golden Reservation along North Main Street near the train station, and Sandy Beach.

Our Harbormaster Lorrie Gibbons was the key to the very productive Bassing Beach clean-up, ferrying students and adults over to the beach and back again with bags of trash and larger pieces of debris, and then helping us haul everything over to the RTF for disposal. Tara Tradd from the Board of Health provided the volunteers with gloves, trash bags, and safety vests, and helped keep the effort organized. Cohasset High School Vice Principal Michael Gill, social studies teacher Jack Buckley, and boys lacrosse coach Stew Curran signed up student volunteers and got the word out at the Middle High School. And CCT Directors Jim Hamilton and Dick Avery were on hand to supervise students and help with disposal of the litter.

Over 32 garbage bags worth of litter and numerous larger pieces of debris were collected and brought to the RTF. Finally, I'd like to thank all the student volunteers who gave their time during the school vacation week to celebrate Earth Day and leave their town a little cleaner. We look forward to repeating it again next year!

Local media appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

Lt. Ralph Talbot Disabled American Veterans (DAV) Chapter 65 and Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services South Shore veterans' agents wish to thank local media outlets and service agencies for publicizing the Service event sponsored for veterans and surviving spouses conducted on Wednesday, April 22, at the Weymouth Elks Club.

Disability and rating increase issues as well as checking on appeals and health, education, survivor, vocational, housing, food assistance and other types of help were offered. More than 185 attended, almost triple the number at past such events.

Joe McElroy,
Commander, Lt. Ralph Talbot DAV Chapter 65 and Cohasset Veterans' Agent

Grateful to Carl, crews

TO THE EDITOR

In that there is some possibility for the snow season easing off, Cohasset citizens should be grateful for the conscientious efforts of public works superintendent, Mr. Carl Sestito, and his snowplowing crews these past long months.

Time and again, after blinding, nighttime, blizzard conditions, morning traffic has found well-plowed and generously sanded streets as we'd shove off for our daily challenging thrills and spills.

Thank you Carl and your snowplowing colleagues.

LIBRARY CORNER

Spring into great seasonal reading

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Great Decisions Discussion Group – The 2009 Great Decisions Discussion Group is now meeting every Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. until June 16. Those who have registered for this discussion group may call the reference librarian at 383-1348 with questions you may have.

Health Hazards in the Home – Join Dr. Christina Saylor at 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 19, as she presents a talk on health hazards in the home. Free.

Get Ready for Spring – The library has plenty of books to get you ready for Spring. Everything from gardening, home repair, organizing and cleaning the home, travel, and crafts. Ask any library staff for assistance.

FOR CHILDREN

Story & Craft – Limited space is still available for both morning and afternoon sessions. Story and Craft is for Cohasset residents ages 3-6. It will take place in the story room on Thursday May 7, 14 and 21, from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. or 1 to 1:45 p.m. To register log on to www.cohassetlibrary.org, then click on calendar. Then click on April 30, and click on the either morning or afternoon session and fill out the registration form using the child's name and age.

MamaSteph will be performing at 10:30 a.m. in the meeting room on Monday May 4 and 11. All ages and communities welcome.

Drop In Story Time will take place at 10:30 in the Story Room on Tuesday May 5, 12, and 19th. All ages and communities welcome.

New culvert helps water flow

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Border Street Culvert – As announced last week, Border Street was opened to through traffic last Friday afternoon. The contractor had completed the entire culvert pipe under the roadway. However, he still had several pieces to construct beside the road on the Gulf side. This week, this remaining pipe was set into place and the last piece, called a flared end was placed. The regular pipe, we previously mentioned, is elliptical in shape and measures 30 inches wide and 19 inches high on the inside of the pipe, The flared end, as the name implies, flares out so that the water moving into or out of the Gulf will have a slightly lower velocity.

We have included a sequence of three photos showing the culmination of the culvert construction. In the first photo, the last piece of oval pipe has been laid and the backhoe is clearing out the excess dirt at the edge of the Gulf so that the tailpiece can be placed at the correct elevation.

The second photo shows the flared end being carried to its final resting place leading to the Gulf. From this view you can see a little of the different shape that flares out to lower the water velocity. The last photo in this sequence shows the flared end in place with an incoming tide that will allow the gulf waters to flow into the culvert. It is interesting to note that it is not principally the harbor tide itself that will cause water to flow through this channel. It is actually the difference in height between the harbor and the water level in the Gulf. Depending on the height of the harbor tide, the difference in water levels between the two sides of this culvert can be as much as 2 to 3 feet. Further, at the highest tides it can take from1/2 hour to 1.5 hours for the water in the Gulf to reach the same level as the harbor. This is due to the restriction to the flow in the narrow channel under the Border Street Bridge.

This week we met with state and federal regulators at the construction site and they were very pleased with the work that was done. Perhaps, a brief comment regarding the genesis of this project is in order. The culvert under Border Street had been blocked for quite a few years. In meetings with both state and federal regulators discussions took place regarding how advantageous it would be to have water flow between the harbor and the Gulf to better support the salt marsh.

With strong support from several townspeople and the Conservation Commission, moneys were obtained from the Community Preservation Commission to do the engineering for a new culvert. Then the Town received a salt marsh restoration grant to do the actual construction, which is now in its final stages of completion. Without the initial CPC seed money for design, we would have never received the grant that made the construction possible. It's really nice to see various portions of the Town and committees work together with the regulatory bodies to make something like this come to fruition.

Little Harbor Project – First, the public announcement part of this article… Beach Street will be closed from Monday, May 4th through Friday, May 8th beginning at the intersection of Highland Avenue and extending about 1000 feet toward Atlantic Avenue to just beyond #46. The balance of Beach Street will have unrestricted access from Atlantic Avenue during this time.

During this closure the contractor will be working on two small projects. They will be completing sewer construction at Highland and Beach St. and will be working on storm drainage near #46 Beach Street.

As we go to press on Wednesday of this week, paving is scheduled for Thursday, April 30th. Roads scheduled for their base coats this week are: Bridal Path, Mohawk Way, Sheldon Road and Hobart Lane. However, the contractor is still working on a few of these roads. So when you read this you will be able to judge whether we met our planned paving goals.

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I'd like to try out a little demographic test I've developed. Picture two people with baseball gloves and a ball standing in a back yard. Now imagine that the first person throws the ball to the second person. Then the second person throws the ball back to the first person. Then Person 1 throws to Person 2, and Person 2 throws to Person 1. This goes on for about 45 minutes. Then, suddenly, Person 1 throws the ball to Person 2 again. And Person 2 throws the ball right back to Person 1, etcetera. Finally Person 1 throws the ball to Person 2, so naturally Person 2 has to throw the —

Okay. Before you forget it, circle your current thought:

1) I've already stopped reading.
2) Who are these two morons?
3) I'm curious what will happen next.
4) They should totally try this with a frog. It works.

Now please add up your score. If it's 2 or lower there's a strong likelihood that you have ovaries. You should talk to your doctor to be sure. Anyway I realize it sounds sexist to suggest that one's gender can be accurately predicted by the results of this test. Instead I'll just say that any woman who circled answer 3 or 4 should call me soon because I happen to know you are one foxy chick.

Unfortunately my daughters all flunk this test. Throwing a ball with them is an exercise in futility — they get bored within minutes and start looking for four leaf clovers, or describing an especially tedious dream they had the night before, or whatever, all while holding on to the ball. Seriously, you cannot hold on to the ball. Guys feel actual physical discomfort when they don't get the ball back. It's like being abandoned on a seesaw.

I don't know why boys crave mindless, repetitive physical activity but we do. It's soothing to us. Spiritually cleansing. It's the only time we have left to really ponder the universe. I've come up with some of my best ideas while mowing my lawn, for example. Yesterday as I paced back and forth across my front yard I was thinking about how Cohasset's children get to school. As you know each student is individually chauffeured to either Osgood, Deer Hill or the Middle/High School by car, truck, minivan, humvee, or in some cases Harrier Jump Jet. This seems very inefficient to me in terms of fuel and traffic at school entrances. What we need is a new kind of vehicle that can hold many children from different families, all at the same time. This "student-moving contraption" would drive down the main roads in town and stop periodically at what I call "student-moving contraption stops," picking up groups of children and transporting them to their destination. I haven't thought much about the color yet but I'm leaning toward chrome.

There's definitely something about pushing a lawn mower that helps spark this kind of breakthrough thinking. Last August as I was mowing I came up with a great idea for a short film about a guy who's mowing his lawn, and all kinds of crazy things happen. He accidentally runs over a tennis ball, and he shreds a Converse sneaker to ribbons, and he nearly takes out a bunch of tulips because his mind is wandering a bit, but he swerves around them just in time. The film ends when one of his daughters tries to get his attention by coming up behind him and yelling at the top of her lungs, and he has a massive coronary. She does this despite having been specifically told numerous times to simply go where he can see her and wave her arms if she needs to talk to him, and not to scare the Christ out of him every time. So it has a rather tragic ending but teaches an important lesson, and I would never have dreamt it up if I hadn't been mowing my lawn. It really gets your imagination going.

A man's brain is not designed to stay in gear all day long. At some point we have to put it in neutral and play hacky sack. If we don't do this our minds will slip out of gear unexpectedly and we'll offer to be waterboarded for charity or something. Meanwhile women's brains seem to be constantly going full tilt and they scare away all the fish. Each brain is useful in its own way.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He also feels actual physical discomfort when told that another daughter needs braces.

HEALTH NOTES

Some facts about the swine flu

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We can all help to play an absolutely vital role in the current health crisis by following a list of recommendations from the National Center for Disease Control…

Probably the most responsive activity monitoring the current swine flu outbreak is Cohasset's Town Manager's office that within 10 minutes of receiving word from the Board of Health about an ongoing conference call with the State already had placed information from the Mass Department of Public Health (DPH) on the Town web page (www.townofcohasset.org)

According to the DPH, two school-age residents of Middlesex County are considered to have a mild case of the disease and were expected to make a complete recovery. Neither child attended school at any point during their illness, and their parents did not go to work during that time. Massachusetts is the sixth state to have confirmed cases of swine flu. As of Wednesday, there were five confirmed cases in New England and 91 nationwide.

We can all help to play an absolutely vital role in the current health crisis by following a list of recommendations from the National Center for Disease Control (www.cdc.gov/sweineflu). Use common-sense precautions to keep from getting and spreading the flu.

- Wash your hands often with soap and water or with an alcohol-based hand sanitizer;
- Cough or sneeze into a tissue or into your elbow instead of into your hands;
- If you're sick, stay home from work or school and limit contact with others to avoid infecting them

Swine Flu — (Swine Influenza) is a respiratory disease regularly contracted by pigs that people seldom contract. Previous Swine Flu viruses have been reported to spread from person-to-person, but in the past, this transmission was limited and not sustained beyond three people.

Is the virus contagious? CDC has determined that this swine influenza A (H1N1) virus is contagious and is spreading from human to human. However, at this time, it is not known how easily the virus spreads between people.

What are the signs and symptoms of swine flu in people? The symptoms of swine flu in people are similar to the symptoms of regular human flu and include fever, cough, sore throat, body aches, headache, chills and fatigue. Some people have reported diarrhea and vomiting associated with swine flu. In the past, severe illness (pneumonia and respiratory failure) and deaths have been reported with swine flu infection in people. A new development in the present Flu outbreak is that some patients have exhibited an abnormal temperature. If Swine Flu is suspected, and the patient's temperature is greater than 101deg f report it to your care giver or the Board of Health (781 383-4116).

How does swine flu spread? Spread of this swine influenza A (H1N1) virus is thought to be happening in the same way that seasonal flu spreads. Flu viruses are spread mainly from person to person through coughing or sneezing of people with influenza. Sometimes people may become infected by touching something with flu viruses on it and then touching their mouth or nose.

How can someone with the flu infect someone else? Infected people may be able to infect others beginning 1 day before symptoms develop and up to 7 or more days after becoming sick. That means that you may be able to pass on the flu to someone else before you know you are sick, as well as while you are sick.

What should I do to keep from getting the flu? First and most important: wash your hands. Try to stay in good general health. Get plenty of sleep, be physically active, manage your stress, drink plenty of fluids, and eat nutritious food. Try not touch sur-

Recession hits home

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I don't know about you, but I've developed a love affair with my microwave oven.

No more waiting for the oven in the kitchen stove to reach the required 385 degrees.

Just pop in a bowl of Chef Boyardee with meatballs, uncork a bottle of Chianti and in less than five minutes you're dining on the Villa Rosa.

Or nuke last night's leftovers of pork fried rice and beef chow mien for two minutes and you have a banquet fit for General Tso.

Now comes the Pew Research Center to tell us that my vaunted microwave oven is falling victim to the recession.

Banks may fail and carmakers may go out of business, but now I'm mad.

Pew researchers did a national survey to determine what Americans think they can't live without — is it a necessity or a luxury?

"The share of adults who consider a microwave a necessity was just 32 per cent in 1996," they reported. "By 2006, it had shot up to 68 per cent. But it has now retreated to 47 per cent."

"The share of adults who consider a microwave a necessity was just 32 per cent in 1996," they reported. "By 2006, it had shot up to 68 per cent. But it has now retreated to 47 per cent."

The Pew folks never came to our house.

A surprising number of our fellow Americans think that a television set is a luxury (47 per cent) rather than a necessity (52 per cent) compared to a 64-35 per cent split for the boob tube as a needed appliance a year ago.

I didn't own a television set until a friend of mine had a chance at a job as TV critic for a New York newspaper. She didn't get the job, but we didn't give up the luxury of a TV set either.

The effect of the recession is more strongly reflected in the shopping habits of our neighbors and maybe even ourselves.

Pew found that 57 per cent of us switched to less expensive brands at the store and shopped more at discount stores, and some (21 per cent), including Michelle Obama, even planned to plant a vegetable garden.

But don't ask me to raise vegetables, not after my experience nursing a crop of golf ball-size tomatoes to maturity.

The folks who live at our house long ago discovered Building 19 and Ocean State and recently added the Dollar Store to their shopping itinerary.

Only two out of three respondents in the Pew survey thought that home phone service is a necessity, and 40 per cent of them felt the same about cell phones, although 22 per cent changed to less expensive plans or cancelled altogether.

I had a cell phone once but I gave it up when I found out that other people could call you on it too, and you had to pay.

An interesting conclusion can be drawn from comparing the 2009 figures with those of a Washington Post/Harvard poll in 1978, the last time TV sets, clothes driers, dishwashers, even cars went from necessities to luxury items.

The year 1978 was the start of Jimmy Carter's recession.

A great way for kids to spend the summer

SAILING CLUB

ELIZABETH MURRY

Sailing is truly a sport that can be pursued over a lifetime, and the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) has instructional programs for children, teenagers, and adults — in other words, kids of all ages. This week's article details the Junior program and the Racing program.

The Junior program focuses on the 10 to 16 year-old age group — one instructor likens it to attending summer day camp with your schoolmates. By taking advantage of the town's seaside location, one can become an accomplished sailor within a few years. For those new to town, it is a great way to make friends before school starts in the fall. To enroll, students must be at least 10-years-old by Labor Day 2009 or have completed the fourth grade. The Junior program has a four-year structure: first-year students start at the Sailor level, then progress to Mate level in the second year, Skipper level in the third year, and Captain level in the fourth year. Typically, there are at least two to three Sailor and Mate groups, as these are the most heavily enrolled sequences and are scheduled to accommodate the swimming program. Beginning students start with seamanship basics, and progressively acquire more advanced sailing skills. By the end of their first season, many students will pass the helmsman test, which means they are good enough to take their parents out for a free sail.

The instructors are college and high school students, many of whom went through the CSC's Junior program and Racing program. A particular strength this year is that all 15 instructors are returning veterans from 2008 and earlier years. John DeWaal, the head instructor, is assisted by six senior instructors. All seven are American Sailing Association Level I certified instructors, a designation granted to those who meet U.S. national standards. The other eight instructors are high school students, many of whom will become senior instructors in future seasons.

Emily Pelo, the CSC's new racing coach for 2009, brings lots of experience and enthusiasm to the position.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Introduced in 2008, the BICS are overwhelmingly popular with the club's younger members.

Over two months, classes meet thrice weekly for two to three hours at a time, and combine classroom teaching with ample time on the water. Small student groups start out in the 14.5-foot Capris accompanied by an instructor. Eventually, students will be able to take out the club's new BICs, which are small, lightweight, and highly maneuverable. Introduced in 2008, the BICS are overwhelmingly popular with the club's younger members, and allow kids to sail alone or with a companion. The dual availability of peer group and solo learning opportunities is a unique feature of the CSC's Junior program. Upon completing the Captain level, students may join the Racing team.

The Racing program accelerates the acquisition of more advanced techniques. Students will train five days a week and compete in regattas. Emily Pelo, the CSC's new racing coach for 2009, brings lots of experience and enthusiasm to the position. A Scituate native, Emily has been sailing since she was eight and racing for the last decade on Turnabouts, 420s, FJs, and Vanguard 15s. In past summers she has raced a Pearson Flyer out of Hingham, and last fall qualified and sailed in the PHRF Nationals held in Chicago. Emily is completing her junior year at Hobart and William Smith Colleges, where she is a member of the women's sailing team, which last weekend qualified for the National Championship being held in San Francisco in late May. Emily is majoring in political science and minoring in education, with an emphasis on elementary and special education certification.

Emily has taught beginning sailing and coached an Opti race team in Hingham, and in Duxbury she taught for the ACESSail program, which is geared toward people with cognitive or physical disabilities. Recently accepted into Hobart's M.A. in teaching (MAT) program, Emily writes: "Sailing and teaching are two of my passions, and teaching sailing actually inspired me to get involved with the teacher certification program and apply for the MAT program. I really enjoy teaching kids of all abilities, sharing my passion for sailing with them, and providing a fun learning experience for everyone. I'm really looking forward to coaching at CSC. I think it will be a great experience, and I hope to make sailing and racing enjoyable and something students will want to pursue in the future."

Whatever your age, you can make some lifelong memories by joining the CSC and discovering, or rediscovering, sailing. Check out our web site at www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which has more information posted, including membership forms. In-person sign-up takes place at the clubhouse on Registration weekend, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and May 17 from noon to 2 p.m.

Next week: The CSC's Adult Program.

The instructors are college and high school students, many of whom went through the CSC's Junior program and Racing program. Here are the 2008 instructors.

Wayne Sawchuk makes his way up the spiral staircase in the 1811 Samuel Bates House to the two apartments available for rent by the week. For the summer months, the units are being rented Sunday to Sunday for $1500 per week per unit.

Weekly vacation rentals available in the village

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I think this fulfills a need that makes all the sense in the world. It is a particular niche for those that want extra space and want an extended stay."
— Wayne Sawchuk, landlord

After unsuccessfully searching for two tenants for his recently renovated village apartments since last fall, Wayne Sawchuk is taking a different tact. Starting this month the two upstairs units of the 1811 Samuel Bates House (39 South Main St.) are available for weekly vacation rentals.

"This isn't a tourist town, but people have plenty of reasons for coming here," said Sawchuk. He envisions wedding parties, out of town guests, families with kids visiting grandparents as being the primary occupants.

The model is entirely new for Cohasset, Sawchuk said, and he does not expect it to compete with the Red Lion Inn or the Cohasset Harbor Inn because he is offering something different.

"I think this fulfills a need that makes all the sense in the world. It is a particular niche for those that want extra space and want an extended stay," said Sawchuk, a lifelong resident of Cohasset and current sewer commissioner.

The idea partly came to him after his son got married last year in a Vermont destination wedding. He and the bride's family spent the better part of a week living out of hotel rooms with little space to spread out, no opportunity to make meals or little chance to be away from the hustle and bustle of the wedding events. It got him thinking about what Cohasset's biggest revenue generating industry is. Although he has no hard and fast data, he thinks weddings could top the list. From the Red Lion to the Cohasset Harbor Inn to Atlantica to the Lightkeepers Residence, not to mention the many churches in and around the village, Cohasset is home to several top-tier wedding locales.

"There are a huge number of destination weddings in Cohasset because it is so beautiful," said Sawchuk. In fact, Sawchuk's son is getting married in Cohasset this summer. His family will be staying at the apartments during the week leading up to the big event.

While he expects much of his business to come from out-of-town visitors, he thinks some Cohasset residents could rent the unit(s) while they are remodeling or otherwise can't be in their home.

For the summer months, the units are being rented Sunday to Sunday for $1500 per week per unit.

If Sawchuk is able to rent each unit for 14 weeks each, he'll be able to equal the amount he would have gotten by renting the units. However, he'll need to rent more weeks in order to cover the costs of furnishing and the weekly cleaning of the apartments.

"If I can make 26 different families happy and ensure their stay in Cohasset is enjoyable, then that's my satisfaction," said Sawchuk.

When the decision to turn the apartments into weekly rentals was made, the Sawchuk family had to completely furnish the place. Sawchuk's wife, Annette, took on the interior decorating and completely furnished and decorated the place in a little more than three weeks.

Painted in colors reminiscent of the beach and the sea, Annette tried to evoke a relaxed and coastal atmosphere.

"It was fun to do it, but very stressful," said Annette. Now, they are hoping for a Red Sox World Series sweep, so they can get some of the furniture for free at Jordon's Furniture.

Wanted to keep the building's history a part of the guest's experience, Sawchuk will stock each unit with Cohasset history books and maps. He has even named the two units after Samuel Bates' granddaughters, Susanna and Abigail.

One of the units is split between the second and third floors with the bedrooms upstairs. Both units have three bedrooms and two bathrooms and sleeps five. The amenities include kitchen utensils, air conditioning, washer and dryer and flat screen televisions. One of the units has a sizeable second floor porch that looks out toward the back of the property.

Sawchuk hopes and expects the influx of new vacationers to the village will contribute to its economic vitality. He plans to make the renters aware of all that the village and general area has to offer from dining, gift shops, provisions and alcohol.

The property is listed on www.homeaway.com (search Cohasset or Samuel Bates House), a website dedicated to owner property rentals. In its first week on the site the listing received 35 hits.

Sawchuk has committed the property to weekly rentals for the next year, but does have a greater goal for the property when business finances and village viability are more promising. He'd like to create a second façade along the town parking lot to align with what the village zoning bylaw envisioned.

"I want to complete this building so it looks good on all sides," Sawchuk said.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

How many lovers? Historians speculate but don't really know.

Second in a series.

At Mon Plaisir, Catherine waited during the long days and luminous White Nights of June.

In St. Petersburg, her loyal Palace Guards declared her Matushka (Dear Little Mother) signifying the reverence that a son feels for the mother who has the right to command him as she sees fit.

Catherine the Conspirator? Ten days after the coup, Peter III dined with several cronies including one or more of the Orlov brothers. There was an argument, Peter died, rumors flew. The official account was colic complicated by an attack of hemorrhoids.

A very crafty Catherine, now crowned Empress, was aware that the monarchs of Europe considered Russia a barbaric country and her claim to the throne illegitimate. She determined to cultivate positive publicity and keep the support of both nobility and Palace Guards. The Hermitage, her Winter Palace, became a private club where noble guests left swords outside, forgot rank and relaxed. A set of rules tacked to the wall cautioned proper behavior: "One shall not sigh or yawn, damage, break, or gnaw at anything."

And her loyal lover Grigory Orlov? He lasted 10 years, during which they may have produced two or three children. He even bought her a ring, now known as the Orlov diamond. At a modest 193 carats, it's the fourth largest in the world. Upon his inevitable dismissal, she rewarded him with an estate and 6,000 serfs plus a 300-piece set of Sevres china.

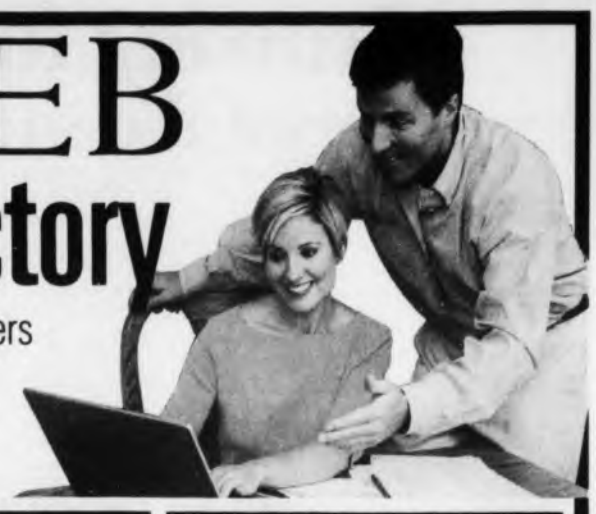
In 1764, Catherine the Collector purchased 225 paintings by the Old Masters, including Rembrandt, DaVinci, Van Dyck, Velazquez, Rubens, Titian, Murillo, Raphael, Veronese. The acquisition was yet another delicious coup. It seems that the paintings had been ordered by the German Emperor, Frederick the Great, so beloved by her despised husband Peter. Alas, in financial difficulties from one war or another, Frederick balked at payment and the Berlin dealer was left holding the bag – or rather, canvases.

Well, Catherine calculated, so they think we're barbaric? Let them see how these paintings enhance the splendor of my court and my reputation throughout Europe. And so they did.

Thereafter she continued acquiring Old Masters, not one by one, but by the boatload, hundreds at a time arriving in St. Petersburg Harbor. She herself used the term "gluttonous" to describe one purchase of 4,000 paintings. She wrote impishly "All this art is admired by mice and myself."

In 1769 she received 500 paintings from a French banker whom she rewarded with a sack full of sable skins. Art lovers in France were furious at the loss. A few years later England's Parliament, financing a war with those upstart colonies, reluctantly sent Prime Minister Robert Walpole's collection of paintings to Catherine instead of to the National Gallery. She paid about 40,000 English pounds (equivalent today about $8,000,000) for 20 Van Dycks, 19 Rubens, eight Titians, five Murillos and assorted others too numerous to mention. The English were outraged. Catherine wrote smugly "All the cabinets of Europe are only childish accumulations compared to ours."

Added to her collection of men was Gregory Potemkin. As a lover, he lasted only about two years, but their tender relationship continued until his death 17 years later. For a while it was said that Catherine ruled Russia, but Potemkin was master of Catherine. He was the only one in her collection who could equal her in intellect, his love verses the only poetry she every really loved. She wrote him hundreds of letters, even though the two were separated only by palace rooms. "My peacock, my Cossack, my golden pheasant, lion of the jungle, dearest, darling, my husband." Husband? It was the French ambassador who reported they'd been secretly married. After Potemkin's conquest of the Crimea, she gave him, as usual, a magnificent palace and the title Prince of Tauris.



How many lovers? Historians speculate but don't really know. The title "Great" refers mainly to her acquisition of land. At one time, through invasion and conquest, she owned one-fourth the area of Europe (including Lithuania, Ukraine, Poland, the Crimea, large parts of Turkey).

Her end was decidedly unglamorous. Age 67, she fainted on the way to the bathroom, fell into a coma, and died three days later. It was reported that at the end she uttered a shriek of rage.

HEALTH NOTES

Some facts about the swine flu

faces that may be contaminated with the flu virus. Avoid close contact with people who are sick.

Are there medicines to treat swine flu? Maybe. CDC recommends the use of Oseltamivir or Zanmivir for the treatment and/or prevention of infection with these swine influenza viruses. Antiviral drugs are prescription medicines (pills, liquid or an inhaler) that fight against the flu by keeping flu viruses from reproducing in your body. If you get sick, antiviral drugs can make your illness milder and make you feel better faster. They may also prevent serious flu complications. For treatment, antiviral drugs work best if started soon after getting sick (within 2 days of symptoms). The flu symptoms are similar flu strains treated by these drugs, but may not be specific to the current strain. It has been estimated that preparing a new antiviral drug will require approximately 13 weeks.

How long can an infected person spread swine flu to others? People with swine influenza virus infection should be considered potentially contagious as long as they are symptomatic and possible for up to 7 days following illness onset. Children, especially younger children, might potentially be contagious for longer periods.

What surfaces are most likely to be sources of contamination? Germs can be spread when a person touches something that is contaminated with germs and then touches his or her eyes, nose, or mouth. Droplets from a cough or sneeze of an infected person move through the air. Germs can be spread when a person touches respiratory droplets from another person on a surface like a desk and then touches their own eyes, mouth or nose before washing their hands.

How long can viruses live outside the body? We know that some viruses and bacteria can live 2 hours or longer on surfaces like cafeteria tables, doorknobs, and desks. Frequent hand-washing will help you reduce the chance of getting contamination from these common surfaces.

What can I do to protect myself from getting sick? There is no vaccine available right now to protect against swine flu. There are everyday actions that can help prevent the spread of germs that cause respiratory illnesses like influenza. Take these everyday steps to protect your health:

- Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. Throw the tissue in the trash after you use it.
- Wash your hands often with soap and water, especially after you cough or sneeze. Alcohol-based hand cleaners are also effective.
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs spread this way.
- Try to avoid close contact with sick people.

If you get sick with influenza, CDC recommends that you stay home from work or school and limit contact with others to keep from infecting them.

Can I get swine influenza from eating or preparing pork? No. Swine influenza viruses are not spread by food. You cannot get swine influenza from eating pork or pork products. Eating properly handled and cooked pork products is safe.

Aquarion offers reduced pricing for rain barrels

Aquarion Water Co. is offering North Cohasset residents the opportunity to purchase rain barrels at the discounted price of $72.95, a discount of $47 off the retail price of S119.95.

The average homeowner uses approximately 40 percent of water for outdoor use. A 1-inch rainfall on a 1,200 square foot roof will yield more than 700 gallons of water. Using a rain barrel is an excellent way to conserve some of this water. A quarter inch run-off from an average roof will easily fill the barrel. If there are five storms a season, that equals 275 gallons of free water. Rain barrel use reduces the stress on municipal water systems during the summer months and improves storm water management.

The rain barrels are made from 55-gallon plastic recycled containers. The top does not come off, so no children or pets can get in the barrel. It has a 6-inch diameter inlet opening covered with a screened louver to keep insects and debris out. The barrels have two brass spigots; one to allow connection to a hose for watering, and one for overflow. The hose can be connected to the overflow spigot and redirect the water away from a home. It even comes with a 5-foot hose with a shutoff valve. Multiple barrels can be joined for additional capacity.

Orders may be placed through May 6, and the rain barrel pick-up day is Saturday, May 9, at the Aquarion Water Co. open house at 900 Main Street, Hingham, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information and to order a rain barrel, call New England Rain Barrel Company at 877-977-3135 or order online nerainbarrel.com.

Growing for 50 years

This year, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset is commemorating its 50th anniversary. With the flowers and trees awakening after winter slumber, the spring is the ideal time for gardeners to celebrate and the Community Garden Club is putting on a series of events to mark their 50 years in town.

A standard flower show and a lecture on the club's history and how it has reflected changes in the lives of women are two of the upcoming events.

The objective of the Community Garden Club is to promote interest in gardens, their design and horticultural perfection; to promote interest in conservation of natural resources; and to conduct formal programs for the advancement of those issues.

Over the years the Garden Club has not deviated from its primary focus, but it has adjusted to changing times. The club now places more of an emphasis on conservation and environmental issues.

As much as possible, they communicate and disseminate information electronically. Monthly newsletters and other bits of information are sent by e-mail to members with computer capability.

The club has recently set up a box at the Recycling Transfer Facility where residents can recycle their used printer cartridges.

They routinely do community outreach in the schools through the junior gardeners program and at the Golden Living Center nursing home through the garden therapy.

The Community Garden Club designs and maintains the gardens at the Lightkeepers Residence, the Historical Society (Paul Pratt) building and Constitution Park (next to the post office).

Celebrating half-century mark

• Sunday, May 3, 2 to 4p.m., at the Pratt Building, "50 Years in Lives of Women." The Community Garden Club has joined forces with the Historical Society to present a special program commemorating the lives of women. Speakers will explore the things that have changed and the things that have stayed the same over the past five decades. Speakers include Polly Logan on how the Community Garden Club got its start, Fran O'Toole on the history of the club, Barbara Elliott on the changing social lives of women, Mary Eisenhaure on the domestic engineering role, and Judy Dickstein on technology and its effect. Light refreshments will be served. Free.

• Thursday, May 14, 1 to 4p.m., at Glastonbury Abbey, "A Golden Retrospective," a standard flower show. The show will have a floral design section, a horticulture section and an educational section. An afternoon tea will be served for a $5 charge. Otherwise, the event is open and free to the public.

• Friday, May 15, 10a.m. to 4p.m., at Glastonbury Abbey, "A Golden Retrospective," a standard flower show. Open and free to the public.

• Saturday, May 30, 9a.m. to 1p.m., Cohasset Historical Society Paul Pratt Building, Annual Plant Sale.

Currently, the Garden Club has a healthy membership of 160 members and no longer has a waitlist. For a time there was a waitlist of over 200 people. When it became more prevalent for women and mothers to have full-time jobs, the waitlist and membership declined. While there have been a handful of men in the organization over the years, right now the club consists solely of women.

The requirements to join the club aren't onerous. You need an interest in gardening or floral design, two current member sponsors, and a willingness to put time into the club's activities.

New members constantly breathe new life into the organization.

"(The club) hasn't expanded, but when new members join, they bring new ideas. The club will always be reinvigorated by new people," said Gilmore.

The strong bonds and camaraderie gained over years of Garden Club participation have kept members coming back.

"It's my social life," said Barbara Dillon, who joined the club in 1960 and is a master landscape design consultant.

Through a shared interest members have learned a lot from each other. Some have daughters that grew up together, were junior gardeners and now share a love of growing plants with their mothers. Each month, September through June, there are a number of local and regional workshops, field trips and other events members can take part in.

The club encourages its members to take advantage of the many opportunities for learning and community service. A few of the members have become flower show judges through the National Garden Clubs and The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

The Community Garden Club has had a window at the spring flower show in Boston, displays at the annual Art in Bloom exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts.

'A Golden Retrospective'

The upcoming standard flower show (Thursday, May 14 and Friday, May 15) will pay homage to the 50 years the Community Garden Club has been active. There are categories for design (arrangements of cut plant material), horticulture (plant specimen) and special exhibits.

"The flower show combines so many of the objectives of the garden club, including bringing the public into what we are doing," said Gilmore.

The flower show will be held at the Glastonbury Abbey on Hull Street in Hingham and is open to any and all amateur gardeners.

There is also a category for youth gardeners and educational exhibits. One of the special exhibits focuses on the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's sister garden club based in Nagoya, Japan. Representatives from the Nagoya Garden Club will be in attendance at the flower show.

The Community Garden Club has had a sister garden club based in Nagoya, Japan since 2002. Several members of the Garden Club of Nagoya will visit Cohasset for the standard flower show.

"The flower show shares a love of what we are seeing in our gardens and stimulating others to plant them," said Jenkins.

All judging will take place before the flower show is opened to the public at 1p.m. on Thursday.

Community Garden Club hosts President's Day Luncheon

Once a year, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset hosts the presidents from other garden club in the South Shore District and honors our club's past presidents at a President's Day Luncheon. This year the luncheon took place at Walton Rogers Hall, St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset Tuesday April 28th.

This year's luncheon was special since the club is celebrating its 50th anniversary. Our founding member, Polly Logan, was on hand to cut the cake. In addition to guests from several local garden clubs, we were pleased to welcome Louise Hannington, the South Shore District Director and Celeste Wilson, the President of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts. Celeste presented the CGC of Cohasset with a 50 Year Anniversary Certificate.

Bill Graham, the speaker, presented his very popular program " The Little Black Dress". He accessorized the little black dress to fit a number of engagements and produced an appropriate floral arrangement for each event.

The festivities associated with the 50th anniversary continue on May 14 and May 15 when the Community Garden Club presents a Standard Flower Show at Glastonbury Abbey.

Cohasset pitcher Kelly Naegelin came three outs away from a perfect game during their 12-0 win over Randolph on Friday. She did face the minimum 21 batters after getting a double play in the bottom of the seventh.

Kelly Naegelin flirted with perfection, Meredith Kelly went deep and the Cohasset softball team rolled to the championship of the first Cohasset Invitational Tournament during the spring break.

Cohasset won the opener 12-0 over Randolph and followed with a 3-0 victory over Pembroke.

Naegelin, who was named MVP, took a perfect game into the seventh inning against Randolph, before allowing a one-out bloop single to break up the perfect game.

When it was over, Naegelin had faced only 21 batters, striking out 12.

After the hit, Randolph's next batter lined into a game-ending double play.

Naegelin was happy to get the win, but would have enjoyed the perfect game.

"I was a little nervous," she said. "People were kind of backing away from me to give me space. A blooper kills, but I know I'll have more chances to throw no-hitters."

A day later against Pembroke, Naegelin wasn't perfect, but had enough stuff to toss a two-hitter with 14 punchouts, including two crucial ones with the bases loaded in the sixth.

In the sixth, the Skippers led 3-0 when Pembroke loaded the bases with one out on a hit and two errors.

Naegelin responded with the two strikeouts, then finished a 1-2-3 seventh.

Baseball team picking up steam

Pitching, defense key wins

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

After a tough start to the season, the Cohasset baseball team is beginning to make a game of it.

Most recently, the Skippers picked up a win over Hull. Sophomore pitcher Jeff Cavanaro went seven complete innings for the win. He struck out eight and gave up two earned runs. He also was two-for-three at the plate with two RBI. Offensively, sophomore shortstop Anders Goetz went two-for-three with two RBI and two stolen bases. Junior catcher Andy McKenna was one-for-two with two walks and three stolen bases.

Junior thirdbaseman Brendan Doonan was one-for-two with a triple and scored the game winning run on a throwing error. Freshman secondbaseman Jamie Faber picked up his first varsity hit going one-for-three with a walk

The young Skipper squad dropped a 3-2 decision to Cardinal Spellman Saturday, but have been playing well lately.

Saturday, Drew Cobin pitched four innings, allowing two earned runs. Brendan Doonan fnished up, allowing just one unearned run while taking the loss.

For the Skippers, who had been hit hard a couple of times earlier in the season, the game was another step in the right direction.

"Drew did a good job. He put us in a position to win," Skippers coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Then Brendan came in and pitched three strong innings. The winning run scored on a wild pitch with two strikes (and two out). If he leaves that runner at third we're tied into the sixth inning."

Cardinal Spellman scored the winner by taking advantage of a base hit, stolen base and the wild pitch.

"We're a young team," Skippers coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We only have four seniors. With the exception of two bad games we've been competitive. We just have to keep working. We've been getting some real nice defensive plays. We need more consistency at the plate. For most of these guys, they're facing varsity pitching for the

No break for Laxmen

Boys play tough games during vacation

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

While most of the school was taking a well-needed break last week, most of the Cohasset boys lacrosse team were close by to play some big-time games.

The Skippers fared well, winning two-of-three of their last games.

Monday, Cohasset downed Hull 17-0.

Earlier in the week, they beat Dover-Sherborn 10-8.

With several starters on vacation trips with the school, coach Stew Curran was able to get some of his younger players some playing time.

"There were young men on academic trips all over the world," Curran said. "They were in Italy and France. They missed a few games, but more importantly they gained academic and life experience. That's what's truly important."

With starting goalie Jack Murphy away, Eric Wasel was able to get a couple of starts in net and fared extremely well, getting two wins.

In the Dover-Sherborn game, Wasel and the defense clamped down in the second half to erase a 7-4 deficit.

"Eric was crucial in that game," Curran said. "When we were down we made changes in our defense in the second half And held them to one goal."

Dana Valentine played a good game defensively and Thomas Flibotte had a pair of goals.

Dean Driscoll had three goals and made four or five really solid offensive plays.

Boys tennis finds groove

The Cohasset boys tennis team has been playing some exceptional tennis recently, improving to 6-3 (3-0 South Shore League).

Cohasset beat Hingham earlier in the season and followed with a pair of wins over Marshfield, 4-1 and 3-2.

That put the Skippers into contention for a league title in a match against Norwell on Thursday.

Norwell has won 15 straight league crowns.

Girls Youth Lacrosse recaps for April 26

U15
Cohasset Blue 11,
Scituate 7

The U15 Blue team hosted Scituate Blue and put together their most complete game of the season. Cohasset scored in the first half on mostly one on one moves or fast breaks and built up a 3-goal advantage quickly on scores from Katie McKenna, Maddie Curley and Hope Kissick. Mackenzie Axelson stood tall between the pipes in the first half and made three great saves, including two where she caught the ball clean and made a nice clearing pass.

Scituate kept the pressure on in the second half by playing aggressive defense and converting on some fast breaks. The Blue squad would not be denied as the defense of Katie McCabe, Molly Fitzgerald and Shannon McGowan shut down the fast break and made some strong transition passes. McGowan would come charging up the field on a clear and after a whistle stopped her, finished the play by dodging two defenders and planting a goal in the top left corner. Micaela Durkin played strong defense in the first half and then moved to goalie in the second half and came up with two key saves.

Cohasset put the game away in the final 10 minutes with some excellent ball movement. Curley led the team with four assists, Kissick and McKenna had two each, and Cassedy Gwynn, Axelson and Lexa Grasz each had one helper. Converting on the strong passes were Kissick and McKenna with 3 goals each and Grasz and Curley with two scores. Two of the new players on the team, Carly Kinscherf and Isabelle Seal, both made a big impression with their hustle and passing as the Blue team won 11-7.

U11 Cohasset Blue

The Cohasset U11 Blue team hosted Scituate on the tail end of school vacation week and remains undefeated. We loaned some players to Scituate so that they could field two full teams for simultaneous 7 on 7 matches. This worked out well as it gave our players extra field time and made for interesting competition. Cohasset controlled the ball the majority of the time, never allowing it to stay on our defensive end for long. The day's heat created some lethargy and was an obstacle to overcome. Katie McKeon was solid in goal. Clare Glavin ran the field non-stop. Charlotte Morrison posted a couple goals as did Maggie O'Donnell. Kendall McConnaghey netted one too. Megan McElgunn, Alex Martini, Niki Federle, and Kate Fitzpatrick all had dominant moments where they controlled the ball for us. Well played on a hot day.

Cohasset White

The Cohasset U11 White team played its first home game of the season on Sunday and took part in two separate 7 v 7 games against Marshfield. In both contests, the White team was the superior team and easily outscored the visitors. The White team utilized quick passing techniques to find the open players, which led to multiple shots, and big first half leads in each contest. In both games, the Cohasset girls controlled the draws and kept Marshfield on the defensive. Again this week, the white team's defensive pressure was too much for Marshfield to handle as the team had many interceptions and forced bad passes in which they were very active in pouncing on the ground balls during both the first and second half. All the girls are improving each and every time they take the field and should be very proud of their performance. This week's offensive MVP's were Julia Hertzfelder and Olivia Gomez. White's defensive MVP's were Nadia Roy and goalie Jenny Wolfe.

first time."

The game was a rematch of an earlier game that Cohasset won 9-6.

In that game, Cobin pitched five innings, allowing nine hits, no walks, four runs (two earned) while striking out three.

Thomas Condon got the save giving up two runs, with one strikeout.

Offensively, Doonan had three hits with a double, and RBI and a stolen base. Schwantner had three hits, all hard-hit singles. He also knocked in two runs and stole a base. Andy McKenna had three hits with two RBI and a steal.

Doonan has been throwing very well.

In a 3-2 win over Harwich before vacation, Doonan threw five perfect innings. He wound up going the distance, allowing four hits and one earned run.

"That was a pitcher's battle," Afanasiw said. "Their pitcher had a great game."

In the win, Jeff Cavanaro and Derek Schwantner each had three hits.

The Skippers have shown they can roll with the punches.

After losing to Sacred Heart, 20-6, Afanasiw said his team was ready and fired up for a rematch.

Cohasset won the second time, taking a 7-4 decision.

Cavanaro picked up the win with five strong innings and Anders Goetz picked up the save.

Doonan and Schwantner both had three hits in the game.

"The kids were locked in for that game," Afanasiw said. "They scored three runs in the first and built on that."

With Tuesday's win over Hull, Cohasset improved to 4-6, with ten games left.

Cohasset needs to win six-of-10 to make the tournament.

Driscoll led the attack with three goals and an assist.

Will Wise had three goals and two assists and Ian Quinlan had a goal and three assists.

"Hull is a young program," Curran said. "Offensively we played very well. We were gearing up for Thursday's game at Scituate."

Wasel got another start in the Hull game and pitched a shutout in the first half before A.K. Kinnealey came in to play in net for the second half.

"Kinnealey played goal in youth lacrosse, but had never seriously played there at the varsity level.

Curran praised Kinnealey.

"He's a kid who can't get enough of the game," he said. "He works on his technique nonstop. He's exceptional on faceoffs. He wins better than 70 percent of faceoffs. That's crucial."

Cohasset was gearing up for Thursday's rematch against Scituate. The teams played in last year's state championship game and again a few weeks ago in the Chowda Cup in Scituate. The Sailors won that game in overtime, 10-9.

The game was moved to a later start to let more fans get to the game.

"We're ready for the challenge," Curran said. "The kids are excited."

Cohasset improved to 8-4 with the Hull victory.

Mark the date on your calendar and check back to the CYBSA website for more information as the event draws near.

Softball team wins its own tournament

"That was the first time we've had a clean seventh inning," Cohasset coach Rob Spofford said. "That was important for us."

While Naegelin has been shutting teams down, Meredith Kelly has been practically unstoppable with the bat.

Kelly's three-run homer in the fifth was the big bomb of a seven-run frame that put the game away for the hosts, upping the lead from 5-0 to 12-0.

Kelly Zappollo, who was named to the all-tournament team, had a single and a double and Kayla Orner also contributed hits.

Orner, a freshman, was particularly impressive, catching both games while the regular starter was away during vacation week.

"Kayla had a big day," Spofford said. "A lot of freshmen stepped up and played well. Brittany Pinkus had some hits and an RBI. We were missing quite a few starters because of vacation. I don't want to make it about that, but our younger players stepped up. There's a bright future ahead."

In the Pembroke game, Meredith Kelly was three-for-three with a double and a run.

Brittany Dunn had two hits and a run. Naegelin chipped in with a hit and Orner added a hit.

Spofford was pleased with the tournament in general.

"People had a great time," he said. "You couldn't ask for better weather. For us it was great to get a win over two Division 2 schools (Randolph and Pembroke)."

Although Cohasset was held to three runs against Pembroke, and their tough starter Jamie Block, Spofford liked the way his players attacked.

"We hit the ball hard," he said. "You can't complain about that. We hit a few right at people. Pembroke's outfield was spectacular today."

The win improved Cohasset to 8-1.

The rest of the schedule is all South Shore League play, with the exception of Nantucket at the end of the season.

Cohasset needs only two wins to make the MIAA Tournament.

The Lady Skippers will have another shot at East Bridgewater, their one loss, soon and at home.

Still, Spofford knows there is room for improvement.

"We're working on ways to keep the defense sharp," he said. "With Kelly throwing so many strikeouts it can be harder to focus and stay sharp. Then when a team does hit the ball against a hard thrower like Kelly, they hit it hard. We need to work on that."

Before the tournament, Cohasset beat Harwich 4-3 behind 15 strikeouts from Naegelin.

"That was a real pitchers duel with Nell O'Connor," Spofford said. "She's a really good pitcher. We had to battle. Kelly gave up eight hits and three walks and we made six errors. Their runs were all unearned."

Orner had a double to drive in the winning run in that game.

Cohasset was in action against Norwell yesterday.

World travelers return from spring break

LAUREN MACK

Hello everybody! And welcome back from what was hopefully a great spring break! CHS students were apparently spotted around the world in locations including, but not limited to: Belize, Guatemala, Italy, Florida, Puerto Rico, and many, many others. Our world travelers came back with tans, several battle scars (also commonly referred to as severe bug bites), and a love for foreign food and culture. I even heard a few stories about a large arachnid that was found, the hard way, in someone's shoe. In other news, today marks the first day in May, and every AP student knows what the beginning of May means: AP Exams. Starting next Monday, students in the AP classes, who have sold their souls to Collegeboard, will take the test(s) that will determine the rest of their entire lives. That last part was completely exaggerated, but AP Exams do begin on Monday and will continue on through the following week. The good news that comes from this, though, is that once the AP tests are all over, the classes get much easier because essentially, that test is the final exam. Now that's a deal if I ever saw one.

With this past vacation, I was given time to think about who I could have take over my position next year as student correspondent for the Mariner. Who, I though, could do the "Life at CHS" column the justice it rightfully deserves? As I pondered names of upcoming seniors, one seemed to keep occurring. Now, it is with great joy that I announce that I have chosen the next great communicator in the world of local high school gossip! However, I cannot simply tell you all right now who this mystery senior-to-be is, but I will give you weekly hints as to whom he might be. This week's hint: his presence has graced the stage of CHS as well as the halls. With 17 days for seniors and four articles left for me, I am pleased to say that we are really in the home stretch! And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend full of studying! Goodbye!

'Parent 2 Parent'

Join the Parents Advisory Council (PAC) at 7:30 p.m. on May 5 at the Osgood School to discuss with the PAC Board any issues, concerns and positive information that they would like to share regarding the school district. RECREATION NOTES

Summer program signups at Town Hall

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Summer Registration – Registrations at Cohasset Town Hall will take place for all of our programs including playground, summer xtreme, youth tennis and any program listed on the brochure Monday, May 4, through Thursday, May 7, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday May 5, from 5 to 7 p.m.

U.S.C.G.A. Boating Safety Course – May 2 and 9. The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a two-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however, certification in this course is mandatory for 16 years old and under, who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. U.S.C.G.A. instructors will teach the two-session course, which will be held on two consecutive Saturdays, May 2 and May 9, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

To register, visit www.cohassetrec.com, as soon as possible, as the class will be limited in size. There will be a $40 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the text book and class materials. Checks may be payable to the Town of Cohasset or register online at www.cohassetrec.com.

While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children aged 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of the class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal water craft. State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

Boot Camp Fitness – Cohasset Common, Saturdays and Sundays 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.: $50 for one day, $100 for two – eight weeks. This is an interval callisthenic training program for men and women. Class includes running/ walking, jump roping, jacks, lunges, squat thrusts, single running knees, skipping, push-ups, sit-ups, stairs and hills. Class goal is to improve cardio endurance, and strength. Bring water, jump rope, running shoes and dress in layers. Get ready to bring your fitness level to the next phase. Session 1: May 2 – June 28; Session 2: July 11 – Aug. 30; Sept. 12 – Nov. 8. Instructor: Betsy Callanan

Nautical Mile – Instructional youth track program at CHS Track. All Abilities Welcome; Running Program for grades 2 through 8. Saturdays; May 2 through Oct. 31 from 8 to 9a.m. (no rain make-ups). Weekly instructional track program to include training in 100 m., 200 m., 400 m., 800m., and 1 mile. You will be able to measure your improvement through locally sponsored meets. All you need is sneakers, water bottle, and a desire to run and have fun! Make up days can be done at Scituate on Sunday mornings at 9 a.m. Cost: $80.

Yoga – Cohasset Town Hall. Hatha Yoga Class - Moving meditation including gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Cost: $8 drop in. Thursdays at 9:30 a.m.

Kids Love Crafts – Recreation Center. Join us for a jammed filled program of ooey, gooey arts and crafts, stories and songs. Watch your 2 to 4 year old child make a mess and have some fun as they create crafts that can be treasured for a lifetime. Space is limited to 10 children with parent. Cost: $60. Thursdays: 10 to 10:45 a.m. May 7 – June 11, for six weeks

Elementary Engineering – Recreation Center. This exciting hands-on engineering class combines LEGO Educations & LEGO Technic materials to explore motorized simple machines by building realistic models. Student teams creatively solve challenges using concepts learned in class. Celebrating science and technology to children ages 7 to 12, using real-world context and hands-on experimentation. Cost: $90. Tuesdays: Engineering 1: 3:45 to 4;30 p.m.; Engineering 2: 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. May 12 – June 16. Six weeks

New York or Metropolitan Museum of Art – Saturday, May 16. This special trip to the Big Apple gives you a choice between spending the day in New York shopping and touring or admission to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Fee of $49 includes round trip motor coach transportation, guide and $69 with admission at the Museum plus audio head sets. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6:00am and returning around 10:30 p.m.

Sunday Afternoon Jam Session – Cohasset Rec Center. Aspiring musicians can come down to the Rec Center on Sunday afternoons from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. and get together and play music. Music industry veteran and Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz is teaming up with Cohasset Rec and thanks to the generosity of Crossroads Music from Hanover for this new program. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Amps and drums will be available on site generously provided by Crossroads Music. Cost is $6 per visit or an all access pass of $20 for five weeks.

Summer Xtreme – has students entering grades six through nine traveling to premier field trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball fields to adventurous outings like the Codzilla thrill ride out of Long Wharf, Boston, which will be paired with an IMAX movie. With a $99/week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs. "This program fills that void where it offers the bests of both worlds; providing the kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends but most importantly for parents it is in a fun and safe atmosphere", according to Carroll.

What's in store this summer?

Week 1 – June 29 – July 2, Water Country and Monster Mini Golf

Week 2 – July 6 – 9, Codzilla Boat Ride and Boston Bowl and Billiards

Week 3 – July 13 – 16, Six Flags and Morton's Pond

Week 4 – July 20 – 23, Water Wizz and Paintball

Week 5 – July 27 – 30, Canobie Lake Park and Kayaking

Week 6 – Aug. 3 – 6, Paw Sox and Fenway Park Tour/Tomb

Week 7 – Aug. 10 – 13, Water Wizz and Lazer Tag

The program meets four days a week, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders, and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Director of the program, Michael Curtin has been a Middle school teacher at Atlantic Middle School for 14 years teaching math, science and technology. Curtin has worked for Quincy recreation for 20 years, running gyms and after school programs. He also acted as sports specialist during summer recreation in Quincy. Curtin was Co-recreational director for three summers at Great Harbors Resident Association in Falmouth where he operated the swimming pool, organized activities for adults and children and ran tournaments. Curtin is the proud father of two beautiful little girls.

Assistant Director of the program, Michael Barra, has been involved in recreation departments on the south shore for the past decade. Barra started as a volunteer counselor in training at Hingham Recreation in seventh and eighth grade, where he worked for the next five years as a counselor for children ranging in ages from 4 to 12. Barra enjoys all forms of outdoor activity and avidly engages in kayaking, mountain biking, snowboarding, hiking with his golden retriever and tent camping in his free time.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club in cooperation with the Cohasset Recreation Department announces the Summer Drama Workshop Program. Together they offer a positive summer theater experience where children have fun, an outlet for creative expression, and the opportunity to participate in a full-scale musical production. This summer we will offer two distinct summer drama programs designed for specific age groups. The first, open to kids 8-13 is the musical, Annie. We are very excited to present this favorite of all musicals to the younger segment of our program. In this production, the kids 8-13 get to fill all the parts including the leading roles. This show is a slightly shorter version of the original, with a run-time of 60-80 minutes, and it is specifically written for elementary and middle school age actors. This opens up much more opportunity for everyone in this age group to have spotlighted speaking, singing and dancing roles. Open registration begins on Saturday, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium. Rehearsals will start June 1 and run Mondays and Thursdays from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. until June 18. Starting June 23rd rehearsals will run Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Concurrent to the youth program will be the CDC Summer Drama Workshop Program for Teens. This show will be the new musical, recently completing a Broadway run, The Wedding Singer, which will be open to kids 13-19 years old. "The Wedding Singer" is a new Broadway musical with contemporary styling, choreography and music. It is hip and current while still being totally appropriate for teens. The sign up for this program will also be on Saturday, May 16, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. with rehearsals starting June 3, and running Wednesdays and Fridays from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Starting June 23, rehearsals will move to Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

The performances for both shows take place in the air-conditioned Cohasset Middle High School Auditorium. Show dates and times for both shows are as follows:

July 17, Friday 10 a.m.: "Annie" for Rec. Dept. kids and outside audience

July 17, Friday 7:30 p.m.: "The Wedding Singer"

July 18, Saturday 3 p.m. "Annie"

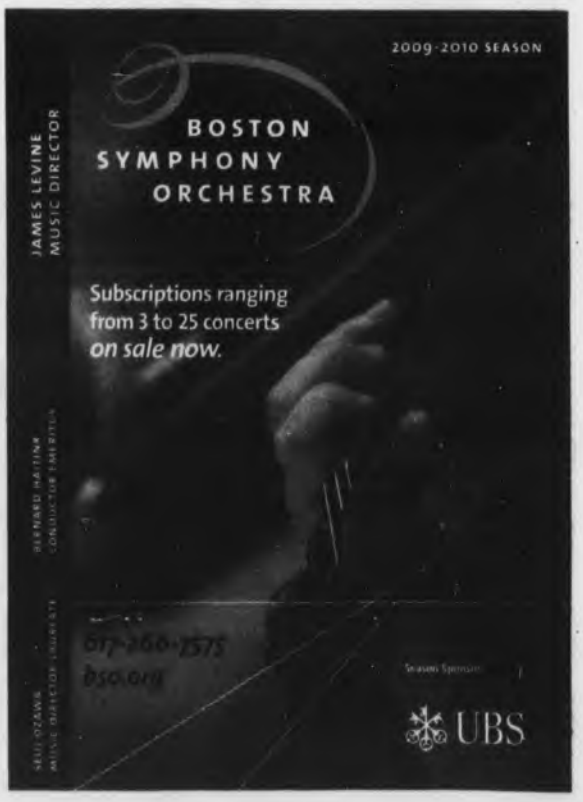
July 18, Saturday 7:30 p.m. "The Wedding Singer"

July 19, Sunday 3 p.m. "Annie"

July 19, Sunday 7:30 p.m. "The Wedding Singer"

The cost per child is $350. If there are two or more children in the program, the cost is $300 per child. Included in that costs is a show t-shirt, script, complete libretto, cast party, and two free tickets per family to a performance of the show that your child is in. In addition, your child will also receive one free ticket to the other drama program.

CDC will also offer up to a maximum of five student intern scholarships to teens 16 and older who are interested in learning about directing, music directing, set design and choreography. If accepted they will work closely with the director, music director and choreographer of the youth program and be assistants on staff for that production. In exchange for their assistance, they would receive 50% off the cost of the tuition for their drama program. Acceptance into the internship program will be based on application.



CPR – Cohasset Town Hall. American Heart Association CPR courses instructed by members of the Cohasset Fire Department; CPR instruction includes adult, child and infant CPR. Two-year certification card. Cost $45 per class. Wednesday, June 3, 6 to 10 p.m.

Instant Piano – Cohasset Town Hall. You don't need years of weekly lessons to learn piano. You can learn enough in this one workshop to play almost any song on the piano with two hands. Then go on to perfect your technique at home using a home-study CD provided by the instructor. This is the system the pros use—chords, not tedious note reading. Over 150,000 have taken this course successfully since its inception in 1982. It really works. Fee: $64, includes course materials (book/CD). Wednesday, June 10, 6:30 to 10 p.m.

Mother's Day Concert at First Parish

The Washington Post calls guitarist Aaron Larget-Caplan "a riveting artist whose musical styling begs immediate attention." He will be performing a program called "Dance Love Sleep — a Mother's Day Concert" at First Parish on North Main Street on Sunday, May 10 at 4 pm. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children. All mothers will receive half-price admission!

"Dance Love Sleep" is a program of lullabies, romances, and exotic dances from Latin America (Venezuela, Cuba, Argentina, Brazil), Spain and the United States by such varied composers as Paganini, Schubert, Albéniz, Brouwer, and Gershwin. A special feature of this program will be new lullabies composed specifically for Aaron through his New Lullabies Project. At the end of 2006 he began commissioning composers to write a short lullaby of two to four minutes for solo guitar. To date, Aaron has received over 14 new works from composers throughout the United States.

With performances in Spain, Italy, and on both US coasts as a soloist and chamber musician, Larget-Caplan rides the razor's edge of the guitar.

Born in the guitar capital of Oklahoma and raised in Colorado, Aaron began playing the classical guitar at age 16 and gave his debut at the Tabor Opera House one year later. Since then he has devoted his life to the performance and study of the guitar, and the concert stage. He has appeared repeatedly on National Public Radio in New York, Oregon, Colorado and Maine.

A versatile musician, Aaron is the founder of ¡Con Fuego! a Spanish music and dance group.

A versatile musician, Aaron Larget-Caplan is the founder of ¡Con Fuego! a Spanish music and dance group.

He also founded 'Diablo y Tango', a guitar and violin duo that focuses on the music of Paganini, Piazzolla and other Latin American composers. He has received awards and grants from the American Composers Forum, D'Addario Foundation, Denver Classical Guitar Society, Mu Phi Epsilon, New England Conservatory, and the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Enamored with new music, Aaron has premiered over a dozen new solo or ensemble compositions, many of which are dedicated to him, by such composer as Daniel Pinkham, John McDonald, Lior Navok, José Elizondo, and Kurt Erickson. He is also a passionate educator, and introduces Spanish and classical music and history into schools and other community settings through cultural programs and artist residencies. Aaron's debut CD,

"Tracing a wheel on water," was released in 2006, and his second CD is due out later this year. Aaron is a graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, where he studied with David Leisner and Eliot Fisk. He has performed and studied at festivals in Italy, Spain and across the United States. He continues his studies of body physics and geometry and its relation and application to playing and teaching of the guitar with wife, healer, and muse, Catherine Larget-Caplan.

King Jewelers hosts B-I-N-G-O fundraiser

Benefits the South Shore Art Center

It was B-I-N-G-O for the arts at King Jewelers in Cohasset on April 9 when more than 75 customers and friends turned out eager to play ball for a good cause. Together with neighboring businesses Lemon Lime Aveda Lifestyle Salon, Tan-Zia Tanning Studio and Peridot Nail & Skin Care Center, the group of merchants at King Plaza raised more than $1,700 to benefit the South Shore Art Center.

"The fun began with the purchase of a $10 B-I-N-G-O ball that gave each participant a chance to win one of more than 100 prizes donated by King Plaza businesses ranging in value from $10 to $200," said Valerie King, owner of King Jewelers.

Guests who donated $100 or more were also eligible to win one of three grand prizes including a first prize sapphire and diamond bangle bracelet donated by King Jewelers and valued at $3,000; a second prize Day of Beauty at Lemon Lime Aveda Lifestyle Salon, Peridot Nail and Skin Care Center and Tan-Zia Tanning Studio; and a third prize Night on the Town complete with dinner and overnight accommodations at the Colonnade Hotel in Boston. Grand prize winners will be announced at the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival on June 21.

"There are only 150 tickets being sold for the grand prize drawing in June," said King, who was thrilled with the response she received from all who participated in an evening of cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, games, gifts and prizes.

"In these difficult economic times unfortunately the arts are all too often forgotten" King said, who stresses that without community support many of the arts programs would have to be relinquished. "The outpouring from the community and vendors was truly heartwarming," she said, noting that everyone in the plaza participated including local jewelry designer Mary Ann Englander who was also on hand offering a 10 percent discount on her hand-crafted Dragonfly Studios collection, sold exclusively on the South Shore at King Jewelers.

"MaryAnn's generosity on these designer pieces is astounding" said King, "an act of kindness that compelled King Jewelers to donate an additional 10 percent of all Dragonfly purchases sold that evening to the South Shore Art Center making it a win-win situation for all."

For more information about the upcoming Arts Festival, scheduled for June 19, 20 and 21, on Cohasset Town Common, visit the South Shore Art Center Web site at ssac.org.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

IT'S NOT TOO LATE TO FIND THE RIGHT SUMMER CAMP.
JUST ASK THE RIGHT QUESTIONS!

Asking these key questions of yourself and the child will help narrow the search. From here, make a list of answers and then search for camps based on your criteria:

1. What/who is driving the camp search? Unparalleled fun and learning? New experiences, skills and friends? Need for child care? Family tradition? Encouragement from friends?

2. What are your leading camp search criteria? Which are "non-negotiable" and which are "preferences"?

3. What type of camp are you looking for? Which of your family's values should be reflected in the camp philosophy? How religious? How competitive? How diverse? How much camper choice? Camps are intentional communities. What they do and why is reflected in the staff members they hire, the schedules they follow, the activities they offer, and their materials.

4. What activities/programs interest you and your child? What level of intensity are you looking for? Are you looking for opportunities to try new activities, to play, to advance current skills, to practice, to compete or to specialize?

5. What kind of facilities will your camper consider? Discuss electricity, bathrooms and dining.

6. What session length, from 8 weeks to a few days, is comfortable for you, for your child and for your family's summer schedule? The most common session lengths are: full season (7-8 weeks), half season (3-4 weeks), two weeks and one week. Remaining flexible about session length can increase your camp options.

7. What camp clientele do you want to consider? There are camps for boys only, girls only, coed, brother/sister, religious groups, underserved populations, and children with special needs.

8. What is your budget for camp tuition? Camp remains an affordable option for most everyone. Some camps offer financial assistance. Financial aid procedures vary from camp to camp, so be sure to ask and to read brochures and websites carefully.

Provided by the American Camp Association, New England, the region's leading source for "all things summer camp." Additional camp search resources available online:

Cohasset Sailing Club

Cohasset Sailing Club announces its new Web site and 2009 season. The revised and expanded Web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, has updated details on club features, including instructional programs beginning with fourth-graders, kids turning 10-years old by Labor Day 2009; and continuing on to teenagers and adults.

Application forms can also be downloaded from the site and turned in at the registration weekend, which will take place at the club on Government Island from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday, May 16, and noon to 2 p.m., on Sunday, May 17. Applications for membership and all programs, dock slips, etc. must be made in person at registration.

CSCR Summer Institute

The CSCR Summer Institute kick-off event will take place at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, May 26, in Bancroft Hall, Lightkeepers, Residence, Government Island, Cohasset. The evening will feature a presentation on bio-film bacteria in Cohasset Harbor and a summary presentation of independent research conducted by seniors August Oddleifson and Jean Thomae. CSCR will also share its plan to produce a "State of the Harbor" document for the community.

This presentation is mandatory for all students planning on participating in summer research or CSCR staff work. A parent should accompany each student. Parents, as well as students, should attend to learn what CSCR does and its plans for the future.

The evening presentation will last only one hour, but will be informative. Students are expected to confirm their attendance by replying to Jack Buckley at jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com.

Cohasset admiral to be honored May 14

The "Friends of Massachusetts Maritime Academy", a social and philanthropic organization of MMA alumni and friends will be sponsoring a testimonial dinner in honor of Rear Admiral Thomas E. Burke, U.S. Maritime Service, on the evening of May 14th at Atlantica on Cohasset Harbor. Proceeds of the evening, which will include a silent auction, will be committed to scholarships for cadets at MMA in Admiral Burke's name.

Admiral Burke is celebrating the 70th anniversary of his graduation from the Massachusetts Nautical School, the predecessor of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy and he has served his alma mater with distinction in several voluntary capacities for over 50 years. He had a distinguished war record during WWII serving in all theaters of the war and was one of the youngest ship captains of that time. A long-time resident of Cohasset, where he and his lovely wife Rita raised seven children, he went on to a very successful insurance career. A prominent citizen of the South Shore, Admiral Burke was one of the founders and benefactors of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

For details and reservations, contact George Gillis, MMA '64, at gfgillis@verizon.net or 508-737-7074.

Worship Notes

Intergenerational religious evening at First Parish

Busy schedules, work obligations, family commitments can make attending Sunday morning religious education classes extremely challenging. First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset's Religious Education (RE) Committee acknowledges these difficulties and will offer a fun filled family alternative.

On Friday, May 8, the RE program will hold its monthly "Thank God It's Friday" Intergenerational RE program to begin at 6 p.m. in Trueblood Hall located in the Parish House at 23 North Main St.. A simple pasta dinner will be provided along with intergenerational prayer and socializing. Following dinner, youngsters and their adult companions will team up with one another (or against one another) for an evening of board games, trivia, and other family fun games.

Whether you are single or partnered, whether you have children or not – All are welcome to bring your busy week to a close and start off your weekend in an engaging way with a welcoming, spiritual community. The cost is free.

For information, contact Jim FitzGerald, Interim Director of Religious Education at 781-383-1100 or:

JFitzGerald@firstparishcohasset.org.

Mitzvah Day

The annual Mitzvah Day will take place Sunday, May 3, at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, Hingham, It is an important day for the Sha'aray Shalom community. Mitzvah means "good deed," and is a component of Jewish life.

There are seven organized ways to help this year: Donating blood; Visiting the elderly at a local nursing home; helping at the Sha'aray Shalom celebration BBQ; gardening and clean up at Sha'aray Shalom; children's charity crafts project; flea market; and Walk for Hunger.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom is an active, vibrant Jewish Synagogue on the South Shore. Interested families and individuals are invited to explore programs, commitment and fellowship.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
APRIL 27, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might need to do a bit more investigating before making a career move. You do best when you come armed with the facts. A personal matter still needs tending to.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creativity plus your good business sense once more combine to give you an important advantage in a difficult workplace situation. An ally proves his or her loyalty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Avoid rushing into something just because it offers a break from your usual routine. Take things a step at a time to be sure you're moving in the right direction.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Bouncing back from a disappointing incident isn't easy, but you should find a welcome turn of events emerging. Spend the weekend with someone special.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An incomplete project needs your attention before someone else takes it over and uses it to his or her advantage. There'll be lots of time for fun and games once you get it done.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Doubts involving a potential career change need to be resolved quickly so they don't get in the way when you feel you're finally ready to make the big move.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Looking to blame someone for a workplace problem could backfire if it turns out you've got the wrong "culprit." Best to get more facts before acting on your assumptions.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience might still be called for until you're sure you finally have the full story that eluded you up till now. A trusted associate could offer valuable guidance.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Look into your recent behavior to see if you could have caused the coolness you might now be sensing from a loved one. If so, apologize and set things straight.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Easing up on your social activities allows you to focus more of your energies on a long-neglected personal matter. You can get back into party mode by the weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A dispute with a colleague can be resolved peacefully once you both agree to be more flexible about the positions you've taken and allow for more open-minded discussions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Volunteering to take on added responsibilities could be a risky way to impress the powers-that-be. Do it only if you're sure you won't be swept away by the extra workload.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Take a springtime walk on the wild side on Cape Cod

Stephen Jermanok
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Wellfleet, Mass. — Just thinking about heading to Cape Cod in summer, your mind eases, neck muscles loosen and pulse slows. But the reality is you can't have the Cape to yourself that time of year - there's the Sagamore Bridge traffic to contend with, not to mention other folks on the Cape Cod National Seashore beaches (and why do the loud ones always seem to be wearing Yankees hats?).

Springtime is fortunately another matter. "Today the air was beautifully clear, and the sea no longer dark and stormy, but sparkling and full of life," beloved naturalist Henry David Thoreau wrote in his book, "Cape Cod," more than 150 years ago. You can still find a semblance of serenity on the Cape in the springtime months.

Follow the cue of birdwatchers and early morning dog walkers, who stroll across marshes and secluded beaches. Many of the Cape's finer walks are on the far-less hectic Cape Cod Bay side of the peninsula.

Great Island Trail

Not far from the crowds at Marconi Beach in Wellfleet is the National Seashore's longest trail, the 7-mile (round-trip) Great Island Trail. The trail follows the circumference of Great Island, a former whaling port and now one of the most remote areas in Cape Cod. For the serious walker who yearns for isolation, this path should not be missed. Simply bring water, a hat, sunscreen, and a picnic lunch, and away you go.

Stroll down the short hill from the parking lot and take a right, continuing around the marsh the entire distance. This small strip of sand is called The Gut, the other side being Great Island. At the fork, take a left toward Smith Tavern. Just prior to reaching the easternmost tip of the island where people often fish for stripers and blues, you'll see another sign directing you over the dunes through the woods.

The trail winds through the pine forest to the site of an original whaling tavern. However, you'll have to use your imagination since there is only a small plaque now. Just picture ol' Pegleg banging his way to the bar, smelling God-awful from bathing in whale oil. "Give me some more rum," he yells to the bartender, knowing he'll have to go back to that savage sea yet again to fight the mighty whale. If this image doesn't work, look for red fox. When I was here last, I saw this golden sheen of fur whisk by me with something in his mouth, most likely a jackrabbit.

I have rarely seen another person on this desolate strip of sand, just large scallop shells and tiny fiddle crabs - funny-looking critters who have one oversized claw bigger than their entire body. If you start to feel like Lawrence of Arabia lost in the desert, look out at 10 o'clock and you'll see Provincetown's Pilgrim Monument, your only sign of civilization.

John Wing Trail

A much shorter walk on Cape Cod Bay leaves from Brewster, behind the Cape Cod Museum of Natural History (walkers should park at Drummer Boy Park; the museum lot is reserved for its visitors).

The 45-minute loop, called the John Wing Trail, is named for the European settler who built a house here in 1656. A chorus of songbirds welcomes you, as you walk on the boardwalk planks across the marsh surrounded by tall reed grass. A large osprey nest sits atop a pole off to the right. The trail then heads inland through a forest of pitch pine, red cedar, and oak trees. Bear left and you'll soon reach the beach.

At low tide, you can walk as far as you want across the exposed tidal flats. When you tire, turn right and walk along the sand until you see another trail leading from the dunes through the beach plum bushes into the woods. Slender Paine's Creek appears on your left, cutting through the marsh. A right turn at the John Wing Memorial sign leads you past the foundation of this settler's house.

Indian Lands Conservation Area

Not far away in Dennis, another short trail is popular with local dog walkers in the early morning. Start at the Dennis Town Offices parking lot and stroll on the sand under the power lines. The railroad tracks on the right were once used to bring vacationers from New York to the South Dennis station.

In five minutes, you'll see a sign for the Indian Lands Conservation Area. Stay to the left as the trail splits and you'll be standing on a bluff above the Bass River. To your right is a marsh popular with Canada geese and the great blue heron in summer. The 1/2-mile trail circles around a forest of pitch pine and bayberry bushes along the banks of the river. Walking this stretch, it's not uncommon to find someone wading thigh-deep in the water, raking for oysters.

We can never go back to the days when the only people Thoreau saw in this area (the deforested Cape was one big dune back in the mid-19th century) were wreckers, people who searched the beach for driftwood and fragments of wrecked vessels. Yet, the ideal of the Cape as a placid retreat for the overworked urbanite remains true. Like Thoreau, you may just have to walk a wee bit to find it.

Lyme Disease Warning

The dreaded deer tick has wreaked havoc lately on people who simply want to savor nature's beauty. Overgrown grassy areas like a saltwater marsh are exactly the spots where ticks flourish. So take precaution and wear long pants when walking. Places like REI sell lightweight "safari pants" that are perfect for springtime activity. Wear high white socks underneath, so you can spot those pinhead-sized bugs before they latch on to you.

IF YOU go...

Indian Lands Conservation Area: From Rte. 6, take Exit 9 and drive 0.7 miles south on Rte. 134 to the third traffic light. Turn right on Upper County Road and make the next right onto Main Street. Park in the Dennis Town Offices parking lot on the left-hand side of the road.

Century old play awakens to earn 'Best Musical'

Alternative rock provides edgy soundtrack to 1891's 'Spring Awakening'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

'Spring Awakening' will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, through May 24. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online to BroadwayAcrossAmerica.com.

Playwright Frank Wedekind's depiction of small town teenagers discovering their sexuality in "Spring Awakening" was banned in the writer's homeland of Germany when it was first published in 1891. Fast forward to today: Adolescents on the cusp of adulthood still face some of the same angst-fueled tumult as they did over 100 years ago, but a lot else has changed. Indeed, the city once known for its "Banned in Boston" approach to anything even slightly racy welcomes a musical version of the Wedekind drama to the Colonial Theatre this week.

With its alternative rock score by Duncan Sheik, direction by Michael Mayer, book by Steven Sater, and choreography by Bill T. Jones, all taking home 2007 Tony Awards, not to mention a Best Musical award for the show itself, the youth-infused "Spring Awakening" flouted Broadway convention to become one of the most talked about new shows in recent years. Tom Hulce, one of the show's Tony Award-winning producers, wasn't surprised.

"Then and now, it illuminates not only the stories of these young people, but also the role that we, as adults, take in raising our teenagers – the challenges of finding a way to respond to their needs, to empower them with the truth and do all within our grasp to guide them with love and understanding."

'Spring Awakening' producer Tom Hulce.

Hulce, 55, was a young actor not too far away from his own teenage years when he first became aware of the play. Many years later, while he was making the transition from actor to producer, the play was still on his mind.

"I discovered the book in the 1970s, around the time I got my first big break in New York as a replacement in the original Broadway production of 'Equus.' It was the same year that the play version of 'Spring Awakening' had its London premiere. And then several years ago, director Michael Mayer and I were exchanging ideas about various new projects that we both found intriguing. I mentioned that I was thinking about commissioning an opera based on Wedekind's play, and Michael told me that he had just started work on a musical based on the same material with Steven and Duncan. He said the plan was to leave the story in its original time and place, but with music in Duncan's contemporary style," recalled Hulce by telephone recently.

"As soon as I learned that they planned to leave the story in the 1890s, but with contemporary music, I was interested. The thrill of young people finding ways to express themselves in what were restrictive lives seemed to me to be very rich material. These young people had parents and religious leaders who were not willing to help them celebrate the most exciting time in a young person's life. When you set that story to the music of today – the soundtrack of young people's lives – you have something that is really quite thrilling."

After a number of workshops, concerts and rewrites over a seven-year period, the musical premiered at off-Broadway's Atlantic Theatre Company three years ago. It transferred to Broadway on Dec. 10, 2006, where it ran until January of this year before embarking on a national and then international tour that will take the show to Vienna, London, Tokyo, and Korea. A feature film is also in the works, with "Charlie's Angels" director McG (whose real name is Joseph McGinty Nichol) rumored to be at the helm.

"It's startling to go from a 160-seat former church in New York, where all we thought about was how every element could be brought to life, to where we are today. It has been an amazing journey."

And one with similarities to an earlier experience that Hulce – an Emmy Award-winner for his portrayal of a gay pediatrician in the 1995 TV movie "The Heidi Chronicles" – had in the 1984 feature film "Amadeus," for which he earned a Best Actor Academy Award nomination playing Mozart.

"At the Academy Awards in 1984, 'Amadeus' had 11 nominations and won in eight categories. That my acting partner and very good friend, F. Murray Abraham, won in the same category that I was nominated in made my loss much easier to take.

"In 2007, 'Spring Awakening' earned 11 Tony nominations and won eight, too, just like 'Amadeus.' Both were very much celebrations of everyone involved."

"Spring Awakening" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, through May 24. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcrossAmerica.com.

Lappen joins Crittenton Women's Union board

COURTESY PHOTO

Edward Lappen of Cohasset, chief executive officer of Lappen Auto Supply Inc.

Crittenton Women's Union, a Boston-based nonprofit organization dedicated to helping low-income women attain economic independence, recently named Edward Lappen of Cohasset, chief executive officer of Lappen Auto Supply Inc., to its board of directors.

Lappen, who has headed up Lappen Auto Supply for the past 27 years, was voted unanimously to the CWU Board of Directors in March.

Lappen grew Lappen Auto Supply Co., based in Quincy, to 20 locations with more than 400 employees. In 2005, he sold the business to Advance Auto Parts, but retained a small portion of the business that sells automotive service equipment. Lappen serves as vice chairman of the Cohasset Advisory Committee and is a member of the local Democratic Town Committee. He is an adult adviser for the Appalachia Service Project and team captain for the American Cancer Society Relay for Life. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Clark University and his juris doctor degree from Suffolk University.

Crittenton Women's Union, a Boston-based nonprofit organization, combines direct service programs, independent research and public policy advocacy in its mission to transform the course of low-income women's lives so that they can attain economic independence and create better futures for themselves and their families. Each year, CWU helps more than 1,600 people through its safe housing, education and training programs, and family support services. For more information, visit the Web site at liveworkthrive.org.

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S. offers community forums

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S., a collaboration of dedicated leaders from local faith communities and social service providers, presents an innovative program, Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums, designed to offer insight, information and vital tools to help members of our community negotiate today's challenging economic times.

Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums will take place on Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. May 2, 9, and 16, in the parish halls of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and First Parish Unitarian Universalist, in Cohasset.

• On May 2, at St. Stephen's, Cohasset, Sam Pease, Vice President of New Directions will offer advice on Employment and Career Opportunities in his presentation, Creating New Opportunities in a Challenging Economy.

• On May 9, State Representative Garrett Bradley will present Government at Work for You in the Parish House at First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church.

• On May 16, at First Parish, Amy Whitcomb Slemmer, CEO of Health Care For All, will lead Affordable Health Care, a forum on understanding the confusing web of available health care options including benefits available in the stimulus package.

Each meeting will start off with coffee and refreshments. The gatherings are designed to be interactive, providing attendees the opportunity to ask questions, hear advice from experts, and leave with tools to help them deal with financial uncertainties. The forums are free and all members of the community are invited. Guests are welcome to attend the entire series or select individual topics of interest

For more information about Cohasset C.A.R.E.S. and the Tools for Today's Economy Community Forums, contact Margot Critchfield at 781-383-1083, or mcritchfield@ststephenscohasset.org

Cohasset pilot soars in marathon

Vaughn Littlejohn is an Air Force pilot living in Cohasset with his wife, Jill, and their four children. He recently did something amazing… maybe not quite as amazing as when he was leading rescue mission for downed American pilots over Bosnia… but amazing nevertheless.

Since the untimely death of Jill's mother, Jane Heggie, Littlejohn had been looking for a way to honor the memory of this very special woman in a very special way. He felt the most meaningful way to do this was to raise money for an organization with a cause that Heggie held near and dear. This organization, Medicines for Humanity, provides healthcare to impoverished children around the world.

As you might expect from his background, he relishes a challenge, so he decided to do something he had never done before… to run the Boston Marathon. "Jane was the most competitive person I've ever known," said Littlejohn, "yet she was also extremely compassionate. You know, I may be the only person to ever say that about his mother-in-law!" Heggie was a former New England champion in tennis and an avid golfer with a special place in her heart for the world's 'underdogs'… her term for those children born into extreme poverty.

Littlejohn maneuvered successfully to secure a "marathon number," and proceeded to name his marathon debut… the 'Run for Jane and Elvis.' He explains his creative choice this way, "Jane loved Elvis, and like Elvis, it seems that her spirit lives on." He then began training and fundraising, rallying friends and family to support his effort. "I want to especially thank my friend Todd Rogers," said Littlejohn, "who flew up here from Texas so we could run together for this cause."

On marathon day, Littlejohn accomplished two amazing feats. He ran the marathon in under five hours and raised more than $5,000 for Medicines for Humanity (www.medicinesforhumanity.org). "The generosity of my friends and family is a tribute to Jane. What a way for my children to remember their grandmother and the example of her life." His children jumped over the barriers to hug him when he neared the finish line. Perhaps appropriately, all of them finished the race together.

No go on wind turbines

Cohasset Heights project fails to get unanimous vote

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There will be no wind turbines erected in Cohasset, at least for the time being.

On Wednesday night, the Planning Board effectively denied the project in its entirety when all four voting members failed to reach a consensus.

"Fundamentally, I don't agree with approving construction of a turbines, comma, if. Any approval indicates and requires all the conditions are met."
— Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

An hour and a half of debate had some board members contemplating the 'what ifs' of lawsuits and appeals and discussions over how to frame an approval.

But, at the end of the night, the board voted 3-1 in favor of the project, but because of zoning bylaw anything less than a unanimous (4-0) vote on approving the project in some fashion effectively denies the proposal.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, Plymouth-based CCI-Energy, proposed the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. One of the two 100-meter, 328-feet turbines would be located closer to Route 3A and near the Graham Waste buildings, the other would be sited further back at the corner of the capped landfill.

The application has been contentious, controversial and drawn out. The public hearing process began for the project in

ZBA wants specifics on Ripley Road condos

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Zoning Board of Appeals needs more — more information, more plans, more specifics — in order to even consider approving the proposed seven-unit condominium development at 25 Ripley Road.

Everything from dumpsters to snow removal to the septic system to parking was discussed in detail at the second installment of public hearing Tuesday night.

There was uncertainty on the number of bedrooms for each of the units (a mix of one- and two-bedrooms or all two-bedrooms), the parking lot design and what waivers (exceptions from zoning bylaw) the applicant may need.

"I assume you want to handle this expeditiously, then you need to start getting relevant information to town boards and consultants."
— Woody Chittick, ZBA

The filing, put forth by Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, proposes transforming the current single-family residence at the corner of Sohier Street and Ripley Road into seven condominium units, two of which would be deemed affordable by state standards.

From discussion it seemed many of the uncertainties were being driven by the applicant's desire to put forth a project the ZBA would approve. However, ZBA chairman Woody Chittick said the board needed to have a clear picture of what is being proposed before ruling on anything.

"It's your proposal; it's not our proposal," said Chittick. "I assume you want to handle this expeditiously, then you need to start getting relevant information to town boards and consultants."

The Board of Health needs to make a definitive ruling on whether the septic system can manage 14 bedrooms. The Conservation Commission, in concert with the town's stormwater consultant, will need to make a determination on whether the project meets the stormwater bylaw regulations. The Zoning

Relay is a family affair

One Hingham family, three teams

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Any relay team knows a race can be won or lost in the transfer of the baton.

In the case of the Relay For Life — and the Berlinguet family — transferring the baton of cancer awareness and participation in the annual fundraising event is smooth and flawless.

The Berlinguet family of Hingham has been active participants in the Cohasset Relay For Life for five years. This year, for the first time, all four family members are leading a relay team.

Mom and Dad, Laurie and Paul, will head up "Springtime for Shelly" once again. For the second year, their 18-year-old daughter Christina will captain a team of Hingham High School students called "Team Believe." And for the first year, Scott, their 14-year-old son, will captain his own team — "Hingham Harbormen" — of seventh and eighth graders.

POLICE BEAT

Cohasset man charged with drug trafficking

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 20-year-old Cohasset man was arrested last week on drug trafficking charges.

Cohasset and Hingham police, in conjunction with Massachusetts State Police assigned to the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, worked together on the investigation that led to the arrest last Wednesday (April 29) at 8:36 p.m., of Benjamin W. Flynn, 20, of 41 Atlantic Ave., Cohasset.

Police had received information from various sources that Flynn was supplying OxyContin illegally. OxyContin (brand name for Oxycodone) is best known as the main active ingredient in a number of oral medications commonly prescribed for the relief of moderate to severe pain.

As part of the investigation, officers followed Flynn to a location and made observations consistent with the purchase and sale of OxyContin, police said.

On April 29, State Police and Hingham detectives stopped the BMW that Flynn was driving on Route 3.

Further investigation revealed a clear plastic bag with 49 pills that turned out to be 80-milligram OxyContin pills in Flynn's sweatshirt.

When they stopped the BMW, police also found a partially cut up pill, a pill grinder, a straw, and razor blade on the passenger seat.

Also found were five, one-quarter ounce bags of marijuana packaged for sale, a marijuana pipe, and $80 in cash.

Police said Flynn later admitted to having snorted OxyContin and to having smoked marijuana prior to his being stopped.

Flynn is charged with trafficking in a Class A substance (OxyContin); possession of Class D (marijuana) with intent to distribute; Possession of Class D (marijuana); operating under the influence of drugs and operating to endanger.

Police estimate the street value of the pills seized from Flynn at $4,000.

"This is a good example of how police departments work jointly to target alleged, multi-jurisdictional drug traffickers," Cohasset Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon said.

Dog complaints

Police said a new dog in the Highland Court neighborhood is not being neighborly.

The dog has gotten out of the house and this past week chased after the caller who had to sit in her car until someone got a hold of the dog. In another incident a dog walker said the dog attacked her dog while they were walking by. The animal control officer said there was no dog-on-dog bite but the owner of the dog causing the problems has been issued a leash law citation. Chief Hussey said police would take more drastic action if the leash law continues to be violated. The Cohasset leash law requires that a dog be under control at all times.

Suspended license

A 33-year-old woman from Tampa, Fla., who now lives in town, is being summonsed for operating after license suspension. An officer stopped the Chevrolet Corvette she was driving at 2:30 p.m. on Monday (April 27) on Summer Street and asked for her license. A computer check revealed she has a suspended license. The passenger had a valid license and could operate the car, so it did not have to be towed, police said.

Brake light

An officer, traveling behind a 2005 Hyundai at 8 p.m., on Thursday (April 30) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near lower King Street, pulled the car over because it had a brake light out.

A computer check on the operator, a 62-year-old Brookline woman, revealed her license had expired. She is being summonsed on the charge of unlicensed operation and cited for equipment violation and having no inspection sticker.

A & B charges

Two Cohasset brothers are being summonsed to court on assault and battery charges following a fight with each other last Thursday night (April 30). The brothers are 44 and 45 years old, police said.

MV accidents

• At 9:48 a.m., on Wednesday (April 29) an accident at Beechwood Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway was reported. Police said a 2006 Dodge, operated by a Holbrook man was headed south on CJC Hwy. (3A) and approaching the Beechwood intersection when the driver saw a clear path to make a left onto Beechwood Street (westbound). A 1999 Mercedes, driven by a Humarock man, was headed north in the left (inside lane) when the operator pulled into the right-hand lane to travel around a vehicle in the left lane that was going to turn left onto Beechwood (eastbound). The Mercedes struck the Dodge as it was making a left.

Police said there were no apparent injuries and neither car had to be towed. Apparently the Holbrook man in the Dodge could not see the approaching Mercedes as it pulled around the other car and the Humarock man in the Mercedes could not see the Dodge. No citations were issued.

• At 4:11 p.m. on Thursday (April 30) a caller reported an accident on S. Main Street near Summer Street. Police said a 2002 Ford, operated by a Cohasset man, and a 2005 Toyota, operated by a Pembroke man collided as the Ford was backing out of a driveway at the same time as the Toyota was pulling out. There were no citations.

• At 2:48 p.m. on Friday (May 1), a 9-1-1 caller reported a one-car accident on Jerusalem Road. Police said a Weymouth man, operating a 2007 Dodge, had taken his eyes off the road briefly when his cell phone rang and when he looked up he was crashing into a stonewall. The operator was treated at the scene. The car had to be towed, police said. He was cited for impeded operation and failure to keep right.

9-1-1 test

A check up on a mistaken 9-1-1 call revealed that the wrong house number was in the computer for that telephone number. Police check up on abandoned 9-1-1 calls even if the caller confirms it was accidental. Police had trouble finding the address and realized the enhanced 9-1-1 screen had revealed the wrong dwelling number. Police filled out a discrepancy form and conducted several tests to make sure the error had been corrected.

Sleeping man

A police officer conducting a routine check behind some buildings on Route 3A came upon a man, who appeared to be sleeping in a vehicle. A computer check revealed the vehicle's registration had expired. Police transported the man to his home in Hingham but the vehicle had to be towed. The incident occurred at 2:23 p.m. on Friday (May 1).

Bullying

Police are working with the middle school to potentially identify more students who have been the victims of bullying by another student. Chief Hussey said the bullying involved various types of verbal harassment. A mother contacted police last week about the ongoing bullying involving her son. She said the bully was now starting to bully her daughter as well as making obscene comments about her. Chief Hussey said the school is aware of this particular case.

Protective custody

After receiving a report from a concerned caller, police went to the Stop & Shop area of Route 3A to locate a man who had been reported as being intoxicated and was in the middle of the road. Police found the 46-year-old Plymouth man on the side of the road. There was no adult nearby to take custody of him so police took him into custody and kept him overnight at the police station. The call came in at 12:02 a.m. on Saturday (May 2).

Arrest

A 42-year-old Hanover woman was arrested following a stop for speeding (going 43 mph in a 30 mph zone) on Hull Street at 11:49 a.m., on Sunday (May 3). A computer check revealed the woman was wanted on an outstanding default warrant and she was placed under arrest.

Tinted windows

Police gave a motorist a verbal warning on Sunday at 3:38 p.m. for having tinted windows. There are traffic laws in Massachusetts governing the tinted windows. The windows had to have been tinted by the manufacturer and can only be tinted to a certain degree, police said.

Intoxicated

Police were able to find a friend to take custody of a Cohasset woman who walked into the police station at 10 p.m. on Sunday (May 3) in a state of intoxication. Police did not want her to go off by herself because she had been drinking, Chief Hussey said.

ZBA needs specifics on Ripley Road condo proposal

Board of Appeals also requested the project pay a visit to the recently reconstituted Design Review Board for advice on lighting, landscape and a proposed farmer's porch.

The ZBA itself needs a revised comprehensive site plan preferably with proposed lighting and landscaping, including buffering for neighboring properties and parking space changes.

"Without that even another hearing would just be us going around in circles," said ZBA member Peter Goedecke.

There was some discussion about how many parking spaces should be required. According to the zoning bylaws two spaces per unit are required in a residential district. But, whether additional parking should be created for potential visitors was yet to be determined.

"(Residents) are going to have visitors from time to time and there's no on-street parking," said Chittick. Police, fire and neighbors expressed concerns at the previous hearing about overflow parking near the heavily trafficked intersection.

"I think you'd have trouble getting more than 14 spaces in there," said ZBA member Ben Lacy. Both Lacy and ZBA member Peter Goedecke did not see a problem with the 14 spaces.

The ZBA also suggested the parking field be designed with angled parking and a one-way Sohier to Ripley traffic flow pattern.

Chittick brought up a letter sent by Mass Housing that gave preliminary approval to the project. One of the stipulations is property owner Will Charles work with an experienced contractor and an experienced developer. Both professionals needed to be named and resumes submitted during the public hearing process, Chittick said. This requirement was driven by concerns expressed by the town and the neighborhood at property owner Will Charles' lack of development experience.

The project is before the zoning board under Chapter 40-B, the state's affordable housing law, for a comprehensive permit. Under Chapter 40-B, the zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20 to 25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Applications for 40-B projects come under the jurisdiction of the zoning board of appeals; the last 40-B project before the ZBA was 200-unit Avalon apartment complex off Route 3A.

Will Charles sat quietly during the majority of the hearing allowing his attorney and engineer to do most of the talking. Near the end of the evening, Chittick asked him if he had anything to add.

"Everything is on the table I was waiting to hear what my attorney, engineer and the board has to say…I am hoping the board will work with me and the neighborhood will work with me to complete the project," said Charles.

Chittick reiterated the board's need for more information in order to reach a favorable decision.

"You would be doing a disservice to this board and yourself if you come back without any new information…the sooner and the faster, the better," Chittck said.

The hearing is continued until Tuesday, June 3 at 7:30p.m.

Wind turbines fail to get unanimous vote

early September. Since then, there has been more than half a dozen lengthy public hearings on the project, and hundreds of pages of data and public comment submitted.

Planning Board vice chair Stuart Ivimey was the sole nay vote. Planning Board chairman Al Moore and members Clark Brewer and Charles Samuelson voted in favor of the motion. If passed, the motion would have approved both turbines, but with the condition only the rear one be built, the impacts (noise, flicker, etc.) measured over three seasons and, if it successfully met the criteria and was as advertised, the front turbine could then be built.

The motion was an attempt at compromise with Ivimey, who expressed serious reservations about approving both turbines. Ivimey was unconvinced by the data submitted by the applicant, particularly with the noise data, but he had additional safety and visual impact concerns.

Ivimey proposed his own motion that would have allowed one of the turbines, the rear one, to be constructed. Although Moore seconded that motion, Samuelson later made the amendment that led the board to its final motion and official vote.

To the frustration of his fellow board members, Ivimey did not engage in any discussion of compromise except to disagree.

Ivimey did not feel it was legally sound to approve both turbines, but condition one to be built, impacts measured, then, if all went well, build the second turbine.

"Fundamentally, I don't agree with approving construction of a turbines, comma, if. Any approval indicates and requires all the conditions are met," said Ivimey. Town Counsel Richard Hucksam was in agreement.

"My opinion is in order to be a solid decision that withstands appeals there needs to be finding that all criteria of the bylaw is met," said Hucksam.

As the discussion wore on, emotions ran high on the Planning Board, particularly between Ivimey and Samuelson. Samuelson said for every compromise he suggested, Ivimey had a new reason to reject it.

"It really, really annoys me…you're insatiable," said Samuelson.

Brewer felt Ivimey was being unreasonable as well, "you are establishing the tenor of the decision and seemingly not engaging in any possibility."

Moore agreed, "you haven't shown the slightest inclinations of moving from your position."

Ivimey seemed willing to accept the label, "if I have to be the stick in the mud, then so be it."

With the lines seemingly drawn and the board having no inclination to continue the discussion to another day, Ivimey placed a motion to permit the project as one turbine (the rear turbine).

Samuelson suggested a motion to amend—approve the project as presented with the two turbines, but condition the construction of the front turbine on whether the rear wind turbine met all the criteria in the bylaw. The rear turbine would be analyzed over three seasons. "If it works out then (the applicant) can build the one in front," said Samuelson. The amendment was approved in a 3-1 vote (Ivimey was the nay vote). This was not the official vote; it was only the vote to now consider the motion as amended.

There were several minutes of confusion as the board came to grips with the decision. It was suggested that the motion be withdraw, amended again, whether if the motion failed it would be appealed.

"It's clear one of the Planning Board members is not going to vote in favor of the motion," said Brewer, referring to Ivimey.

Despite a call by Samuelson to delay the decision, Moore encouraged the board to proceed to a vote, "just vote what you believe."

Before the voice vote was taken, Ivimey gave one last thought, " this is unwise on so many levels."

The vote was 3-1, with Ivimey voting against. Although the vote carried a simple majority, this type of special permit requires a "super majority" with four out of five members agreeing for approval, is needed for approval. In the case of this project filing, former Planning Board member Mike Westcott is no longer on the board and because recently elected Planning Board member Jean Healey Dippold did not sit as an elected official at all the hearings, which date back to September, she could not vote.

"In effect this vote is a denial of the application," said Hucksam.

Following the vote, there was little fanfare. Many of the project's vocal opponents sat in the audience, but unlike the many public hearings that led up to this point, there was little show of emotion, in support or in outrage over the decision. In the second row where the applicant's consultants and team sat, there was a sense of quiet disappointment and hesitancy to move from their seat. The Planning Board as well seemed reluctant to move from their seats despite adjourning the meeting shortly after the vote.

The applicant's attorney Kenneth Ingber declined to comment following the decision.

The applicant has 20 days to appeal the Planning Board's decision.

Democrats host yard sale for scholarships

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its annual yard sale at 23 Hill St. from 8 a.m. to noon, Saturday, May 16. This annual yard sale has been run by the Committee for many years to raise scholarship money for Cohasset High School graduates. Cohasset students graduating from schools other than Cohasset High School are also encouraged to apply. Scholarship applications may be picked up at the guidance office at Cohasset High School.

The Scholarship Committee will choose a worthy student to receive scholarships from the Democratic Town Committee and award these students with their scholarships on Class Night at Cohasset High School.

Donations for the yard sale of items in good condition, with the exception of clothing, will be gladly received at the above address each weekend beginning May 2nd and 3rd from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. until Friday, May 15th. Items may also be dropped off from 6 to 9 p.m. weekdays starting May 4th. In past years Cohasset residents have generously donated such items as: books, kitchenware, furniture, baby equipment and small furniture, bedding, paintings and small boats. Call Donna McGee at 383-9114 to arrange for an item to be picked up.

Carmela Drew consolidating

Owner moves prepared foods to Simply Fresh

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Carmela Drew is consolidating. No longer will you be able to stop in at the South Main Street store to pick up a quick dinner, but don't fret. The most popular offerings of Carmela Drew will still be available right down the street.

In a move announced last week, Carmela Drew owner Michele Rizzo has decided to close the South Main Carmela Drew storefront and consolidate it with her other village business, Simply Fresh. Simply Fresh, formerly Goodfellas Trattoria, is located at 105A Ripley Road (across from the Post Office).

"With the shift we can be much more responsive to customer needs," said Rizzo. If a customer comes in looking for a specific item and it's not in the refrigerators, Rizzo can whip it up almost immediately.

"I love to cook and now I'll be able to do it all day, all the time," said Rizzo.

Both business names, which have gained brand recognition and a following over the past two years, will remain intact.

"We built those brands and we're not willing to let them go," Rizzo said, adding keeping the brand leaves open the possibility of future growth for either business.

The partnership between Carmela Drew and Simply Fresh has always been apparent. Since purchasing the Goodfellas Trattoria last summer, all the prepared meals have been created in the Simply Fresh commercial kitchen. Last year, there were picnic baskets with fried chicken and all sorts of fixings, deliveries to Sandy Beach and Rizzo plans to continue those services and offer even more creative ways to entertain and spice up dinnertime.

"I love to cook and now I'll be able to do it all day, all the time."
— Michele Rizzo, Carmela Drew

"It's always been a collaboration, now we'll be doing it in a more reasonable fashion...and we'll be able to do a lot more fun things," Rizzo said.

Carmela Drew mainstays like macaroni and cheese, lasagna and stuffed pork will still be readily available.

The decision to close the Carmela Drew storefront wasn't done on a whim. In recent months, Rizzo has done both an analysis on sales and a survey of her customers.

"Most of what we sell we sell in a very small portion of the shop," said Rizzo. The cheeses, the frozen appetizers, the pre-made meals are all available in the front portion of the Carmela Drew. The survey was mostly raves about the prepared foods, not about the many accessories the shop offered.

"Eighty percent of our business is prepared food and cheese," said Rizzo.

Simply Fresh is undergoing several renovations over the next month to accommodate the introduction of Carmela Drew to the building.

"We're really excited about the renovation at Simply Fresh," said Rizzo. A new counter was added, refrigerators are being brought over and a small grocery display are being finagled into the space. Customer favorites like the Barefoot Contessa mixes, olive oils and balsamic glaze will still be available at the new location.

"It's just a bit of a facelift," said Rizzo. Concurrently, the menu at Simply Fresh is also being re-vamped to include exotic pizzas, paninis, hot soup, new sandwiches. During the upcoming summer months, she hopes customers will take advantage of the outdoor porch seating.

Rizzo opened Carmela Drew in October 2007 with her sister, Maria DePaoli. The prepared foods were always going to be a focal point of the business. Rizzo, along with partner Scott Garland, opened Simply Fresh last summer.

With Carmela Drew leaving, the village is left with a vacant space. Samuel Bates House property owner Wayne Sawchuk is in the process of seeking a new tenant for the Carmela Drew location. He hopes to have someone on board before the summer months, which are typically the village's strongest.

"I don't want a real estate agency in here; I want to have retail," said Sawchuk last week.

Simply Fresh/Carmela Drew is located at 105A Ripley Road across from the Post Office, tucked in between and behind Epiphany Designs and Bernard's. For more information call 781-383-0020.

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S. offers community forums

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S., a collaboration of dedicated leaders from local faith communities and social service providers, presents an innovative program, Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums, designed to offer insight, information and vital tools to help members of our community negotiate today's challenging economic times.

Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums will take place on Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. May 9 and 16, in the parish halls of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and First Parish Unitarian Universalist, in Cohasset.

- On May 9, State Representative Garrett Bradley will present Government at Work for You in the Parish House at First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church.
- On May 16, at First Parish, Amy Whitcomb Slemmer, CEO of Health Care For All, will lead Affordable Health Care, a forum on understanding the confusing web of available health care options including benefits available in the stimulus package,

Each meeting will start off with coffee and refreshments. The gatherings are designed to be interactive, providing attendees the opportunity to ask questions, hear advice from experts, and leave with tools to help them deal with financial uncertainties. The forums are free and all members of the community are invited. Guests are welcome to attend the entire series or select individual topics of interest

On May 9, State Representative Garrett Bradley will present Government at Work for You in the Parish House at First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church.

Some smart Cohasset students to brag about!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

EXETER

Sam Game of Cohasset, son of David A. Game and Sally L. Sisson, was named to the high honor roll at Phillips Exeter Academy for the winter semester of the 2009 school year. Sam is in grade 11.

Keep up the good work, Sam!

XAVERIAN

Brother Daniel Skala, CFX, headmaster of Xaverian Brothers High School, recently announced the following students from Cohasset have been named to the honor roll for the third marking period of the 2008-09 school year. The Xaverian honor roll has different designations: Ryken Honors, all grades of 90 or above; first honors, all grades of 85 or above; and second honors, all grades of 80 or above

Earning second honors were:

- Sean Aherne, Class of 2010, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence P. Aherne, Jr.
- Edward Culhane, Class of 2012, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward James Culhane Jr.

Congratulations!

SAVANNAH

The following Cohasset students were named to the dean's list at the Savannah College of Art and Design in Savannah, Ga., for the 2008 fall quarter.

- Kathleen Dewaal, an interior design major is seeking a bachelor of fine arts degree.
- Caroline McElhinny, an undecided major is seeking a bachelor of fine arts degree.
- Justin Wood, an industrial design major is seeking a bachelor of fine arts degree.

Full-time undergraduate students who earn a grade point average of 3.5 or above for the quarter receive recognition on the dean's list.

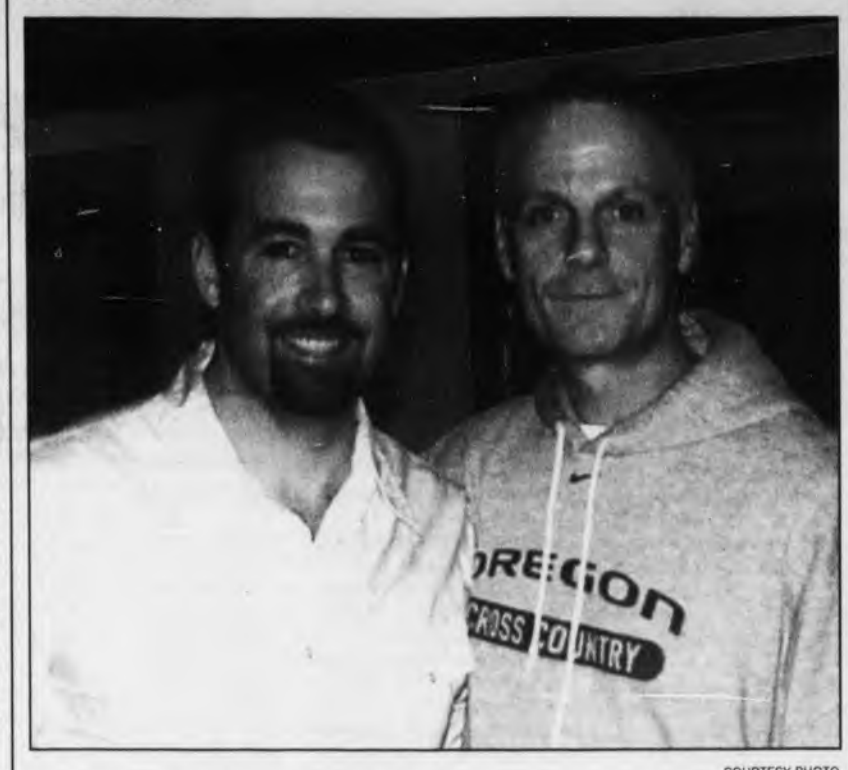
Well done!

THE GUNNERY

The Gunnery recently announced that Paul J. McCaw of Cohasset, Class of 2009, achieved honors for the fall term. Good work, Paul!

HONORED

Cohasset resident Elizabeth Echlin O'Day was recently honored for 5 years of service to Partners HealthCare. Elizabeth currently works as a Program Manager, Ergonomics at Partners.



DRAMA SIGNUPS

Come join the summer Cohasset Dramatic Club this summer in one of their productions! Yes, CDC has chosen to offer two separate musical theater programs designed for specific age groups this year. The first, open to kids 8-13 is the musical, Annie. The second program is designed for teens and open to 13 to 19-year-olds. This show will be "The Wedding Singer," an upbeat, rock n' roll musical based upon the Adam Sandler movie of the same name.

Open registration begins on Saturday, May 16, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium. Rehearsals for Annie start June 1 and rehearsals for "The Wedding Singer" start June 3. The cost per child is $350. If there are two or more children from the same family in the program, the cost is $300 per child.

CDC will also offer up to five student intern scholarships to teens 16 and older who are interested in learning about directing, music directing, set design and choreography. In exchange for their assistance, they would receive 50 percent off the cost of the tuition for their drama program. Acceptance into the internship program will be based on application. Applications will be available at registration on May 16. For more information, contact Lisa Pratt at lisa.pratt@comcast.net or at 617-852-0091.

ANGEL FUND

COURTESY PHOTO

Former Red Sox infielder Lou Merloni, left, is welcomed by Cohasset's Rich Kennedy, right, President of The Angel Fund, after being introduced as the Honorary Chairman of the organization. A native of Framingham, Lou is associated with Comcast SportsNet as an analyst and reporter, and is a regular contributor on Sports Radio WEEI. Merloni, who joined the organization earlier this month, is no stranger to The Angel Fund and its mission to find a cure, through research, for ALS (Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis), a disease better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease. His grandmother, Katherine Merloni, succumbed to the disease in October 1980.

HEALING FIELD

There is still time to purchase a flag for the Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2009 observances.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

SAILING SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Sailing Club is excited to announce its new web site and 2009 season. The revised and expanded web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, has updated details on the club's many features, including the instructional programs beginning with fourth-graders (kids turning 10-years old by Labor Day 2009) and continuing on to teenagers and adults. Application forms can also be downloaded from the site and turned in at the 2009 Registration Weekend, which will take place at the Club on Government Island on Saturday, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Sunday, May 17 from noon to 2 p.m. Applications for membership and all programs, dock slips etc. must be made in person at registration.

WALK FOR PEACE

Connie Afshar asks readers to 'join our walking team, Compassionate Cohasset, in support of Tina Chery and the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute's upcoming 13th Annual Mothers' Walk for Peace."

The Walk will be held on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 10. The Louis D. Brown Peace Institute, a beneficiary of the Second Congregational Church's Outreach program, provides many important services including the difficult task of assisting families of Boston's homicide victims through grief support during the most difficult moments of crises.

"Put your "Faith into Action" by participating in the Walk or by pledging our Compassionate Cohasset team!" There will be a carpool from Cohasset to Boston. For more information please call Connie at 781 383 6006.

GET YOUR TICKETS

The third Annual Cohasset Education Foundation spring benefit is right around the corner on May 30. Cohasset admiral to be honored May 14

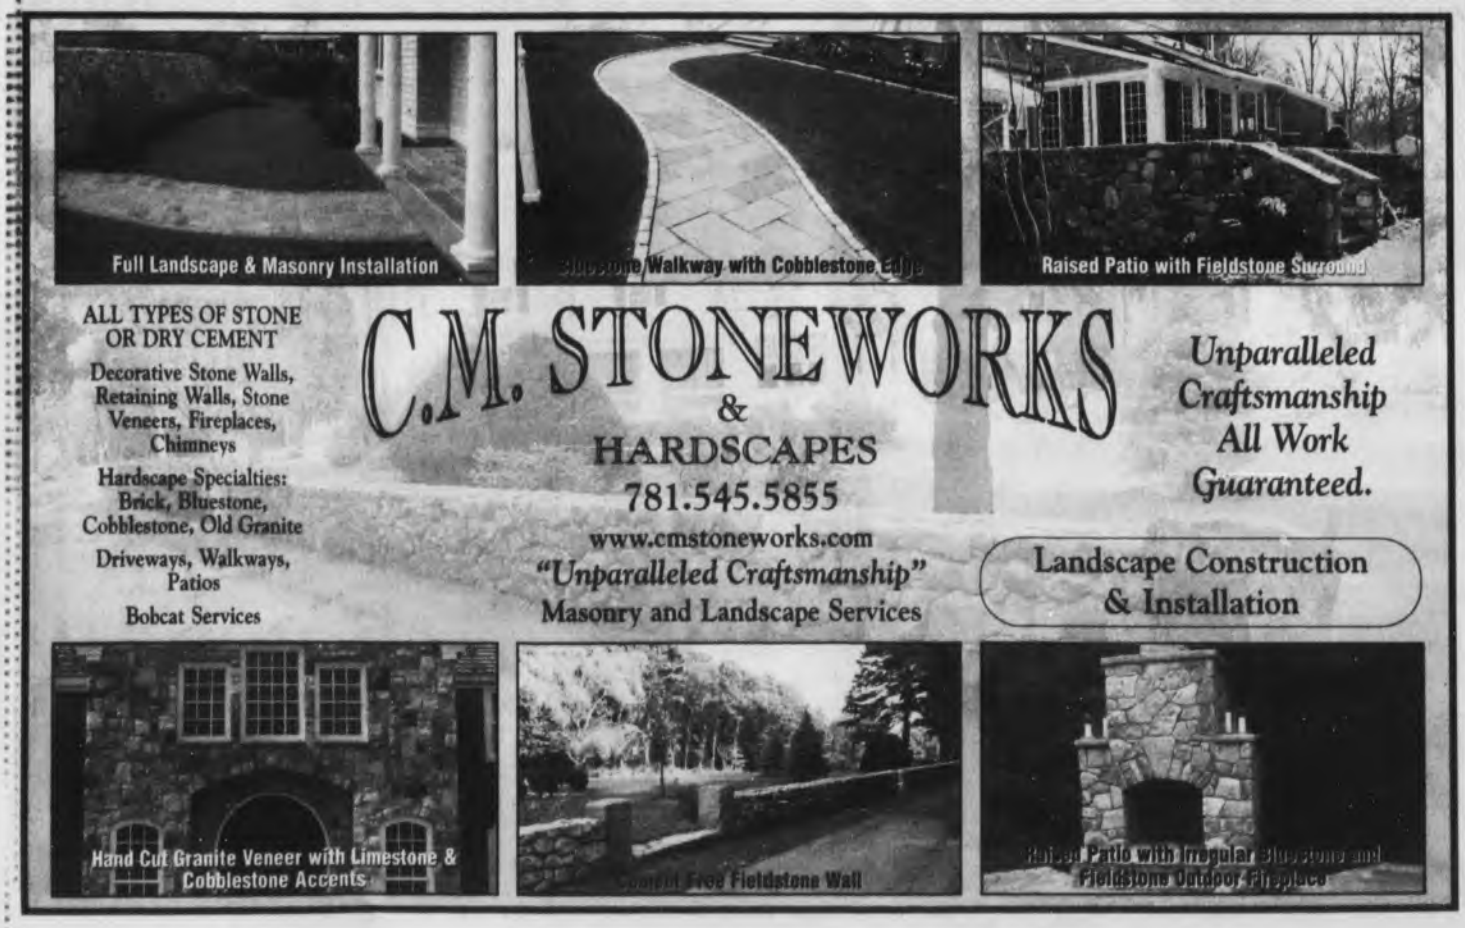
The "Friends of Massachusetts Maritime Academy", a social and philanthropic organization of MMA alumni and friends will be sponsoring a testimonial dinner in honor of Rear Admiral Thomas E. Burke, U.S. Maritime Service, on the evening of May 14th at Atlantica on Cohasset Harbor. Proceeds of the evening, which will include a silent auction, will be committed to scholarships for cadets at MMA in Admiral Burke's name.



A prominent citizen of the South Shore, Admiral Burke was one of the founders and benefactors of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Admiral Burke is celebrating the 70th anniversary of his graduation from the Massachusetts Nautical School, the predecessor of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy and he has served his alma mater with distinction in several voluntary capacities for over 50 years. He had a distinguished war record during WWII serving in all theaters of the war and was one of the youngest ship captains of that time. A long-time resident of Cohasset, where he and his lovely wife Rita raised seven children, he went on to a very successful insurance career. A prominent citizen of the South Shore, Admiral Burke was one of the founders and benefactors of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Stop & Shop raising money for cancer and a chance

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

These days a $1 doesn't go too far. Sure, it'll buy you a third of a gallon of gas, a small French fry, or a bag of chips from the vending machine.

But, can it help to cure childhood cancer or make a boy's dream come true? Cohasset Stop & Shop says it can.

This year, Stop & Shop's annual campaign for the Jimmy Fund has an extra incentive beyond giving to cancer research — the chance to give a local boy, the son of an employee at Cohasset Stop & Shop, the opportunity to throw out the first pitch at a Red Sox game at Fenway Park.

For nine-year-old Shane Heffernan, a self-described really big Red Sox fan, that would be quite the experience. While a regular kid by the look of him, Shane lives with cystic fibrosis, an inherited chronic disease that affects the lungs and digestive system.

"It's not just because he has cystic fibrosis, it's the kind of kid he is. He's got a heart of gold," says dad, Tom Heffernan. "He just has the kind of personality that people are drawn to."

In order to win, the Cohasset Stop & Shop will have to achieve the largest percentage increase over last year in donations and is competing with all the other Stop & Shop supermarkets.

The Heffernan family lives in Braintree and dad, Tom, has worked at the Cohasset Stop & Shop for five years. He currently serves as the assistant produce manager.

Shane plays Little League, mostly in the pitcher and shortstop positions, but doesn't always get to play the whole game.

"He has to miss a lot of stuff," says Terry Heffernan, his mother. Last year, he was unable to play in half of his basketball games and he recently missed two and a half weeks of school because of a respiratory illness he just couldn't kick. "He doesn't have the endurance that other kids have and it can be frustrating."

But, Shane has no problem staying up to watch the Red Sox play. His favorite player is second baseman Dustin Pedroia.

"I like how he hits off the wall a lot and makes good plays in the field," Shane says. He's been to Boston's baseball mecca, Fenway Park as well. "I love it there."

And, how does he feel about the Yankees?

"I don't like them," he said with a sly grin.

Beyond baseball, his parents say Shane does little things that go a long way.

With a friend who is battling cancer, he sold pins at a school holiday bazaar last year. They raised $120 to be split between the Jimmy Fund and Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. His generosity is contagious: when the students found out where the money was going, they immediately lined up to buy more.

Because of his cystic fibrosis, Shane has to consume a high-calorie diet, which includes extra snacks during the day. To keep from feeling different and to ward off any jealousy from classmates that he gets an extra snack, he takes a daily trip to the nurse's office.

His parents say Shane is especially understanding and patient with his little brother, Matthew, 3, who has learning disabilities.

His Braintree elementary school, Liberty School, adores him. Tom said when they were considering moving last year he received numerous phone calls from teachers and school staff that Shane couldn't leave Liberty.

"You guys can move, but Shane has to stay, they told me," Tom says with a laugh. "That's just the kind of kid he is."

Despite missing a fair amount of school because of his cystic fibrosis, his parents say he does well in school.

When store employees have mentioned what they are trying to do for Shane to customers, the response has been immediate and generous.

"It's been really well received," says Steve Cronin, Stop & Shop Cohasset store manager. Customers who may have typically bought one raffle ticket at the checkout are now buying three or even ten.

Management doesn't know how much they have to sell in order to get the ceremonial first pitch prize, but they're working hard to sell as many as possible.

"We're going to sell as many as we possibly can and do whatever we have to do in order for Shane to get this," said Pam Pregoni, who oversees the Jimmy Fund Triple Winner game at the Cohasset store.

Both Pregoni and Cronin asked each other who they would pick for the honor if the store could pull it off the greatest percentage increase, both immediately thought of Shane.

Winning is still a long shot. Only one store in the entire Stop & Shop company gets to choose someone to throw out the ceremonial first pitch at Fenway Park. But, that doesn't seem to bother anyone.

"It's a win-win. If this helps to push the raffle tickets then we know the money is going to help other kids through the Jimmy Fund," Tom said.

Already Stop & Shop Cohasset is on the path toward a record-breaking year for the Triple Winner game. They have sold over 8600 raffle tickets as of the end of last week. They were allocated 12,000 based on last year's numbers and have requested 2000 more from other local Stop & Shop stores. The promotion will continue until the end of June.

Since Triple Winner first began, millions of dollars have been raised to help fund cancer treatment and research. For each raffle ticket sold, 100 percent of the donation goes to the Jimmy Fund. This year, Stop & Shop is aiming to raise $2.5 million for The Jimmy Fund to benefit the Stop & Shop Pediatric Brain Tumor Clinic and $1.25 million for the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

Shane Heffernan, 9, who lives with cystic fibrosis, proudly displays Jimmy Fund Triple Winner raffle tickets available at Stop & Shop. In order for Shane to be able to throw out the first pitch at Fenway, the Cohasset store, which is competing with all the other Stop & Shop supermarkets, will have to achieve the largest percentage increase over last year in donations.

Chamber of Commerce pitches in

Each year as a part of the Triple Winner fundraiser, Stop & Shop Cohasset also holds a silent auction with donated items from vendors. This year, store manager Steve Cronin asked members of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce to contribute gift certificates, services and other donated items to the special Chamber table.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has jumped on to help in the effort for both the Jimmy Fund and Shane Heffernan. Several local businesses have contributed to the silent auction Chamber table; the bidding on the items began today, Friday, May 8.

"When I brought up in conversation with the board what we were doing this year the Chamber was eager to become involved. It is just another example of the Chamber's dedication to the community we operate in," said Cronin.

The contributing businesses include: Pilgrim Bank, Darilynn's, Atlantic Bagel, Golden Living, Elder Affairs, French Memories, Sullivan Garrity and Donnelly Insurance Agency, Sheehy and Hewitt, Attorneys at Law and Casa De Sole.

OPINION

Potential pandemic scary for a reason

On the list of words no one wants to hear, "pandemic" has to rank near the top, right up there with "apocalypse," "Armageddon" and "nuclear fallout." It is indeed a frightening word, inspiring images of victims suffering from horrible diseases that threaten to wipe out entire communities. Bubonic plague. Ebola virus. Small pox.

Pig flu?

The term tends to inspire more chuckles than chills, and one can be excused if he finds it difficult to buy into the hysteria building around the recent flare-up after similar scares involving SARS and bird flu in recent years didn't materialize into the serious threat they were originally perceived as.

Still, swine flu is becoming a significant problem and is being blamed for more than 150 deaths in Mexico. More than 2,400 people south of the border have fallen ill from the disease, the specific source of which authorities have not yet been able to determine. The illness has spread into the United States, where it had been confirmed in many states — including Massachusetts. More than 150 people in the U.S. are confirmed to be infected with swine flu, a number that is increasing seemingly by the hour, and a toddler in Texas who succumbed last week is the first victim to die of the disease.

While this swine flu scare is likely to come and go like other panic-inciting outbreaks before it, there is value in the hysteria, if for no other reason than it serves as an opportunity to remind people how to improve and protect their health.

The outbreak has started to spread around the globe, with confirmed cases cropping up in Canada, Germany, Britain, Austria, Spain, Indonesia and New Zealand. Closer to home, health experts have confirmed two cases of swine flu in Lowell and are investigating other suspected cases in Spencer. A student in North Kingstown, R.I. is being tested for the virus, prompting the school's closing for the rest of the week.

The outbreak has prompted some nations to take precautions ranging from canceling sporting events to restricting resident travel to and from Mexico. Egypt has taken the extreme measure of ordering all pigs in the country to be slaughtered.

The U.S. took a more measured — yet still somewhat alarming — response of declaring a public health emergency, which Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said was precautionary and mostly intended to allow federal and state governments easier access to flu tests and medications.

But it was the World Health Organization that truly upped the ante, uttering the scary word of the day. WHO flu chief Dr. Keiji Fukuda warned the outbreak is moving closer to becoming a pandemic. The agency raised its pandemic alert level to 5, its second-highest level, defined by widespread human-to-human contact. The move is certain to draw significant attention, which is its likely intent.

The word pandemic is frightening for a reason. Health threats are potentially serious concerns that deserve our attention. While there is no need to panic, there is reason for people to raise their awareness not just of swine flu but of all communicable diseases. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control recommends some basic precautions people can take to help prevent infection from swine flu or any disease, including the common cold:

- Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. Throw the tissue in the trash after you use it.
- Wash your hands often with soap and water, especially after you cough or sneeze.

Alcohol-based hand cleaners are also effective.

- Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs spread this way.
- Try to avoid close contact with sick people.
- If you get sick with influenza, stay home from work or school and limit contact with others to keep from infecting them.

While this swine flu scare is likely to come and go like other panic-inciting outbreaks before it, there is value in the hysteria, if for no other reason than it serves as an opportunity to remind people how to improve and protect their health: Get plenty of sleep, be physically active, manage your stress, drink plenty of fluids, don't smoke and eat nutritious food. It may sound basic, but it never hurts to take a refresher course.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Decision based on procedure, not fact

Editor's Note: CCI Energy sent this letter earlier in the week. The Planning Board made its decision on the turbines on Wednesday night (see story, page one).

TO THE EDITOR:

Community based wind energy projects on the South Shore continue to face obstacles due to fears of the new and unknown – and even of the old and well documented.

While Hull has had a 660 kW turbine operating for seven years within 350 feet of the school (and half that distance to 3rd base) and a 1.8 MW turbine operating for 3 years within 500 feet of homes, Cohasset is struggling to allow two new turbines to be built at locations that were expressly contemplated by its wind bylaw passed unanimously at Town Meeting over a year ago and are 2-5 times as far away from existing and planned residences.

The latest twist is that, after 11 public hearings stretching over 7 months, there is a question of whether one trusts the noise data submitted by CCI Energy. The Planning Board's own noise consultant validated the methodology used by CCI; several of the Planning Board members have gone the extra mile — literally and figuratively — to Hull to listen to the turbines for themselves and to interview abutters; and the future Avalon development adjacent to the turbines is now contemplating building its own turbine. Nevertheless, the Planning Board is wrestling with what the data means and whether to allow one or two turbines to be built.

Certainly there is some complexity to the noise calculations. In part, this is because the turbine locations were moved several times to respond to concerns expressed by both Planning Board members and the public, each move having some effect on projected noise at various locations. In part, this is because critical communications on noise were received by the Planning Board at the very end of the public hearing without the opportunity for either CCI's or the Board's consultants to comment or clarify. In part, this is because both noise consultants were operating without the specific and important clarification on the legal standard for noise compliance as set forth in the bylaw. This clarification by Town counsel came only after the deliberation began and therefore after the work of the consultants was submitted, after the public hearing closed, and after town counsel advised that the Planning Board should refuse further communication with the applicant. The result was that the Planning Board, unable to ask questions of CCI without compromising town counsel's advice, is required to make lay inferences on complex scientific data in the record. Worse, the Planning Board is going to make a momentous decision — whether to allow the project or not — based partly on procedure rather than fact.

There is a simple solution. The Planning Board can re-open the hearing to ask their questions of the consultants regarding the data submitted. Deal with the questions of what does it mean to suggest adding a cushion of 2-3 decibels. How accurate is the science? If it could be 2 decibels higher, could it be 2 decibels lower? What do the experts expect will happen and when would this noise, if any, be audible? The Planning Board does a disservice to itself to not seek to get the best answers possible before making that decision, especially if that decision could affect whether any project can be built in Cohasset.

It is possible that even after another evening when experts, proponents and opponents may clash, the Planning Board cannot get comfortable with the project's compliance with the bylaw's noise standard even based on widely accepted methods of scientific projections and modeling. There is a solution to that as well.

Since the burden of proof is on CCI as the applicant, approve the two turbines but with the condition that the one of concern cannot be constructed until its acceptable twin is constructed and tested. Let us take 6 months of actual data at the actual locations of concern and prove, beyond any more doubt, that the state guidelines in the bylaw are being met. While there are significant extra costs to this approach, at least we have the possibility that the infrastructure that has to pass the front location to get to the turbine at the back of the hill could have some use some day if our data and our experts were right all along. If not, then where is the harm?

Enhancing natural beauty of Harborview Apartments

TO THE EDITOR:

It is gratifying to have something so fundamentally true put into words – that the aesthetic character of Cohasset is its most valued quality (Mariner, May 1, 2009).

It may surprise readers that there is a facet of this gem, appreciated as such by very, very few, the Cohasset Housing Authority site on a sliver of uphill, rocky and treed land on which the state and the Community Preservation Committee have (and is) lavishing upward of $1.5 million during these last two years right here in town.

Presently, contractors are at work building the new pathways to be followed by a rebuilt road and finally landscaping and flowers! Wouldn't it be wonderful if all this money is spent determinedly focused on making it beautiful as befits Cohasset?

I am one of some 70 residents here and during these past months I have made quite a few attempts through letters to elected officials, to the Cohasset Housing Authority and to its individual members, to the Tenants Association, and, most recently, to the agent in charge, to see that a concerted effort be made to maximize the funding to enhance the natural beauty of the facility. Apparently I am quite alone in appreciating its potential.

Once you get past the sprawl of police and sometimes EMT and fire vehicles, up you go through this hilly, rocky, treed land full of singing birds.

With the work already completed, the finishing plan of pathways, road, landscaping and flowers could result in the handsomest public housing facility in the country.

The facility is also one of the safest because of the proximity to the police and fire stations.

It seems entirely appropriate that the facility entitled to this accolade should be right here in Cohasset, just a few hundred feet from the Common and from the center of the Village. All we have to do is to open our eyes and our minds.

Old steel signposts problematic

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Border Street Culvert – Work is pretty much completed on the replacement of the culvert that connects the Gulf to the harbor through the meadow behind the Lightkeepers. The gulf side has been regraded and loamed and seeded. One new small problem has developed this week that we are working on with the DPW. There is a catch basin at the edge of Border Street on the Town-side of the new culvert. Some of the regrading on the Gulf side of the culvert may have partially covered the outfall from the catch basin, so that the catch basin does flow, but quite slowly. Working with the DPW we are trying to find where the culvert is blocked and how to best clear it.

Smack dab in the middle of the area they have asked us to excavate are two old steel posts embedded in very large concrete foundations of unknown depth.

Last week, we attended a meeting at the new culvert with representatives of the regulatory agencies, both state and federal, the Conservation Commission and the culvert design-engineering firm. The regulators were quite pleased with the progress of the project. However, the regulators have asked whether the project might be able to remove a small mound of dirt on which a small stand of phragmites is growing. The dirt mound appears to have been dumped in the marsh sometime ago.

We are currently investigating the cost to do this additional work. However, as simple as this sounds, it turns out not to be the case. Smack dab in the middle of the area they have asked us to excavate are two old steel posts embedded in very large concrete foundations of unknown depth. According to some who have been around longer that we have, these posts supported an old billboard for the Haggerty Company, previously located at the end of Parker Avenue. The steel posts had been cut off at ground level so they were not visible to passer-bys. We are still trying to get a fix on the removal cost as we go to press.

Little Harbor Project news – Rain and paving do not mix. And anyone who was around Town this week knows that it rained a lot, so there was no paving. We do have paving schedule for next week, but that is dependent on the weather and the amount of road preparation that L M Holdings has been able to accomplish by paving time.

Last week, after close inspection of the prepared roadbed, the DPW determined that, in their opinion, the quality of road preparation for paving on the first several hundred feet of Mohawk Way was not adequate. Rather than the roadbed being firm and ready for paving, this small section was a bit soft and mushy. This in turn would make for a paving job that could fail prematurely. Consequently, that section of Mohawk Way will not be paved until the road has been reconstructed with a firmer base.

As we discussed last week, Beach Street was to be closed this week to accommodate two areas of construction. The first area is for a storm water drain improvement, which includes a new culvert across the road, a centrifugal separator that will clean up storm water, and a new outfall structure to Little Harbor. Thus, water collected from the upland ledge areas about 1000 feet from the Common will be significantly cleaner than before as it enters Little Harbor.

The other construction area is at the intersection of Highland Avenue and Beach St. There is some final work required on the small section of gravity sewer at this location.

As we begin to put the Town back together after this very large construction project there are a few areas where, as we assist the DPW plan for paving, we have the opportunity to meet with residents to gather their input regarding exact post-construction street configuration details. We do this from time, depending on each area and plan to continue this practice. Please keep in mind, that we have very little freedom to make changes that will add expense to the project. But where no cost changes can be made to the betterment of a road or neighborhood, the project is willing to consider it.

Defeat for dirty words

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

If the young 'uns want to hear dirty talk anymore, they'll just have to turn off their TVs and learn it on the playground.

The U.S. Supreme Court the other day upheld the Federal Communication Commission's ban on four-letter Anglo Saxon functional verbs, even "fleeting expletives," on television from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., when children are thought to be about.

Or the f-word and the s-word, as Chief Justice Antonin Scalia put it from the bench, not to mention the c-word, the p-word, the t-word and the xyz-word.

It all started when Cher was given a lifetime achievement trophy at the 2002 Billboard Awards ceremony and she walked off stage commenting, "People have been telling me I'm on the way out every year, right? So (expletive) 'em!"

Fox Television stations happened to have its cameras on Cher at the time and whoever was manning the seven-second delay switch (if there was one) was asleep at it — and here we go again.

Tell me, if Janet Jackson can suffer a wardrobe malfunction between the halves of the 2004 Super Bowl, can we say Cher had a malfunction of the vocabulary?

Scalia was joined by four conservative judges in ruling that the "vulgar and shocking" words were harmful to children while four liberal justices looked to the First Amendment for support, although the Founding Fathers had very little to say about dirty words.

Fortunately, there are those of us who can watch and listen to smut on the tube without damage to our psyches, and with the coming of cable channels, there are plenty of opportunities that take programming off the air and out of the purview of the FCC.

Were you able to watch the HBO series "Deadwood" without wondering if the entire cast didn't suffer from Tourette syndrome? The favorite obscenity was not a four, but a 10-letter functional verb, and the first in the Chinese boss' English vocabulary.

Who now recalls the days some 70 years ago when, in full view of a packed house down at the Bijou, Rhett told Scarlett, "Frankly, my dear, I just don't give a damn," and the speech police had to be mustered to protect the children from harm, although precisely what form of harm was not clear.

Meanwhile, we were blithely learning the f-word and others on the baseball diamond down at Watson Park and most of us grew up to be productive citizens.

The legal assault on off-color language began in earnest with the Supreme Court's 1978 decision upholding a fine against a radio station that carried George Carlin's "Seven Filthy Words" monologue.

George then embarked on a lucrative career that appeared to be based on repeating the seven words over and over on cable television.

Even a Supreme Court justice has to be careful when he or she makes a decision, lest it give an advantage to someone he or she doesn't think deserves it.

Like being banned in Boston.

HEALTH NOTES

Farming history at Holly Hill

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

With all the publicity about tainted food products and the news about major food producers disregarding national regulations, it's interesting to speculate about whether such events will lead to the increase of farms such as that in Cohasset: our own treasure; Holly Hill Farm. Holly Hill Farm has been growing agricultural products since the land was first occupied by white settlers before the Revolution; and probably even before that. Land there furnished an eclectic array of agricultural produce from saltwater hay to garden vegetables and lumber. Some of the machinery used in farming was built by Richardson White before his death in 1984 and tales abound of the use of his tractors pulling fully submerged trucks out of mud holes and towing huge logs out of the woods.

The secret to the success of Holly Hill is its adaptability: the ability to innovate and the fierce determination of its owners to retain the principles of honesty and hard work, which seem to be getting lost these days.

Starting when Cohasset was a part of Hingham, the land at Holly Hill was partitioned into parallel ribbons delineated by stonewalls as it was cleared for farming. Everyone in Hingham received a one-mile long strip of width depending on his holdings and importance in Hingham. The earliest walls delineating the strips still exist and may be seen by anyone walking into the property. In 1730, when Cohasset broke away from Hingham, the land became common ground and was farmed by individuals, many with names still on the town register of residents. The area and quality of land depended the desires of those who used it and the quality of the grown product. Families with names like Doane, Pratt, Peck, Lambert, James, Bates, Lincoln and Cushing became associated with discrete parcels, which were swapped and sold.

The current farm operators are the fifth generation of the White family to farm the land since the 1840s. However, the land of Holly Hill Farm has hosted a variety of farming activities since the earliest colonial days when Hingham farmers drove their livestock through the woods to graze in the farm's marshes and open meadows bordering Little Harbor. In the 17th and 18th centuries, the woods, in many places, gave way to sheep and cattle pastures, as evidenced by the stonewalls that still run through the woods. Around the time of the American Revolution, David Nichols established his homestead and is believed to have built the two late 18th century barns that still stand. The Doane family farmed the land in the early 19th century. In the 1840s, the Doane homestead farm was bought by Thomas Richardson who used the farm as a summer home. Thomas' great-grandson, Richardson "Dick" White, used the farm from the early 1930s to the late 1940s to headquarter a large vegetable "truck farm," most of whose growing fields were scattered about Cohasset and neighboring towns. Dick White, also a sculptor in bronze as well as builder of his own tractors, used the farm for his sawmill and clearing operations between 1950 and his retirement.

Frank and Jean White, Dick White's son and daughter-in-law, moved back to Cohasset in 1998 and shortly thereafter began the current organic operation. The farm is managed today by co-farm managers Hannah Hobbs and Ben Wolbach. Jon Belber, director of the farm's educational programs, also helps. They are a friendly lot and quite willing to give out some literature telling of the farm and its past.

Holly Hill Farm currently has 3-4 acres under active cultivation, most of which supports the wide variety of vegetables, herbs and flowers that are sold at the farm stand in the main barn, at Cohasset's Farmers Market and at several local restaurants. Produce includes, in season, arugula, beans, beets, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, celery, chard, collards, cucumbers, eggplant, garlic, leeks, lettuce, mixed salad greens, onions, peas, sweet and hot peppers, potatoes, pumpkins, radishes, scallions, summer and winter squash, tomatoes and turnips. Their flower gardens and herb garden produce 40 or more varieties of cut flowers and 15 or more herbs. The farm uses naturally derived materials to control pests. No herbicides are used in their weed control program. Soil fertility is maintained and improved by using farm-produced compost made from leaves, horse manure, grass clippings and seaweed.

Never will we hear from the food industry that their products with additives designed to enhance color or shelf life, are less tasty and nutritious than natural vegetables. But it may be a choice you wish to make.

Seat opens on Rec. Commission

Recreation Commission member Lisa Lojacono resigned from her post last month leaving a vacancy on the seven-member commission. The remaining members of the Recreation Commission and the Board of Selectmen will have to appoint a member to fill the seat until next April's town election. At the 2010 town election, the one-year seat will be available for candidates.

Interested citizens can send a letter of interest to the Town Manager's Office at 41 Highland Ave, Cohasset.

Calling all veterans

All veterans are welcome to participate in the Memorial Day Parade on Monday (May 25).

Rides in convertibles will be provided for those who cannot march.

Veterans are encouraged to wear their military uniforms but that is not a requirement.

Please contact Thomas Wigmore of the Sons of the American Legion if you need to ride in the parade.

The Legion is also seeking volunteers to offer their convertibles for the parade.

Second-grade teacher, Lauren Cook, poses with her class outside the Osgood School. That is Joe Donoghue, far right (pasted in). Joe was absent on picture day.

Second graders say: 'Happy Mothers Day!'

The following essays were written by Lauren Cook's second grade students at the Joseph Osgood School, in honor of their mothers.

My mom is wonderful. She has long brown hair and it is beautiful. She has very pretty and awesome eyes. My mom is pretty and respectful. My mom is very funny. She is very nice and cool. Her job is in Talbots. She says it is hard work. I like to play outside with her and inside. I like to go on vacations with her, too. My mom makes me feel loved because she is very nice, funny, fun to play with, and cool. I love my Mom!

Sam Albino

My mom is awesome. She is beautiful on the inside and the outside. She has black as night hair. She is kind hearted. My mom is smart and she is helpful. My mom works at the Osgood School where I am. She works in Miss Mark's first grade class by helping kids. She helps me with my homework. Sometimes she helps me build puzzles and she drives me around town. She also helps me with math sometimes. Whenever my sister Maggie has sleepovers I get to sleep in my mom's bed. I like to get ice cream with her. My mom makes me feel loved and special when we watch TV together and when she calls me "Princess." My mom is so, so, so AWESOME!

Grace Czajak

My mom is really special to me. She is as pretty as a flower. My mom has short dirty blond hair, and she has the best smile. My mom has a really big heart and she is very loving. She has a very big brain. One of my mom's jobs is to teach kids good manners. Her other job is to take care of our family. She feeds the fish every two days, and she washes the dishes almost every night. My mom helps me with my homework a lot. My mom makes me breakfast and dinner every day. I play ping-pong almost every night with my mom. My mom tucks me in my bed every night. I love my mom.

Charlie Devin

My mom is the best! She is as pretty as the sunset from my roof deck. She has shiny brown hair and forest green eyes. My mom is smart like Albert Einstein. She is also funny, but most of all she's caring. My mom's job is to take care of my family. She is also part of a garden club. She helps me to do my homework. She helps me take care of my dogs. My mom brings me to school and does much more for me. I like when my mom plays baseball with me, she is a really good hitter! She plays with me all summer. My mom makes me feel special and loved when she gives me presents and hugs. She is the best mom ever!

Finn Doherty

My mom is the best mom in the world! My mom is nice, funny, and cool. My mom is awesome, talented, and great at running. She is beautiful. She has shiny golden blond hair and blue eyes that remind me of the pretty blue skies on sunny days. Her skin is as smooth as hair after a hair cut. My mom works in Boston all day on the computer. She helps me with my homework and math, some cursive, but mostly math. I like to go to the beach with her. I like to go on vacation with her. I like to play board games with her. I like to sing with her. I love to dance with her so, so, so much. She makes me feel loved when she says, "Great job!" and says, "I love you," and when she kisses me. I love my mom so, so, so much!

Elizabeth Donahue

My mom is as nice as a frosted cupcake. She has a happy face and ocean blue eyes. Her hair is medium golden brown. My mom is friendly, thoughtful, kindhearted, and very creative. She works at a preschool and she also takes care of pets when their owners go away. My mom helps me when I am sick. She helps me with problems and with my homework. She drives me places, too. We like to play together. She goes outside with me. She gives me stuff and hugs me, and does things with me. My mom is the best!

Joe Donoghue

My mom is very special to me. My mom is as pretty as a new flower in the spring. She has curly brown hair that is very soft. My mom is special because she helps me. She is very kindhearted and never hurts anyone. She is kind to everyone she meets. My mom is an amazing runner; she can run as fast as lightening. When she meets someone new she makes them feel welcome. My mom is very smart. My mom helps everyone in need and she always works very hard. My mom works at home all day long, but the good thing is that I get to spend more time with her when we get home. I love my mom. She has the biggest heart of anyone I know. My mom is also very fun to play with. When I feel sad my mom comforts me. When I feel mad, my mom calms me down and then she helps me figure out a solution to my problem. I love my mom so much!

Caleigh Durkin

My mom is awesome. She looks pretty and nice. She has short dirty blond hair and she has the same color eyes as me. She has a great smile, too. She is as smart as a teacher. My mom is very, very nice. For work my mom stays home to take care of us. She cooks good dinners. She helps me do my homework, and she always drives me to school. I like it when she takes us to the toy store and gets us toys and when she plays catch with me. My mom makes me feel special when she tells me I'm smart, and says- "I'm proud of you." I feel loved when my mom kisses me goodbye at school and when she kisses me goodnight in my bed. My mom is awesome!

Thomas Kierce

My Aunt Robin is the BEST. She is nice and loving and helpful. She is tall and she has long brown hair and brown eyes. My Aunt Robin is beautiful like a movie star. She drives bus four. At home she takes care of everyone. She cooks and cleans dishes. My Aunt Robin helps me with my homework and she cooks me Hush Puppies. I like when we watch movies together. My Aunt Robin makes me feel loved when she kisses me. I love my Aunt Robin so, so much!

Megan Guglielmini

My mom is the best! She has short dirty blond hair and beautiful sky blue eyes. My mom has a kind heart and she is pretty. She is nice, loving and funny. She works at Hingham High School. My mom helps me with my homework and she helps me get up when I get hurt. I like to play tennis with my mom. I like to snuggle with her. I always like to play with my mom. My mom makes me feel special when she snuggles with me on the couch and we watch movies. I feel loved when my mom tucks me in and gives me a hug and a kiss and says, "I love you." I love my mom!

Abbey Johnson

My mom is the best in the world. She has golden blond hair. She is five feet, five inches tall. She is pretty and she is fun! She makes me feel cared for and loved. My mom is loving on the inside. She is kindhearted, helpful and nice. My mom's job is to stay at home and take care of my brother and me. When my dad is not home she washes the dishes and folds the laundry. She helps me pack my bag, makes my breakfast, and she helps me with my homework. I like to go shopping with her and buy food with her. I like when she takes me to the movies and when she plays games with me when I have nothing to do. I love when she takes us away on vacations. On nights when she isn't busy we would gather around the TV and watch a funny movie. My mom makes me feel special when she says, "Good job." When I get a good report card, she says, "Excellent!" I feel loved when she tucks me in for bed and gives me a kiss and says, "I love you." My mom is the best mom ever!

Aaron Froio

My mom is the nicest mom in the whole world! She is as beautiful as a butterfly in a spring garden. She has nice thick dark brown hair. She has cocoa brown eyes and her skin is as soft as a fuzzy peach. My mom is kindhearted and super nice to everyone. She is super smart. She works at Our World Children's Museum, at the Cohasset Library. She always helps me with my homework and I help my mom with hers. We always go for walks at night, and then we go to J.J.'s for ice cream in the summer. After that we go home and I cuddle with her, and then she falls asleep and I wake her up. Then I go to sleep and she wakes me up. My mom is the nicest mom in the world!

Hannah Laugelle

My mom is special to me. I think my mom is beautiful! She has long pretty brown hair. My mom has sparkling brown eyes and a shining smile, as bright as the moon. She has a kind heart, she is smart, and she is very loving. My mom works for Gary Burkhead. She helps me with my homework and helps take me places I want to go. I like to bake chocolate chip cookies with her, play games with her, and I like when she takes me to the beach. My mom makes me feel special when she tells me I'm good at sports and guitar. I feel loved when she hugs me when I get off the bus. I love my mom!

Turner Martell

My mom is really, really awesome! She is as pretty as a daffodil. She has beautiful soft brown hair that smells like peaches. She has a loving heart. My mom has blue eyes like the ocean. She is really goofy sometimes. My mom stays at home and takes care of the dogs and me. She makes me happy when I am sad. She lets me sit on her lap and tells me about when she was a kid. Every night when she puts me to bed she reads to me and then I feel loved. She is the greatest mom in the world!

Katrina McCann

My mom is the best mom in the world! My mom is super pretty. She has beautiful brown eyes and a smile that is as bright as the sun. She is very short and she has dark brown hair. My mom is nice. She is also very kindhearted and she is very funny. My mom sells antiques and she takes care of me and my family. My mom feeds me lots of good stuff like carrots, and drives me to places I need to go. I like when she plays tennis with me and when we go to the beach together. I like when my mom gets in my bed and we read together. My mom makes me feel special when she says I have a good save in tennis. I feel loved when she tucks me in at night and kisses me. I love my mom!

Judge Murphy

My mom is awesome! She is the best mom in the world. She has a caring heart. My mom is beautiful. She has long dirty blond hair and she has a smile that is as a bright as a light bulb. She owns a building that is sort of like a hotel, but people live in it. My mom helps me with my homework and she helps me when I am sad. I like to play tennis with her and I like to play fun games with her. I love when she buys me new Legos. My mom makes me feel special when says, "You're the most special person in the world!" She makes me feel loved when she snuggles with me. My mom is the best, best mom in the world!

Cole Speer

My mom is very special. She has dirty blond hair, blue eyes, a great big smile, and she is very pretty. My mom is nice, awesome, cool, and spectacular. She works at home. She cleans the house, makes her bed, and washes the dishes. She helps the school by being on the PSO. My mom helps me with my homework and she helps me with my problems. I love to go shopping with her. My mom makes me feel special when I get something right and she says, "Great job!" She always says, "I love you" and she says, "Good night." I love my mom. She is the best mom ever!

Sophie Swartwood

My mom is the best mom ever. She is as pretty as the moon. Her hair is as dark as night. She has a beautiful smile and she has shiny brown eyes. My mom is the smartest mom in the world. She has a beautiful heart. When my brother and sister go out of the house, my mom and I go on bike rides. We have so much fun. My mom has an awesome sense of humor. She is a nurse practitioner. She helps a lot of people. She helps me when I am sick. She helps me learn new things (like Chinese jump rope). I like when my mom plays with me and we go letter- boxing together. I get to go to J.J.'s with my mom. We get to go to the beach and we garden together. My mom and I are always together! My mom makes me feel special when she says that I'm the artist in the house. I feel loved when she tucks me in at night and gives my forehead a kiss. I love my mom!

Allison Tolosko

My mom is wonderful! She is kind and loving. My mom is beautiful and understanding. She is very thoughtful. My mom has brown hair, just like me. She has brown eyes the color of chocolate. My mom is small and very cuddly. She works at home. My mom takes care of us when my dad is not home. She helps me with my homework, and she helps me clean my room and make my bed. I like to cuddle with her in bed when she reads a book to my brother and me. I like to take long walks with her. I like to talk to her. My mom makes me feel loved when she tucks me in at night and when she hugs me. She makes me feel loved when she wakes me up in the morning. My mom is the best mom in the world!

Lucie Novelline

My mom is special to me. She is very pretty. She has big brown eyes that are the color of cocoa. Her smile makes me happy. My mom is thoughtful, loving, and smart. She works at Lord and Taylor. My mom helps me when I am stuck on my homework. If I can't get on the computer she helps me get on. When I'm sick she turns on the TV for me. I love when my mom takes me away on vacation. I like when she plays WII with me and when she reads with me. My mom makes me feel special when I get a goal in hockey and she stands up and cheers. I feel loved when my mom says, "I love you" and hugs me. I love my mom!

Rainbows over Cohasset Harbor as seen from the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Some sign up to enjoy Cohasset's beauty from another vantage point, and to gain access to the 14.2 foot Capris available for free sailing during the summer.

Kenneth Grahame's classic children's story, The Wind in the Willows (1908), begins with Mole escaping his spring-cleaning chores by heading for the great outdoors, where he soon meets the Water Rat and embarks on the first of many adventures:

"'This has been a wonderful day!' said [Mole]. 'Do you know, I've never been in a boat before in all my life.'

'What?' cried the Rat, open-mouthed. 'Never been in a — you never — well I — what have you been doing then?'

'Is it so nice as all that?' asked the Mole shyly, though he was quite prepared to believe it as he leant back in his seat and surveyed the cushions, the oars, the rowlocks, and all the fascinating fittings, and felt the boat sway lightly under him.

'Nice? It's the only thing,' said the Water Rat solemnly, as he leant forward for his stroke. 'Believe me, my young friend, there is nothing— absolute nothing— half so much worth doing as simply messing about in boats.'"

Like Grahame's novel, the source of this famous "boat quote," sailing can be enjoyed at any age. Last week's article, which is posted on the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) web site, detailed the Junior and Racing programs for those between the ages of 10 and 18 years. This week's article focuses on the membership benefits for adults.

Some sign up to enjoy Cohasset's beauty from another vantage point, and to gain access to the 14.2 foot Capris available for free sailing during the summer. This is an easy way to sail when you want to, and not have to deal with the upkeep and expense of keeping a boat and a berth — or to try out a regular sailing commitment before deciding to invest in a boat of your own. Others may have sailed earlier in their youth, but gotten rusty and need a refresher course. Some join to share the same experience that their own children are having in the Junior program and to participate in the Adult/Junior Stanton Racing series. Some may be like Mole, and finally embarking on a Cohasset rite of passage and the first of many watery adventures.

The Adult instructional program offers classes for beginner- and intermediate-level sailors — students have ranged from 17-year-olds to 75-plus-year-olds. For eight consecutive Saturday mornings, each three-hour class will combine shore and on-water activities, with a distinct weather-permitting emphasis on the latter. To promote a high-quality learning experience, classes are kept small; two to three adults per boat plus an instructor to maximize the sailing time. The beginning class will cover basic navigation, sailing, docking, and elementary racing. Students benefit from a well-organized and thorough curriculum that has been honed over the years. The beginner-level class is geared to passing the helmsman's test, which means that students can take a Capri out on their own and further refine their skills. By the end of last summer, all the beginning students passed the helmsman's test and were confident about sailing outside of the harbor. The intermediate level class will build on the skills learned in the beginning sequence, and will work with individual students to improve or explore particular areas of interest. If you miss a class, you can catch up the following week or take a private lesson with one of the great instructors. Bob Deutsch, a former commodore who oversees the Adult program, remarks: "last year the adult class benefited from perhaps the best trained instructors in years. Due to low turnover, nearly all of the same instructors will return this season. There was great chemistry with the staff and the adult students — no sense of a generation gap. Trustees Sandy Crough, Emily Malone, and Anne Rowland deserve much credit for the careful screening and hiring of staff. They run a tight ship, so to speak."

Two unique features separate the CSC's adult classes from those offered elsewhere: affordability and a session dedicated to off-shore cruising. Because of its low overhead and nonprofit status, the fee for each adult student is $200, in addition to the club's low seasonal membership fee. As a special bonus, adult students will have an opportunity to learn to steer a large sloop in an ocean setting. This will give you a sense of the type of sailing you might want to pursue in the future.

The bad news is that the CSC's adult members are too big to sail on the kid-sized BICs. But this sad fact is counterbalanced by the Launch Party: the CSC's annual lobster fest, clam bake, and silent auction is an adult-only activity. This year's will take place on Saturday, July 11. Some adult members also enjoy participating in the Porter Racing series, which takes place on selected Thursday evenings during the summer season. Like the Junior program, the Adult program is a great way to forge new friendships with other town residents. Many adult members have volunteered their time and joined the CSC's board of trustees, another way to participate in Cohasset life — it does, Dear Reader, take a village. We could use your help this Saturday morning — we plan to put in the docks on May 9, from 9:00 a.m. to noon unless the weather is really awful. Please e-mail us at cohasset-sailingclub@gmail.com if you can help, and check the web site for a real-time weather update.

If you are interested in signing up for either the beginner- or intermediate-level adult class, you are urged to contact Bob Deutsch as soon as possible, as classes are filled on a first-come basis. Bob can be reached at 383-3574 or by e-mail at <deutsch01@comcast.net>. The CSC's web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.org , has more information posted, including membership forms. Membership applications and program registrations must be turned in on Registration weekend, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and May 17 from noon to 2 p.m. at the clubhouse on Government Island.

One night in a town somewhere on the Mediterranean, in a hotel room by the ocean, the sound of my own laughter actually wakes me up in the middle of my deep sleep. I am startled. Who is that laughing in my bed? The realization that it is only me just makes me laugh again. I can't remember now what I was dreaming. I think maybe it had something to do with boats.

Elizabeth Gilbert, Eat, Pray, Love

COHASSET RECREATION

Signup for summer fun by registering at Town Hall

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Summer Registration – Registrations at Cohasset Town Hall will take place for all of our programs including playground, summer xtreme, youth tennis and any program listed on the brochure Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. and Tuesday from 5 to 7 p.m.

Yoga – Cohasset Town Hall. Hatha Yoga Class - Moving meditation including gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Cost: $8 drop in. Thursdays at 9:30 a.m.

Elementary Engineering – Recreation Center. This exciting hands-on engineering class combines LEGO Educations & LEGO Technic materials to explore motorized simple machines by building realistic models. Student teams creatively solve challenges using concepts learned in class. Celebrating science and technology to children ages 7 to 12, using real-world context and hands-on experimentation. Cost: $90. Tuesdays: Engineering 1: 3:45 to 4:30 p.m.; Engineering 2: 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. May 12 – June 16. Six weeks

New York or Metropolitan Museum of Art – Saturday, May 16. This special trip to the Big Apple gives you a choice between spending the day in New York shopping and touring or admission to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Fee of $49 includes round trip motor coach transportation, guide and $69 with admission at the Museum plus audio head sets. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6:00am and returning around 10:30 p.m.

Sunday Afternoon Jam Session – Cohasset Rec Center. Aspiring musicians can come down to the Rec Center on Sunday afternoons from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. and get together and play music. Music industry veteran and Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz is teaming up with Cohasset Rec and thanks to the generosity of Crossroads Music from Hanover for this new program. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Amps and drums will be available on site generously provided by Crossroads Music. Cost is $6 per visit or an all access pass of $20 for five weeks.

Summer Xtreme – has students entering grades six through nine traveling to premier field trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball fields to adventurous outings like the Codzilla thrill ride out of Long Wharf, Boston, which will be paired with an IMAX movie. With a $99/week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs. "This program fills that void where it offers the bests of both worlds; providing the kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends but most importantly for parents it is in a fun and safe atmosphere", according to Carroll.

What's in store this summer?

Week 1 – June 29 – July 2, Water Country and Monster Mini Golf

Week 2 – July 6 – 9, Codzilla Boat Ride and Boston Bowl and Billiards

Week 3 – July 13 – 16, Six Flags and Morton's Pond

Week 4 – July 20 – 23, Water Wizz and Paintball

Week 5 – July 27 – 30, Canobie Lake Park and Kayaking

Week 6 – Aug. 3 – 6, Paw Sox and Fenway Park Tour/Tomb

Week 7 – Aug. 10 – 13, Water Wizz and Lazer Tag

The program meets four days a week, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders, and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Director of the program, Michael Curtin has been a Middle school teacher at Atlantic Middle School for 14 years teaching math, science and technology. Curtin has worked for Quincy recreation for 20 years, running gyms and after school programs. He also acted as sports specialist during summer recreation in Quincy. Curtin was Co-recreational director for three summers at Great Harbors Resident Association in Falmouth where he operated the swimming pool, organized activities for adults and children and ran tournaments. Curtin is the proud father of two beautiful little girls.

Assistant Director of the program, Michael Barra, has been involved in recreation departments on the south shore for the past decade. Barra started as a volunteer counselor in training at Hingham Recreation in seventh and eighth grade, where he worked for the next five years as a counselor for children ranging in ages from 4 to 12. Barra enjoys all forms of outdoor activity and avidly engages in kayaking, mountain biking, snowboarding, hiking with his golden retriever and tent camping in his free time.

Instant Piano – Cohasset Town Hall. You don't need years of weekly lessons to learn piano. You can learn enough in this one workshop to play almost any song on the piano with two hands. Then go on to perfect your technique at home using a home-study CD provided by the instructor. This is the system the pros use—chords, not tedious note reading. Over 150,000 have taken this course successfully since its inception in 1982. It really works. Fee: $64, includes course materials (book/CD). Wednesday, June 10, 6:30 to 10 p.m.

Family to participate in Relay For Life

"The Relay, to me, is definitely about awareness. The more people and the more families who come and see what cancer is and see people surviving it, fighting it day by day. It is inspiring," says Laurie.

Both Laurie and Paul are cancer survivors. Laurie is a breast cancer survivor and Paul is a Hodgkin's disease survivor.

"People come and they see people who are still alive even though they have had a deadly disease," says Laurie.

Paul agrees and points to the survivor's walk, held annually to open the Relay for Life event.

"The survivor's walk is very powerful — you see a track full of people who have survived the disease. And for the people who are sick, they see that they can move on," says Paul.

The American Cancer Society's Relay For Life is an overnight benefit event in which team members take turns either running or walking laps, trying to keep one team member on the course at all times. The American Cancer Society is celebrating its 25th year anniversary; Cohasset's Relay is in its 14th year.

This year's Relay For Life takes place on Friday, June 12 to Saturday, June 13.

Both Paul and Laurie agree that once someone is a part or even witnesses a portion of the Relay, they are bound to come back the next year.

For them, the Relay in Cohasset is a microcosm of how cancer affects families and communities, "you can see how much just these towns have been affected by cancer."

One of the most visual and powerful examples is the Luminaria Walk.

When the sun has set and darkness covers the high school field, the Luminaria Walk, a cornerstone of the Relay For Life, begins. Luminarias are paper bags filled with sand and a candle that line the inside of the track. Each bag is a dedication to someone who has struggled or is struggling with cancer. Many are decorated tributes to a grandfather, aunt or friend. Each year thousands of luminary bags are lit for the emotional and powerful ceremony. Each carries a donation of $5.

For Paul and Christina, the experience of the luminaria walk for different reasons is among those most memorable.

Together with friends and family, they formed a team in honor of Cohasset resident Shelly Donze who lost her battle with breast cancer.

Christina describes her first luminary walk with the bagpipes playing in the background as one of her most memorable Relay moments. For Paul, it was when the word "HOPE" was written with luminaria bags on the high school bleachers.

As if to show the multi-faceted and powerful experience the Relay can be to each individual, each of the Berlinguet family members holds a different aspect of the Relay dear. Scott is always paying attention during the opening ceremonies when cancer survivors share their stories of how they have been affected by the disease.

The opening ceremony last year also brought Laurie's most memorable Relay experience — her daughter, Christina, sang a solo as part of the Hingham High chorus.

The Berlinguet family got involved in the Relay For Life five years ago. Together with friends and family, they formed a team in honor of Cohasset resident Shelly Donze who lost her battle with breast cancer. At the time, Laurie and Shelly were co-coordinators for the Road to Recovery, a non-profit organization affiliated with the American Cancer Society that provides free rides to and from medical appointments for cancer patients.

"Springtime for Shelly," the team walking in Donze's memory, has raised over $10,000 in each of the recent years. The team is shooting for that same goal, according to Laurie, but given the economy anything close to that number would leave them thrilled.

Christina began to captain her own Relay team three years ago by recruiting her friends at Hingham High to participate. The team's name is "Team Believe."

She started her own team around the time Shelly passed away, "I know this disease affects a lot of people and I wanted to do something to help stop it."

Both Laurie and Christina serve on the Relay organizing committee. Christina joined last year and Laurie has been doing it for four years.

Although Scott, an eighth grader at Hingham Middle School, has been participating in the Relay for five years, this is the first year he has put together his own team.

"I wanted to have a team with my own friends," said Scott. So far about 14 seventh and eighth graders have signed up for the team; many of them will be new to the Relay experience.

Overall, for the Berlinguets, the Relay is a time to meet up with friend and family and share the experience with new friends.

"People bring their families, they can play football, it is a pretty fun atmosphere," Paul said. People stop by to say hi and end up staying for hours.

"None of us have a problem signing up for the next year," says Laurie. "We've met wonderful people from Cohasset, Scituate, Hull,"

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Collecting items from their neighbors, the Berlinguet family has organized yard sales to raise money for the Relay For Life. Christina, 18, holds a luminary; Scott, 14, holds donated books; Laurie sits on a donated tricycle; and Paul holds a sign for the May 3 yard sale.

Recent small works of Cohasset artist, Alix White, will be on display at All the Best Natural Foods, 93 Ripley Road, directly across from the Post Office. The opening is from 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday, May 9. The show will run from Mother's Day to Father's Day and all works exhibited are for sale.

Her larger works can be viewed at her Web site: alixwhitepaintings.com. All the Best Natural Foods is located at 93 Ripley Road directly across from the Post Office.

Alix has studied in Paris, France, Boston University's School of Fine Arts, and California College of Arts and Crafts. She brings a depth of knowledge and feeling to our familiar coastline, which is unique and sought after.

"I am blessed to be painting in an area so rich in inspiration that encourages the simple shapes and bold use of color that are characteristic of my work," said Alix White.

Glenn Pratt receives good scout award

Each year the Old Colony Council, Boy Scouts of America selects a corporate citizen of the South Shore who best embodies the high moral character of the Boy Scouts as our Good Scout of the Year. This year Glenn Pratt has been selected as the 2009 Good Scout of the Year.

A reception will be held in Glenn's honor at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 19, at Professional Airways, LLC at the Plymouth Airport.

As a businessman, Mr. Pratt is the CEO of a building services company operating throughout the Northeast United States. Glenn, a native of Cohasset, has an exemplary record of dedicated service to his family, his community and the nation. He has served on the Water Commission, Emergency Management Council, the Veterans Memorial Project, the Council on Aging, the Community Center and the list goes on. An Eagle Scout, Glenn grew up in Cohasset and spent summers at Camp Child. He joins a distinguished group of former recipients: Peter Forman, Donald Staszko, Bill Weeks and Vincent Lombardo.

As quoted by Scout Executive and CEO of the Old Colony Council, Richard Stritzinger, "Although a humble man, Glenn is one we choose to honor publicly as an exemplary role model not only for youth but adults alike."

Cohasset boys still going strong

Team still in hunt for league crown

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys tennis team has been playing well.

Despite a 4-1 loss to Norwell, Cohasset has just one loss in South Shore League play. They'll have another shot at Norwell this season.

Last week, Cohasset beat Marshfield twice, 4-1 and 3-2, and added a 5-0 victory over Mashpee.

Against Norwell, Victor Hartmann picked up a win over Jared Wright in first singles.

Danny Brady lost in two sets and Mike Filbey fell in three sets.

In doubles, Ivan Sceery and Robbie Hill battled to a three-set loss.

"Norwell is very strong," Sceery said. "But we're looking to beat them next time."

Sceery, a senior captain, said the second doubles team, Will Choi and Travers Craven were outstanding.

"Will and Travers came up big," he said. "They won against Hingham to seal a victory and they won to seal a victory over Marshfield. Victor Hartmann has also played very well. I know when he beat the Norwell kid, the kid was disappointed."

As for his own work, Sceery said he's felt good about his work with Robbie Hill in doubles.

"Robbie's been playing real well," he said. "I play with him. We had some tough matches early in the season, but since then we've only lost once. We've been doing well."

The boys are at Carver on Monday and at Harwich on Tuesday.

Cohasset-Hull track team building for future

Team hopes to become perennial power

By Harlan Sherwin
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset-Hull boy's and girl's combined track team boasts about 45 members, which puts them at a distinct competitive disadvantage against most larger South Shore League Division 4 squads. But that has not stopped first year coach's Brad Mingel's charges from performing at a high level, nor has it stopped them from having a meaningful and satisfying experience as varsity athletes. "We take every meet as it comes," said the coach, "and monitor the progress of the kids and how they conduct themselves." Mingels is ably assisted by coaches Betsy Callanan and Ed Burke.

Mingels, who takes over from long time coach Al LaFontaine, is a hands on coach who runs with his team every day. "They're a great group of kids, and a pleasure to coach," said Mingels. "And we have a lot of talented people, but just don't have the depth of some of the other teams in our league."

Next year Mingels hopes to increase his squad to about 60 members, and his goal is to make Cohasset-Hull a perennial power in the South Shore League.

This year's team is 1-3 so far, with a victory over Tri Valley, and losses to Sacred Heart of Kingston, and much larger Carver and East Bridgewater teams.

Their meet against East Bridgewater typifies the challenges they face. Because of a

They had a bit of a rough start, but since the initial 4-3 start, the Cohasset girls tennis team has just kept winning.

With a 5-0 win over East Bridgewater, Cohasset improved to 8-3, including a 7-0 mark in the South Shore League.

"We've been ripping it up out there," Cohasset coach Gigi Mehhan said. "Technically we should be 9-1, but we had a rough start. Usually we schedule our tough non-league stuff at the end of the season. This season it was at the beginning. We played Hingham and Scituate early. We've figured out so much since then."

Maddy Altholtz has been leading the way in the first singles spot.

Her only losses have been to

Kelly was an easy choice this month. Over the first three games of the season she had struck out 42 batters. It got better from there. Against Abington Naegelin fanned 16 and hit a grand slam. During the April vacation she took a perfect game into the seventh inning of a 12-0 win over Randolph, finishing with a one-hitter. After the one-out hit, she induced a double-play. In her next outing, Naegelin threw another shutout with 14 strikeouts in a 3-0 win over Pembroke, and struck out two with one-out and the bases loaded in the sixth inning. She ended the month with a five-inning (15-0) perfect game against Norwell. Naegelin struck out 12 in the five innings.

lack of enough competitors, Mingels was forced to enter some team members into events they had never participated in before. Junior Logan Breslow long jumped 13'7" in her first ever long jump competition, and finished fourth out of 12 competitors. And junior miler Melissa Campedelli won her event in 6:12, despite being her team's only representative in the race.

The Cohasset-Hull girl's contingent is led by three senior captains. Jojo Brophy runs any event from the 800 meters to the two mile, and "sets a great example for the other kids." said Mingels. Lesen Haracz is her team's only 400 meter hurdler, and also competes in the 4x400 meter relay where she takes advantage of her long strides and strength. And Rachel McMorris runs the 400 meters and the 4x400 relay. "She's a really strong, dedicated kid with a great work ethic," lauded Mingels.

Mingels also praised sophomore 800 meter runner Natalie Dignum, whose "drive and make-up", and strong starts and finishes are well suited for this event. Dignum was among the top finishers in the second 800 meter race she ever ran.

On the boy's side Cohasset-Hull is led by its four captains. Junior Dave Allen runs the 800 meter event and is a "strong, smart" runner, according to his coach. Junior T J Stokes is a natural distance runner, who has won two of the four two mile races he has entered this year. His best time so far is an impressive 10:52.

Meanwhile junior Terry MacCormack shows his versatility by running the 800 meter and two mile events, and senior Taylor Laveingie runs the 100 meter and 200 meter sprints, and also competes in the long and triple jump competition.

Another key contributor is junior Calvin Servaes, who has already qualified for the state high jump competition by clearing 5'10". Mingels believes that Servaes will definitely clear six feet this season. He also runs the 400 meters, and should be an "outstanding" 800 meter runner because of his long strides, according to his coach.

Other important boy's team members include include junior shot putter Cam Washak, who Mingels says is "improving in leaps and bounds," and sophomore 800 meter competitor Chris Quebec. Junior Connor Murphy hopes to break 5:30 in the mile this year, and sophomore Brian Collins is a "special miler", says the coach, and may eventually approach a mile time of 4:50.

Next up for Cohasset-Hull is Harwich High, followed by a meet with Abington. The team hopes to continue its development and help bring the track and field program to the next level.

Hingham's Roberta Bergstein.

"Maddy's stepped up to the No. 1 spot well," Meehan said. "And my first doubles team has been great. Maggie McGoldrick has been something else. She's been playing together with Jenny Magruder. They're undefeated when they play together. Maggie's played some singles. She's been fantastic."

Meehan said doubles matches are the keys to success.

"Doubles are where you win championships," she said.

With that in mind, she said that Lauren Allen, who had been playing singles will be moving into a doubles slot to pair with Fiona McBride.

Lauren won all her challenge matches and played singles," Meehan said. "Then Danielle Sookiasian started winning challenge matches and Lauren didn't defend. When I told her doubles she just said awesome. She has a doubles mindset. She can play both, but really enjoys doubles."

Sookiasian was out sick this wek, but has run up a 7-2 record this season.

She'll be moving into second singles.

Wednesday, Cohasset beat East Bridgewater 5-0.

"The first time we played them we won 4-1," Meehan said. "They're a solid team. They're a program that has come up from nothing. They're well coached. It wasn't an easy 5-0 win."

In the past few matches Cohasset beat Mashpee 5-0 and Norwell 3-2.

In the Mashpee match, McGoldrick moved to singles.

"Maggie won 6-0, 6-0 at Mashpee and 6-0, 6-3 against East Bridgewater," Meehan said. "Her personal record is 9-1 this year. Her only loss was to the Scituate doubles team. They're a team to watch."

As for Norwell, Meehan said that was a special win.

"Norwell has a very strong lineup," she said. "And they're very well coached. That w as a big victory for us."

Another player to watch is Tina D'Antonio.

"Tina is doing really well," Meehan said. "She's 5-1 and has emerged on the scene. She got some play last year. She's played third singles and has had two matches with tiebreakers and one that went three sets. She'll be interesting to watch. She plays better when she has to. She's played real well."

Meehan said Jean Thomae and Magruder have been playing well.

"We've been getting points across the board," she said. "When matches get tight, we've been able to get that third point."

One thing Meehan likes is the way her team has begun to jell, including players who don't always get the court time.

Cohasset has 18 players this season. Unlike many places, Meehan doesn't make cuts.

"When I got here, the old coach made cuts so kids were afraid to try out," she said. "I don't make cuts. You never know who's going to emerge. As a team, the girls have come together. They've been cheering each other on and connecting as a group. It really isn't just about the seven who play. It's about the 18 on the team. Sometimes what you do on the sideline is as important as what's happening on the court. The support is huge."

Meehan is already looking ahead.

"We're losing eight seniors next year," she said. "But I look at our younger players, including our freshmen and I see what's coming up is exciting."

Soon, Cohasset players will be competing in the MIAA Individual Tournament, and then the team tournament.

Seedings for the Individual Tournament are expected soon. Visit www.miaa.net for the most current seedings.

Cohasset's Davis to represent New England

Cohasset's own Emma Davis, a top ranked junior tennis player, recently won the 12 and under Nike Junior Tour Qualifying Event. She will now represent New England at the Nike Junior Tour Master's Tournament to be held at Stanford University in September. Emma will compete against the 15 other regional winners from across the country the winner of which will represent the United States at the Nike International Master's Tournament. Emma is currently a sixth grader at the Cohasset Middle School. She trains out of the Weymouth Club and is coached by Terry London and Thomas Blake.

U15Blue

The U15 Blue team traveled to Norwell to face their Blue squad and the game was exciting from start to finish. Norwell jumped out to a quick lead before Cohasset battled back on goals by Katie McKenna and Lexa Grasz to make it 3-2. Cohasset tied the game on a free position blast from Molly Fitzgerald after she rushed up the field from her defensive position and was fouled in front of the cage. Goalie Maddie Curley stood tall in net and turned away five shots in the first half.

Norwell built a lead in the second half, as they went up by four with only a few minutes to play. Kylie Coffman took over in the cage in the second half and made sure the Blue team did not fall further behind, as she made seven saves, with several incredible stops from in close. The Cohasset girls gave everything they had in the final minutes as they closed the gap quickly on goals from Mackenzie Axelson, Shannon McGowan and a great rush up the middle by Christina Tedeschi to cut the deficit to 9-8. With less than a minute to go, Cohasset battled for a loose ball after the draw but could not come up with possession and a great game came to a close.

U15 White

The U15 White team was firing on all cylinders under sunny skies at Deer Hill on Saturday against a strong Norwell team. Smothering defensive play, excellent scoops, and picture book clears by alternating defensive players, Emily Robbins (1 interception), Abby Carrier, Caitlin Mavilia, Caroline Evans (1 interception), and Maria Buckley, together with sharp saves and on target passes by goaltender Olivia Blackburn (5 saves), gave the attacking Norwell team few scoring opportunities. At midfield, Maggie Littlejohn (2 assists), Mariel Teague (1 goal, 2 assists), Kate Bodner (3 goals, 1 assist), Kristin Alexander (1 goal, 2 assists), Victoria Bryan (1 assist) and Isabelle Dunne, controlled the middle ground with draws and ground balls, ran hard all game, played strong defense and helped set up outstanding offensive rallies with great player separation, nimble passing and catching, and multiple feeds to open cutters for goals. On attack, Katiuryn Dunn (5 goals, 1 assist) and Mikayla McGrath (2 goals) dominated the offensive end, moving the ball effectively and slipping into open spots to set up several goals on feeds from the midfield. The attack was also very effective on rides. In 12 Blue team goals on the day, nine were assisted, many with multiple legs.

Cohasset led 8-4 going into the half. Norwell picked up steam in the second half, but Cohasset was able to hold off a late rally to win the game 12-8. The keys to Cohasset's successful play were excellent teamwork, selfless playmaking, and terrific hustle from all the girls on the team.

Norwell was our toughest opponent yet.

We split games with them in what was the last weekend of simultaneous 7 on 7 cross-field matches.

Norwell scored most of their goals on the field with the open net, as we did. On the field where Cohasset had Katie McKeon in goal, we held Norwell to one goal in the first half and two goals in the second half.

In the end, the field with the goalies saw Cohasset go 4-3 against Norwell over the day.

Norwell is a good team and Cohasset played with or beyond them much of the time. When we turned over scoring opportunities, we still put a tough mark on the ball to get it back. The transition game was played nicely by both teams but we controlled the ground balls - a key factor.

By way of example, Kate Fitzpatrick had six ground balls in traffic during the second half; helping us control time of possession. Margaret Michalowski and Megan McElgunn were strong ball control factors for us on both ends of the field. Kendall McConnaughey, Minnie Stavis, Alex Martini, Niki Federle, and Danielle Picot all scored for us. Charlotte Morrison and Libby Mullaney both scored twice. Olivia Sanderson and Abby Thomas posted assists.

We look forward to our full field matches the remainder of the season.

Thanks for the fan support everybody.

SCHOOLS

Senior countdown at 14 school days!

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everybody! May has always had the reputation of being that "almost summer" month. However, contrary to this popular belief, things at the high school have been crazier than ever. Between the madness of AP exams, sorting out last-minute prom details, and beach days becoming more and more tempting (if it would just warm up a bit), students are just itching to get out of school and enjoy the relaxation of summer vacation, and the wait is almost up! The senior countdown is now at 14 school days, 19 including weekends, where the rest of the student body still have a little over a month. The band and chorus aren't slacking though, because next Friday is the annual music festival field trip in which both groups perform and compete with other schools and then their efforts are rewarded by getting to spend the rest of the day at Six Flags!

Prom is just on the horizon for the seniors (and many of the juniors as well), and be on the lookout for any sort of post-prom information that may be arriving via mail soon. The post-prom committee has been hard at work for months making sure that this year's after-party will be a fun and safe way to spend what is meant to be one of senior year's most memorable nights. This week, we also bid farewell to some familiar faces in the student body and the staff. They will all be missed and we wish them luck in the future. Hopefully, though, even with the absences, there will still be someone to answer the phone if anyone has any last minute college questions. Have you figured out who my successor will be yet? If not, then I have another hint for you to try and guess who your next CHS correspondent will be; it's a little obscure, but if you are at all familiar with this class of '10 gent then you're golden: his favorite food is chicken parmesan. And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Goodbye!

Arts night at Osgood May 20

On Wednesday, May 20 from 6 -8 pm, Osgood School will host its annual May Arts Night. This year's theme, Art in Books, is sure to inspire the creativity of students and parents alike. Children will have the chance to stand in the shoes of their favorite author-illustrators, illustrating books of their own inspired by the art found in many of their most beloved books. Children will use a variety of techniques and media including charcoal sketching, tissue paper collage and macro photography, among others.

In addition to book making, May Arts Night will host many exciting demonstrations including a variety of dance companies (including the ever-popular line dance stylings of our own Mr. Dykas) and music events including an Instrument Petting Zoo and student demonstrations. New this year will be an exhibit focusing on the Martial Arts.

As always, hot dogs and refreshments including Del's Lemonade will be available for sale. And in support of the PSO, raffle tickets offering the chance to win some fun prizes will also be available. If you would like to host a table or lend a helping hand, please contact either Sarina Fusco (383-2612) or Catherine Harvey (383-6310).

Summer drama signups May 16!

Come join the summer Cohasset Dramatic Club this summer in one of their productions: "Annie" and "The Wedding Singer." Open registration begins on Saturday, May 16, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium. The cost per child is $350. For any questions or for more information, contact Lisa Pratt at lisa.pratt@comcast.net or at 617-852-0091.

OX PASTURE RD.

LEGAL NOTICE
MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Krikor O. Baytarian and Peter J. Baytarian, Trustees of Ox Pasture Lane Realty Trust, under a Declaration of Trust dated April 7, 2003, recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 18637, Page 195, to Norwood Cooperative Bank, dated April 9, 2007, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 24694, Page 484, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, there will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described (on the portions of the mortgaged premises being Lots 1 and 2 on Ox Pasture Lane, Cohasset, Massachusetts) on June 4, 2009, commencing at 10:00 A.M., as to Lot 1, and at subsequent times described below, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage, namely,

The land with the buildings thereon located on Beechwood Street and Ox Pasture Lane in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, being shown as Lots 1, 2 and 3, on a plan of land prepared by Murphy Associates, Inc., dated March 6, 2001, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds as Plan No. 440 of 2003 in Plan Book 510. Excepting, however, from Lot 1, so much of that lot as is included within the boundaries of Lot 5 as shown on Plan No. 10 of 2001 recorded in Plan Book 482.

Excepting and excluding from the above described mortgaged premises and not being sold at said auction is Lot 3 on Ox Pasture Lane which was released from the above described mortgage by instrument dated May 16, 2008, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 25788, Page 527.

Lot 1 will be sold separately by public auction on Lot 1 at 10:00 A.M. Lot 2 will be sold separately by public auction on Lot 2 at 10:45 A.M. Lots 1 and 2 will be sold together as one parcel on Lot 2 at 11:15 A.M.. If the highest bid for the sale of Lots 1 and 2 sold together exceeds the sum of the highest bids for the separate sales of Lots 1 and 2, the mortgaged premises shall be sold together and the separate sales of Lots 1 and 2 shall be null and void.

The successful bidder will be required to sign an Auctioneer's Memorandum of Sale and a Statement of Additional Terms at the conclusion of the bidding.

The premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, covenants, outstanding tax titles, municipal or other public taxes, assessment liens or claims in the nature of liens, and existing encumbrances of record created prior to the mortgage, if any there be.

The Purchaser shall be responsible for the cost of Massachusetts documentary stamps to be affixed to the foreclosure deed.

$40,000.00, for the sale of both Lots 1 and 2 together, will be required to be paid in cash (U.S. currency only), certified check, Bank Treasurer's check, or Bank Cashier's check by the Purchaser or Purchasers at the time and place of said sale, the balance within 30 days from the date of sale on the delivery of the deed.

$20,000.00 for the separate sales of Lot 1 and Lot 2 will be required to be paid in cash (U.S. currency only), certified check, Bank Treasurer's check, or Bank Cashier's check by the Purchaser or Purchasers at the time and place of said sale, the balance within 30 days from the date of sale on the delivery of the deed

In case of default by the highest bidder of his obligation to complete the purchase of the premises, the Mortgagee reserves the right to sell the premises to the second highest bidder by execution of the Auctioneer's Memorandum of Sale and Statement of Additional Terms with the second highest bidder for the amount of his bid and closing the sale to the second highest bidder within approximately 60 days from the date of the foreclosure sale.

Other terms if any to be announced at the sale.

Cohasset Mariner 5/8, 5/15, 5/22/09

Citizen of the Year JoAnne Chittick receives a standing ovation from the 75 people in attendance at Sunday's reception. JoAnne's community service also includes a term on the School Committee, 10 years on the School Building Committee and involvement with the PSO. Over the years she has also participated in a range of local organizations including the Social Service League, Friends of the Paul Pratt Library and South Shore Art Center.

Woody Chittick shares some anecdotes about when he and JoAnne were "new" to town during Sunday's reception sponsored by the Mariner, Atlantica, Pilgrim Bank and the Cohasset Rotary Club.

Woody Chittick talks with his grandson, Aydin Tiryaki, 2-1/2, who was the youngest guest at Sunday's reception. The Chitticks daughter and son-in-law, Julianna and Can Tiryaki, were among the attendees.

Cohasset honors JoAnne Chittick

Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford, who served as emcee, presents JoAnne with a plaque honoring her community service as Woody Chittick looks on proudly. For the past 30 years, JoAnne has unfailingly been helping to provide meals for needy women and their families at Rosie's Place in Boston.

JoAnne Chittick is surrounded by some of the past Citizens of the Year. From left: Tom Keating (representing his late father Gerard Keating, who was the first Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year, back in 1993), Roger Whitley, Merle Brown and Arthur Lehr.

JoAnne greets Jane Elis and Dr. Ed Woods Sunday afternoon at Atlantica restaurant. The Mariner presented Chittick with the Citizen of the Year Award on Sunday. Atlantica, Pilgrim Bank and the Cohasset Rotary Club helped sponsor the reception.

JoAnne and Woody Chittick pose for a family photo following the presentation of Cohasset's Citizen of the Year Award. From left are: their daughter Julianna Tiryaki, Aydin Tiryaki, Can Tiryaki, and JoAnne and Woody Chittick. The Chitticks have three children. Their son, Ben, lives in London, and their other daughter, Chloe Patton, and her husband, Andy, live in Chicago.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley presents JoAnne with a congratulatory proclamation from the House of Representatives. State Sen. Bob Hedlund was also on hand Sunday with a senatorial proclamation as was Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson, who presented a proclamation from the town.

ALASKA BY SEA: Cruise the 49th state this year for savings

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA — This is the year for an Alaska cruise and here are two big reasons why.

One, cruise fares are the lowest ever, with plenty of cruises throughout the summer being offered at starting fares under $500, and some cruises through May priced as low as $299 (find Princess cruises at that price, for instance, at www.icruise.com).

And then there's the fact the 49th state is celebrating its 50th anniversary of statehood this year, with Alaskan towns hosting parades, performances and fireworks all summer long, and most events are free (hey, you may even catch a glimpse of Gov. Sarah Palin marching by).

Alaska also happens to be one of the best places in the world to cruise, the stunning scenery and abundant wildlife so very different and so very alluring.

Flying into Anchorage over deep forests and snow-capped mountains you get the immediate sense you're visiting some place very different. And it's that feeling of vastness that sticks with you throughout your exploration.

The experience of watching a glacier calve into the sea is so multi-sensory it's hard to describe unless you experience it firsthand — imagine a boom as large as thunder, a waterfall of ice including house-sized chunks, a crash into ocean and then ripples under your ship as the water readjusts.

Then think about the fact you're watching the Earth reshape itself. It's mind-boggling.

And it's a scene you will only see in the waters of the 49th state.

Then there's the wildlife. Right from your cruise ship you're likely to see whales - maybe even killer whales — seals sunning on glacial ice chunks and playful dolphins. On shore you'll spot bald eagles flying overhead or even perching on utility poles — eagles are more prolific in Alaska than you may imagine.

The Alaska cruise season is May to September, with most cruises beginning near Anchorage, in Vancouver, Canada, or Seattle. The roundtrip cruises from Seattle or Vancouver tend to be the most economical in terms of booking flights from the East Coast. But one-way cruises between Vancouver and Anchorage tend to have the lowest cruise sale fares.

Inside Passage cruises — typically one-way — may include a visit to the glaciers at Glacier Bay National Park (where the number of ships is limited due to environmental concerns). Gulf itineraries visit no less spectacular glaciers including Hubbard Glacier (Alaska's longest at six miles) and the glaciers of College Fjord, and take you to other places of impressive scenery such as Tracy Arm and Icy Bay.

So, basically, on an Alaska cruise you are assured they will see glaciers — calving not guaranteed, but likely.

When you get to the ports, shore excursions take you to other fascinating places and sights.

In the towns, you'll learn that Alaska's history includes Indians, Russian fur hunters and Gold Rush miners. And you'll witness an Old West, frontier spirit that's alluringly intact even today — Alaskans are well aware of the natural world and vastness that surrounds them. Talk to locals and they'll share bear-sighting tales, opine on politics and Gov. Palin, and share the best place to try Alaska King crab legs, Alaska Pale Ale and wild Alaska salmon (farm-raised being a swear word in the fishing towns of the coast).

The towns themselves along the cruise ship routes are rather touristy, so spending some time out of town in wilderness areas is recommended, especially if wildlife and nature is your goal.

From the historic town of Sitka, once capital of Russian Alaska - and no, Palin can not see Russia from her house, nor can the people here — book a Sea Otter & Wildlife Quest jet-boat tour and the naturalists are so sure you'll see whales, bears, otters, or other impressive creatures they guarantee it (if you don't, you get a partial refund).

Juneau, the state's capital, is one of the most visually stunning small cities you'll find anywhere, located between sea and mountains with Mendenhall Glacier at its doorstep and surrounded by wilderness. A helicopter excursion above the glaciers to a glacier-top dog sled camp combines incredible views with a chance to experience a truly Alaskan sport.

From the historic fishing town of Ketchikan, The Bering Sea Crab Fishermen's Tour educates about the "Deadliest Catch." You don't have to deal with rough seas, freezing conditions and other hazards as on the Discovery Channel show but you do cruise on the f/v Aleutian Ballard, one of the vessels featured.

The Gold Rush town of Skagway has historic buildings maintained by the National Park Service, and is also starting off point for the White Pass & Yukon Route Railway, a narrow gauge that follows roughly the same steep trail of the gold stampeders of 1898; a wonderful trip on a clear day.

Since you've come a long way, you may want to expand your trip before or after your cruise, either exploring the fascinating cities of Anchorage, Seattle or Vancouver (soon to be home to the 2010 Winter Olympics), or booking a cruisetour to inland locations. Popular cruise tours include the Denali Corridor - Anchorage, Denali National Park, Mount McKinley (North America's tallest peak) and Fairbanks.

Whether you explore on sea or by land, Alaska is sure to amaze.

IF YOU go...

Check these Web sites for Alaska cruise bargains. There are cruises as low as $299 in May, and under $500 for most of the season.

IS IT COLD?

In the summer in Alaska, you can encounter temperatures anywhere from the 40s in Glacier Bay to the low 90s in Juneau. Pack layers and you'll be comfortable. Don't forget a hat and gloves, sunscreen and always have a raincoat close at hand (the climate includes rain, especially near Ketchikan). Bring a bathing suit, too — the sea may be cold, but you can catch some rays around the ship's pool.

Turn today's turbulent stock market into massive profits

"I've made money in every kind of market — up, down, and sideways. Let me show you exactly why today's volatile market is ideal for investors."

George Fontanills, founder of Optionetics, is a Harvard-educated, internationally renowned best-selling author, and options trading expert.

- See how it's possible to make money in today's volatile market.
- Discover strategies once reserved for a small group of industry traders.
- Understand the market's hidden factors better than current investors.
- Learn to control stocks without the expense or risk of buying them.
- Discover practical techniques for making more money in this type of market.

You see the market reports every day. One day the market is up 100, 300, 500 points. The next day, the market's down 700 points. Most investors think they can't make money in turbulent "seesaw"markets like this. They're sitting on the sidelines because they don't know what to do. But I can show you how this market is packed with profit opportunities.

THE SECRET IS OPTIONS

Let's face it. For most people, buying a stock is a one-way street. They buy and hold the stock, hoping it will go up. But the smart investors know there's a much better way to profit in the market. In fact, they love the massive volatility of today's market because that's where the massive profits are made.

MARKET VOLATILITY WORKS IN YOUR FAVOR

Housing collapse. Bailouts. Massive stimulus plans. Miserable corporate earnings. I say bring it on. The more, the better! Today's volatility creates opportunities for big profits. My time-tested program teaches you how it's possible to profit in markets just like this.

IT'S ALL ABOUT LEVERAGE

For every $1,000 you put in stocks, options investors only put in $150 – $200 to achieve the same investment muscle. How? Because we use options to leverage or control a stock rather than buy it, extending the power of your investment dollar. That's how I play the stock market, without the risk of actually buying the stock.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

EXCITED ABOUT SUMMER CAMP? PREPARE NOW!

Once final camp decisions have been made and registration logistics are well underway, parents/guardians of first-time campers may be unsure of how to prepare themselves and their children for upcoming summer camp experiences. The American Camp Association, New England offers the following pointers:

1. Pack efficiently: What gear will you need? Your camp offers the best advice—what campers really do need. If a packing list is provided by the camp, carefully follow it. Whether you're filling a daypack for day camp or a duffle, backpack or trunk for resident/overnight camp, remember that more is not necessarily better. Overpacking is the most common camp prep error families make. It creates difficulty in finding essential items quickly, increases the chances that possessions may get lost and burdens the camper.

2. Pack in partnership with the camper: If campers are to manage their belongings while at camp (for the day or for weeks at a time), they need to pack them! Camp experiences teach children valuable life lessons in how to keep track of and to take care of their belongings. If adults do the packing for and not with campers, children don't know what they have or where to find it.

3. Revel in independence: Camp provides an opportunity for each child to benefit as an individual and as a member of a group, from time spent in a world designed exclusively for children. It also offers parents and children a chance to practice normal, healthy separation, for the day or for several days or weeks at a time. At camp, children develop autonomy and a stronger sense of self. They make new friends, build skills, and experience teamwork. And at the end of camp, parents report their children's increases sense of independence.

4. Talk, talk, talk: It is only natural that as the first day of camp approaches, some children may experience uneasiness. Encourage your child to talk about these feelings. Let children know that you are confident in their ability to handle the independence that being a camper brings. Remind the child of other times they have been independent-sleepovers with friends or family, etc.

5. Get real: It's important for children and parents to maintain realistic expectations. Camp is a microcosm of the real world, so just like life, there will be highs and lows. Parents should encourage realistic views of what camp will be like, discussing both the high points and the low points children may experience. Remind children that the most important thing is to relax and have fun at camp.

got turf? are you in?

Advantages of a turf field:

The proposed synthetic field at the Clark Chatterton Complex will give Cohasset a multi-purpose, all weather athletic field that can be used for all the sports programs: football, field hockey, lacrosse, soccer, track & field, physical education and even for baseball and preseason training.

The creation of this new recreation facility will provide Cohasset with these benefits:

- The equivalent of adding three new playing fields (240 days of use versus 60 days)
- A safer, more uniform surface for practice and games
- Increased number of programs available to all residents
- Significantly reduced maintenance costs
- A state-of-the-art athletic complex that enhances the value of the community and provides a recreational resource for all Cohasset residents

Intergenerational religious evening at First Parish

Busy schedules, work obligations, family commitments can make attending Sunday morning religious education classes extremely challenging. First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset's Religious Education (RE) Committee acknowledges these difficulties and will offer a fun filled family alternative.

On Friday, May 8, the RE program will hold its monthly "Thank God It's Friday" Intergenerational RE program to begin at 6 p.m. in Trueblood Hall located in the Parish House at 23 North Main St.. A simple pasta dinner will be provided along with intergenerational prayer and socializing. Following dinner, youngsters and their adult companions will team up with one another (or against one another) for an evening of board games, trivia, and other family fun games.

Whether you are single or partnered, whether you have children or not – All are welcome to bring your busy week to a close and start off your weekend in an engaging way with a welcoming, spiritual community. The cost is free.

For information, contact Jim FitzGerald, Interim Director of Religious Education at 781-383-1100 or:

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 4, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be tempted to be more assertive when dealing with a job-related matter. But a carefully measured approach works best at getting the cooperation you're looking for.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) While others urge you to act now, you instinctively recognize that a move at this time is not in your best interests. You should know when to do so by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A busy schedule keeps you on the move for much of the week. But things ease up by the time the weekend arrives, allowing you to reconnect with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Travel dominates the week, and despite some delays in getting to where you want to go, the overall experience should prove to be a positive one in many ways.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine self-confidence comes roaring back after a brief period of doubt and helps you get through a week of demanding challenges and ultimately emerge triumphant.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Virgos who have made a major commitment — personal or professional — should be able to tap into a renewed reservoir of self-confidence to help them follow through.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You could soon receive news from a surprising source that could cause you to change your mind about how you had planned to deal with an ongoing job-related problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A surprise move of support from a colleague who has never been part of your circle of admirers helps influence others to take a new look at what you've put on the table.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While a bold decision to take an "I know what I'm doing" approach impresses some colleagues, it also raises the risk of causing resentment among others.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A misunderstanding 'twixt you and a friend might not be your fault at all, despite what he or she suggests. Talk it out to see at what point the confusion might have started.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Getting into a community operation fulfills the Aquarian's need to help people. It also can lead to new contacts that might one day help you with a project.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A minor problem could delay the start of a long-anticipated trip for two. Use the time to recheck your travel plans. You might find a better way to get where you're going.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Boston Pops season to feature tunes from 'The Red Sox Album,' on sale at Fenway

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Red Sox fans now have more to choose between than just team jerseys and caps to show their hometown loyalty. The musically inclined among them can pick up "The Red Sox Album," the latest release from The Boston Pops, which went on sale, not coincidentally, on opening day last month. Music from the new release will be featured in programs throughout the Boston Pops 2009 season, which opens this week at Boston's Symphony Hall.

"I had the idea for this album percolating in my mind for the past two or three years. At first, I wanted to do an album about all of Boston sports, especially last year, when it looked like we had a shot at a triple crown in Boston. That was until the Patriots, after a great year, had that heart-breaking loss to Arizona," explained Pops conductor Keith Lockhart by telephone recently from Salt Lake City, where he is in his last season as music director of the Utah Symphony. "And then as I thought about the project even more, I realized that there isn't too much in the way of hockey music. There is, however, nothing more Americana than baseball."

After an initial meeting with Red Sox President and Chief Executive Officer Larry Lucchino, Lockhart's idea sparked the interest of the team's owners.

"Larry Lucchino, Tom Werner, and John Henry all thought it was a great idea and offered their full support. We put it together, found days in the season to perform it, and we recorded it live over three nights last year," said Lockhart. "We used only the best takes — the ones where nobody's cell phone rang in the middle."

The album – available at Symphony Hall, not to mention Fenway Park and selected stores along Yawkey Way — includes new arrangements of the traditional Fenway fan anthem, "Sweet Caroline," "Take Me Out to the Ballgame," the John Phillip Sousa classic "Stars and Stripes Forever," a musical version of "Casey at the Bat," and a new arrangement of the Dropkick Murphys' "I'm Shippin' Up to Boston," the theme music for Jonathan Papelbon's Irish victory jig. Sousa's "National Game March" even includes a very special sound effect — the crack of David Ortiz's bat.

"At the end of phrases in a march, you always have cymbal crashes," points out Lockhart. "But Sousa wrote in 'the crack of a baseball bat' in those places. When we perform it live, we have an apparatus that's basically a big rolling pin that's suspended, and we mic it, and I hit it with a bat. For the recording, the Red Sox loaned us David Ortiz. He was really into it and thought the whole idea was hysterical. We went down to the batting cages at Fenway, and he took live batting practice. He took about 29 cuts, we recorded them, and we took them back, and through the miracle of digital editing we put them into the piece. So this album marks the orchestral debut of David Ortiz."

Conductor Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops will perform May 9 through June 21.

Lockhart's return to the Symphony Hall podium this week marks the start of his 15th year as conductor and the opening of the orchestra's 124th season. Broadway legend Barbara Cook makes a return visit to the Pops on May 6 and 7, while Tony nominee Michael Cavanaugh ("Movin' Out") will offer up Billy Joel favorites on May 8 and 9.

The 49-year-old Lockhart acknowledges there are certain pressures unique to opening night, but says something he learned from the manager of the Red Sox may help him to take it all in stride.

"Opening night is always important, of course, but to paraphrase something Terry Francona said about opening day at Fenway, it's only one concert in the season."

The Boston Pops will perform at Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, May 9 through June 21. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-1200 or go online at bostonpops.org. For a complete 2009 schedule visit www.wickedlocal.com, find your town and go to the fun tab.

Barbara Cook to appear with Pops May 6 and 7

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Some performers turn up their noses at the mere mention of reviews, claiming they can't be bothered to read them, but not singer Barbara Cook, who's faced many a critic in her long career.

"I read all my reviews, because I'm in business and I need to know what people like and don't like," explained Cook by telephone from her home on Manhattan's Upper West Side last week.

Cook, who joins the Boston Pops at Symphony Hall for two concerts this week, hopefully hasn't lost too much sleep over the years waiting for reviews to come out. People — and critics, too — have liked Cook very much since she made her first foray on Broadway in 1951's short-lived, all-but-forgotten "Flahooley." Cook enjoyed longer runs in subsequent revivals of "Carousel" and "Oklahoma!," and in the original productions of "Candide," "She Loves Me," and "The Music Man," where her memorable portrayal of Marian the Librarian, opposite Robert Preston, not only earned her a 1958 Tony Award as Best Actress in a Musical, but also cemented her status as a bona fide Broadway legend. With the exception of concert engagements like "Mostly Sondheim" and "Barbara Cook's Broadway," the Atlanta-born performer hasn't appeared on Broadway since 1972's "Enemies."

Barbara Cook

Recently, however, rumors have begun to swirl that Cook may just be set to star in a new show entitled "iSondheim," for the Roundabout Theatre Company. With no contracts yet signed, however, Cook is coy about the new show, but not the man whose music inspired it.

"I can't really talk about that, except to say that if I do it, it won't be for any great length of time," says Cook, who has intimate knowledge of the rigors of an eight-show-a-week Broadway schedule. "I do love Stephen's work, of course, but I also love Harold Arlen and Irving Berlin."

Cook will likely do music by those great men of the American musical theater and others, too, when she pays a return visit to Pops this week and to a city she first played very early in her career.

"I fell in love with Boston on my first visit in 1949 when I came to play the old Darby Room at the corner of Dartmouth and Newbury streets. I was one of four singers doing what were called tab shows, which featured the music of people like Cole Porter and Rodgers and Hart. We also did 'Candide' pre-Broadway at the Colonial in 1956. And I'm looking forward to once again singing with the Pops. We're going to do some great music by Rodgers and Hammerstein, a wonderful song from 'Annie Get Your Gun' and, of course, some Sondheim."

With her latest album, "Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder," now in record stores, a just-concluded month-long engagement at New York's Feinstein's at the Regency, and a concert tour that begins in Boston about to launch, Barbara Cook – her crystalline soprano still magnificently intact – is busier than ever in what is now her seventh decade in show business. She says there are at least two reasons for her longevity.

"First of all, I have very good genes. I'm 81 and still singing well. I've never been one to sing scales or anything like that, but I did have a music teacher early in my career who gave me a particular technique that I still use today and, so far anyway, that's worked out well."

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

WPI leads the way

Students learn hands-on skills in eight-week biomanufacturing certificate program

By Kristine Diederich
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

New ideas are fermenting in Worcester, and that's not just hyperbole.

At Worcester Polytechnic Institute, a new eight-week certificate program addresses the needs of local employers and students looking for new careers. The field is biomanufacturing, and it is burgeoning in Massachusetts. The program is called Fundamentals of Biomanufacturing and it is hands-on, so students will immediately get a sense of what these types of jobs entail.

But what is biomanufacturing anyway?

"It's similar to pharmaceuticals," said Rachel Yamartino, senior program manager for WPI's Corporate and Professional Education division. "They'll use living cells to make their product." Many of these products are drugs that will be for human consumption. Others are for renewable energy, typically biofuels. "In Massachusetts, it's primarily for drugs," said Yamartino.

Corporate and Professional Education is a division of the school that is "designed and built to serve industry's need for talent development and workplace development," said its dean, Stephen Flavin. "We provide education solutions for profit and nonprofit (companies).

"We really are focused externally," said Flavin. "We're asking companies, 'What are you struggling with? What are your skill gaps?' We come back and talk with our faculty; 'How does WPI play a role in solving workplace issues?' "

Yamartino then works with companies to design training programs. Some are unique to a particular company but others have broader application, which is how the new Fundamentals of Biomanufacturing program came about.

"(It) is essentially a program we developed for Polaroid, helping them (employees) to transition their skills," said Yamartino. Polaroid, formerly a large employer in Massachusetts, has shut down most of its operations.

Fundamentals in Biomanufacturing was developed in collaboration with representatives from Shire HGT (Human Genetic Therapies), Abbott Laboratories, Bristol Myers Squibb and Genzyme Corp. Industry professionals will be instructors in the program.

"We have a lot of contacts with biomanufacturing (companies)," she said. "We have a bioprocessing lab; we have the equipment, the expertise and facilities.

"There is a lot of need for people with these skills."

Adi Mohanty concurs. Mohanty, vice president of manufacturing and supply chain for Shire HGT, began working with Yamartino about a year ago to develop a program that would provide skilled workers for his company.

"We here at Shire were trying to figure out how to improve the recruiting. We had a huge need," he said. "We were looking at a pretty steep hiring (need); people on the (manufacturing) floor, people running (projects).

"We have a very strong training program, but it takes three to six months for an employee to be really useful on the floor," said Mohanty. A program such as this one will give new employees valuable exposure to the equipment and processes companies like Shire use to make their products.

"We need a fairly high level of educated people on the floor," said Mohanty. "Where do we get these people? It's a huge burden to us to hire people off the street."

"This provides industries a pipeline that saves them training," said Yamartino.

The prerequisites to enroll in the program are modest. Participants should be able to read and write English, have basic math skills and, according to Yamartino, a curiosity about science and its practical applications is helpful. After the course, the typical jobs participants would be prepared for include manufacturing technicians and operators, and most of these jobs would be in the direct manufacture of products. For example, at Shire HGT, people hired from a program such as this would typically be making the core substances of drug materials.

"The biggest thing in biotech is wanting to work there," Yamartino said. "People that have worked in some sort of regulated environment, like manufacturing" will understand basic procedures and have an aptitude for these types of jobs.

"We're not so worried about the educational background (of students before they enter the program)," said Mohanty, "but to find out if they have the aptitude and interest. As a company, we would encourage them to reach as far as they can."

The curriculum focuses on skills training and students will work with machinery similar to that found in the workplace. Shire HGT has donated several pieces of commercial equipment to the Bioprocessing Center at WPI's Life Sciences and Bioengineering Center.

Mohanty said providing an environment for students similar to a typical workplace is important. "The more it looks like what we do on our floor, the better," he said. "It certainly helps to have less things that are new (and) to see things that would be similar" at a job site.

"(With this program), you get some real life experience."

The outlook for the biotech industry in Massachusetts is quite good, according to Flavin, Yamartino and Mohanty. "So far, we know there are a few companies doing fairly well," said Mohanty. "They're still growing."

Yamartino estimated 500 jobs could be created in two years. Mohanty said starting salaries for entry-level workers in biomanufacturing are in the $40,000 to $50,000 range.

For more information about WPI's new Fundamentals of Biomanufacturing evening certificate program, contact Corporate and Professional Education at 508-831-5517 or visit www.cpe.wpi.edu. The current program runs May 4 to June 25. The school anticipates offering this program again in the fall.

GET READY FOR THE RECOVERY

Dr. Joan E. Dolamore
WENTWORTH INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

Wentworth Institute of Technology was founded on the vision of one man, Arioch Wentworth, who wished to establish a school where those working in the trades could gain the education they needed. For over a century, Wentworth has been offering practical, hands-on education and is now recognized as one of the oldest and most prestigious technical colleges in the country.

Wentworth's founding principle is perfectly realized in the Institute's evening and weekend programs. Newly named The Arioch Center @ Wentworth, it is specifically geared toward people who work full time but still want to pursue an education to progress in such fields as project management, architecture and construction. Central to the mission of The Center is delivering high quality, innovative programs designed to meet the career goals and life demands of adult learners.

Our students are proof of our success. Peter Gugliotta has a demanding job, a home and family in New Hampshire, and is attending school at The Arioch Center, pursuing his bachelor's degree in project management. He knows that his persistence and dedication has paid off, and his graduation is fast approaching. As he says, "I knew it was the right thing to do. I knew that an academic program could boost my career."

Ed Pulaski was working in telecommunications and wanted a career change. He recently graduated with a bachelor's degree in project management. Thanks to the education he received at Wentworth, he got the career change he wanted, starting a new position as project manager for a well-known corporation in the Boston area. Pulaski says, "I could never have made the money I make today without Wentworth."

Who can be a leader? With a bachelor's degree in project management from The Arioch Center @ Wentworth, you can.

Learn contemporary theories and proven practices for management, leadership and teamwork attending class one Saturday a month. This hybrid program merges the strengths of face-to-face learning with the flexibility and intensity of online learning.

The degree combines the fundamentals of successful management practice – such as organizational dynamics, communication, financial management and managerial accounting – with all aspects of project management, including risk management, project planning and control and project evaluation.

Now is the time to pursue your dream! State of Massachusetts officials project roughly 59,000 new jobs in management by 2016. These jobs require a minimum of an associate degree, and in many cases a bachelor's degree. In addition, there are projected increases in the engineering, health care, computer technology and real estate industries, all of which will need qualified and educated professionals adept at managing complex projects.

Learn more about Wentworth's bachelor of science degree in Project Management at information sessions at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, May 12, or 9:30 a.m. on Saturday, June 6, at Bristol Community College, 11 Field Road, Attleboro.

Dr. Joan E. Dolamore is dean of Lifelong Learning at The Wentworth Institute of Technology's Arioch Center @ Wentworth.

Who can be a leader?

With a bachelor's degree in project management from
The Arioch Center @ Wentworth, you can.

Wentworth is known for programs that incorporate real world problems with hands-on learning. The Arioch Center @ Wentworth is bringing this educational experience directly to you at our off-campus location in Attleboro.

Attending classes one Saturday a month, you can earn your degree in project management in as little as 24 months. Our flexible learning style enables you to progress professionally and still be able to live your life.

Special Town Meeting called

Moratorium on wind turbine bylaw on the table

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In 2008, Town Meeting voted unanimously to establish a wind energy conversion facility bylaw.

Now, in 2009, with one project denied under the bylaw, citizens have come forward to call a Special Town Meeting to consider placing a temporary moratorium on the wind bylaw.

More specifics will be coming forward next week when a citizen's petition, an article signed by 100 residents, is expected to be submitted to the Town Clerk.

Nathaniel Palmer of 9 Little Harbor Road is heading up the effort. He gathered about 400 signatures for the petition to call a Special Town Meeting to discuss the wind turbine bylaw. Palmer is a water commissioner, but submitted the citizen's petition as a private citizen.

Since last September when an application for two 100-meter turbines to be erected off Route 3A behind Graham Waste was put forth by private developer CCI-Energy, wind turbines in Cohasset have been a hot topic. Scores of residents turned up at each of the many public hearings on the project and the majority expressed major concerns with the potential impacts (visual, noise, safety) on the town from the structures.

At several points during the public hearing process, citizens expressed concerns with how the wind turbine was drafted and pointed out what they felt were shortfalls in the bylaw.

"The fact is what came forward through the bylaw was not supported by the majority of people in town," Palmer

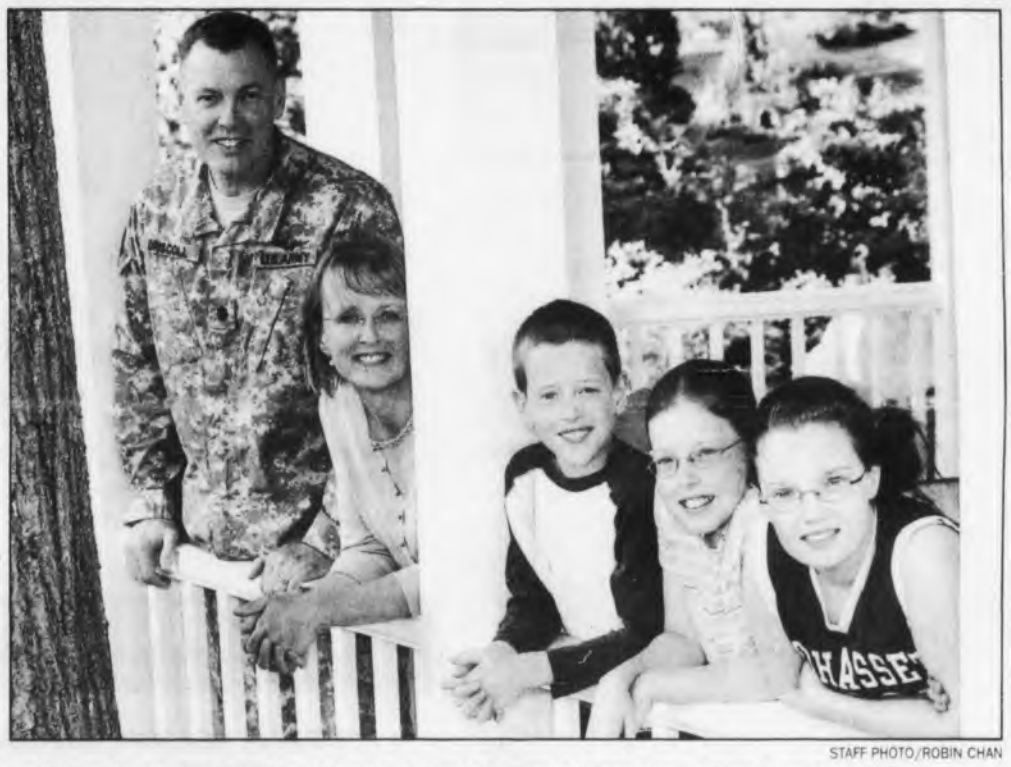
Driscoll mobilized to Walter Reed

Will assist wounded troops

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There are few among us who can imagine leaving our home, our families and our jobs for a year.

But, for Cohasset resident Dan Driscoll — Lieutenant Colonel Dan Driscoll of the US Army — that is exactly what will happen come June.



Driscoll, who has served in both the Navy and Army reserves since 1988, is heading to Washington, D.C. to be stationed at the Walter Reed Army Medical Hospital. There, as a member of the JAG Corps, he will provide legal assistance to wounded soldiers to help ensure they obtain the benefits they are entitled to receive.

This deployment is the latest installment in Driscoll's commitment to the armed service and country.

"If you can believe it, I was commissioned during the Carter administration," in 1980 to be exact, Driscoll said. For the next eight years he was a naval aviator – a backseat F-14 operator. After his eight years of active duty, he joined the Navy reserves and enrolled in law school.

In 2001, he was recruited to the JAG

Saving the Cook Estate house

Moving the Sohier Street structure floated

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In July, the Cook Estate house could be headed for a dumpster or get a new life — and location — as the town's senior center.

On Monday night, members of the Housing Trust came before the Board of Selectmen to offer the possibility of moving the 5,200 square foot former residence of Jane Bancroft Cook to town property and for town function.

"Initially our thought was affordable housing but it's possible the buildings could be used for another town purpose," said Clark Brewer, a member of both the Housing Trust and the Planning Board.

The circa 1960 house is a well-built, simple cape style house with large and simple spaces all on one level, said Brewer.

Abbott Development, the owners and developers of the Cook Estate, intend to begin clearing the site (including dismantling the single family house on the

Woman charged with stealing from Cohasset Dunkin' Donuts

Police said at 28-year-old Plymouth woman, who worked at the Dunkin' Donuts shop in the Gulf Station on Route 3A, is charged with stealing $78,953 from the shop over several months.

Alison S. Hurt allegedly took the money by forging deposit slips. The manager and general manager of the store told police they thought Hurt had been switching deposit slips in order to mask the thefts.

A forensic audit of the store's bank records shows that several large cash deposits were never made, beginning with $1,989 on Sept. 28.

Surveillance video shows Hurt leaving the store with the deposit bag on 14 occasions beginning Nov. 25, but deposits were never made.

In a Feb. 13 interview with Detective Garrett Hunt of the Cohasset Police Department, Hurt said she stole the money to support a drug habit, the police report stated. She then signed a written statement admitting to stealing the $78,000, police said.

Det. Lt. Greg Lennon said it took police months to unravel the case that involved analyzing hundreds of pages of financial records.

Police also conducted dozens of interviews, and reviewed surveillance videos at Dunkin Donuts and at the bank where the deposits were supposed to be made.

"This was a complex case," Lennon said.

Hurt, who was summonsed to court on the charge of larceny over $250, was scheduled to be arraigned in Quincy District Court on May 13.

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S. offers community forum

Cohasset C.A.R.E.S., a collaboration of dedicated leaders from local faith communities and social service providers, presents an innovative program, Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums, designed to offer insight, information and vital tools to help members of our community negotiate today's challenging economic times.

The final forum on Tools for Today's Economy: A Series of Community Forums will take place on Saturday morning from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. May 16, at the First Parish House on North Main Street.

• On May 16, at First Parish, Amy Whitcomb Slemmer, CEO of Health Care For All, will lead Affordable Health Care, a forum on understanding the confusing web of available health care options including benefits available in the stimulus package.

Each meeting will start off with coffee and refreshments. The gatherings are designed to be interactive, providing attendees the opportunity to ask questions, hear advice from experts, and leave with tools to help them deal with financial uncertainties. The forums are free and all members of the community are invited. Guests are welcome to attend the entire series or select individual topics of interest

Parking issues are signs of the season

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Parking complaints are on the rise along with the temperature.

Police remind residents that stickers are needed to park at Sandy Beach, Government Island, the end of Parker Avenue and Wadleigh Park near Black Rock Beach.

Chief James Hussey said police are working with the Town Manager in the effort to make parking restrictions in the village clearer, through better signage.

Spots in the village are "time restricted" depending on location to discourage someone from parking in a spot all day and encourage more customer parking for the shops and villages, Hussey said.

"We will be fine-tuning the signage," he said. "We will be doing some enforcement so make sure there is some turnaround in the spaces."

Another tricky area is Bancroft Road near Milliken Field where sports events are conducted. Hussey said police try to work with coordinators of the various programs to help them "police themselves" and ensure that participants know not to block residents' driveways, park near fire hydrants or too close to corners.

OUI arrest

A 20-year-old Norwell man is facing drunk driving charges following a two-car accident last Tuesday (May 5) at about 11 a.m. Police said the 1999 Mercury the man was driving did not stop behind a 2000 Hyundai that had stopped at the red light at Route 3A and Pond. Both cars were headed south on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A).

The Mercury hit the Hyundai. Further investigation and observations at the scene revealed the Norwell man was operating under the influence of alcohol. He was charged with OUI, negligent operation and following too closely.

Police said there were no apparent injuries.

ID theft

Police are investigating a report of identity theft last week from a parent who told police her daughter's credit card and Social Security number had been stolen. Charges were made to buy a cell phone and service plan. The girl's mother cancelled the card; police are gathering evidence from the bills received and detectives are following up. The purchase was shipped to an out-of-state address.

Texting

Police spoke to a Cohasset High student who was sending vulgar text messages back and forth with another student. At the request of a social worker at the high school and the girl's mother, an officer spoke to the student about the seriousness of putting that type of vulgarity "out there," police said.

Speeding

Police will be conducting radar enforcement on Pond Street as the high school lets out in response to residents' complaints about speeding at that time of day. Chief Hussey said spot checks would be conducted in the hope of slowing the kids down.

Illegal dumping

Police responded to a complaint about residential trash being dumped into the caller's private dumpster last week. Police were able to identify the perpetrator through some of the items in the trash and advised the person that he could be charged with a crime should the behavior continue.

Potential B&E

Police are investigating what could have been a breaking and entering to a home on Beach Street last week. The homeowner, who had been out for several hours, returned home to find her dining room table askew and a chair knocked over. Nothing else appeared to have been disturbed; no drawers or cabinets were open. Police think there is a potential that the woman's large dog may have been chasing something and moved the furniture.

In the woods

In response to a complaint about youth partying in the woods off Heritage Lane last Thursday (May 7) at about 9 p.m., police dispersed the group, which was from Scituate and sent them on their way. No alcohol was found.

Drive off

Police responded to Mobil Mart on Friday after the clerk said two cars had driven off without paying for gas. In the first instance, the clerk knew the motorist who works in the area. The credit card used did not get recorded and he returned and settled up. In the second instance, police were able to run the plate and located the motorist. Neither incident was intentional, police said.

Mountain bike

Police received a report from a Hull Street resident on Saturday that a mountain bike had been taken from his garage. The bike has a ripped seat and has a Cohasset Cycle sticker on the back of the seat.

Harassing calls

A resident notified police about harassing phone calls involving a caller who asked personal questions and then insulted her, he then called back a second and third time, police said. Verizon is also working with the victim to determine the caller's identity.

Vandalism

A Jerusalem Road resident went outside Sunday morning (May 10) to discover that a full beer bottle had been thrown through his car window, smashing the window and then hitting the dashboard. Police have processed the evidence and are investigating to determine if there may have been a motive or if this was a random act.

property) in July. However, when Brewer asked if they would consider moving the home to be re-purposed for a town function, they said there was potential.

The Selectmen were in agreement the proposal was worth pursuing.

The primary roadblock is and will be time. With Abbott intending to begin construction of their 27 single-family home development this summer if the building is to be moved many details would need to be worked out.

Given the building's size, Brewer said the house would likely need to be moved in three parts. The physical movement of the house, even it is only going down the street, will cost about $20,000 per component.

"It's intriguing as to what to do with it," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

Brewer said there are several separate parcels of town-owned land that could accommodate the building if the town was to go forward with the idea. Possible locations include a swath of land off Pleasant Lane, an area adjacent to the Deer Hill School, parking lot and behind the library.

"There are a lot of questions that need to be answered – is the structure sound? What sort of renovation would it need? Is there another use we could conceive?" said Dormitzer.

Both Brewer and Housing Trust chairman Jim Hamilton said their thoughts were extremely preliminary in nature.

"We thought before we go any further on this, we need to bring this (to the Selectmen)," said Hamilton.

Brewer, an architect by trade, said his preliminary review of the building found that it was in reasonably good condition.

"Initially our thought was affordable housing but it's possible the buildings could be used for another town purpose."

— Clark Brewer, Housing Trust

"It's 49 years old, but it was built with high quality materials," Brewer said. The windows needed replacing and a fresh coat of paint on the exterior of the building, but as far as he could tell there is no rot or other major structural issues.

The other major consideration is the cost of moving the building — if the finances are feasible and if Abbott Development would be willing to contribute in any way.

The Selectmen were asked to think about the proposal over the next week and re-visit the topic at next Monday's meeting to make some recommendations. In the meantime, the Housing Trust members were asked to speak with the leaders of the senior center proposal to see if the building could fit into their plans.

"Time is of the essence," said Hamilton.

Dormitzer said given citizens have called for a Special Town Meeting (see related article) the Selectmen could potentially place an article on the warrant to request funding to move the building.

Moratorium on wind turbine bylaw on the table

said in a phone interview. "What was envisioned when (the town) began the process was not what we got."

Palmer came before the Board of Selectmen Monday night to discuss the Special Town Meeting and give specifics on what the citizen's petition would be seeking from the voting body.

"Right about now we need to hit the pause button on the bylaw," said Palmer, adding the bylaw needs to be reviewed using the information and insight gained during the first turbine project application process. Last week, the Planning Board effectively denied the application by private developer CCI-Energy for two wind turbines off Route 3A when it failed to get a unanimous vote.

Selectmen Vice Chair Karen Quigley questioned Palmer on whether the goal was to rewrite the bylaw or not to have wind power in Cohasset. "Once there is a moratorium on the wind bylaw, then what?" Quigley said.

"Right about now we need to hit the pause button on the bylaw."

— Nathaniel Palmer, 9 Little Harbor Road

Palmer said the goal was not to outlaw wind or propose any changes to the bylaw itself, rather simply state there would be a temporary moratorium on the bylaw.

In a phone interview, he said the intent of the proposal is to ensure no wind turbine projects come forward while the bylaw is re-tooled. He named the fact the wind turbine bylaw does not require a direct benefit for the town as one of the issues many residents want addressed.

At the meeting, he said the proposal would not call for any sort of deadline for a new or revised bylaw to be brought forward or a re-instatement of the current bylaw.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the onus would then be on the town boards — the Planning Board, likely with help from the Alternative Energy Committee — to revise the bylaw or not.

"Nothing in here prevents even the same bylaw from being brought forward," said Palmer.

This was not the first time a possible moratorium on the bylaw was discussed. Another group of citizens came before the Board of Selectmen two weeks ago to see if the board would be willing to call a Special Town Meeting for roughly the same purpose — to entertain the complete withdrawal of the wind energy conversion facility bylaw.

The Board of Selectmen and a citizen's petition with 200 certified signatures are the only means to call a special town meeting.

The residents ultimately withdrew their request after a discussion in which it seemed a majority of the Selectmen would not support the calling of a Special Town Meeting.

Text of the petition calling Special Town Meeting

"The purpose of this Special Town Meeting is to present an article to enact a temporary moratorium of Section 19 of the Cohasset Zoning Bylaws, the Town of Cohasset Wind Energy Conversion Facility Bylaw. This is intended to strengthen the Town's ability to manage circumstances discovered in the current application process and hearings held since the original authoring and passage of, and otherwise not anticipated in, the current Bylaw. The temporary moratorium is not intended as a permanent ban or elimination of the Bylaw nor wind energy projects in Cohasset."

Special Town Meeting scheduling

Complicating the process is a Special Town Meeting called by a citizen's petition runs on a very short time table. Special Town Meetings can be called by the Board of Selectmen or by a citizen's petition of 200 signatures.

Once the signatures of a citizen's petition to call a Special Town Meeting are certified, the clock starts ticking on many levels.

- The Special Town Meeting must be held within 45 days of the filing of the citizen's petition calling Town Meeting.
- The date of the Special Town Meeting has not been set in stone, but by law, it must be held by June 25. Town Manager Bill Griffin said the most likely date for the meeting would be Monday, June 22.
- A citizen's petition article (requiring 100 signatures) for the Special Town Meeting must be filed within seven days of the Town Meeting being called (this coming Monday, May 18).
- The Board of Selectmen can place an article on the Special Town Meeting warrant anytime and are not subject to the seven-day rule. However, they are constrained by the printing and mailing of the warrant, which happens three weeks before a scheduled town meeting (approximately June 1).
- For all potential zoning bylaw changes, the Planning Board is required to hold a public hearing on the article. They must hold the public hearing within 60 days of town meeting. Whether the Planning Board can hold a public hearing in the short time frame is a scheduling problem — and if they even have to is a legal question Town Counsel was asked to answer. A public hearing must be advertised in the local paper for two consecutive weeks previous to its being held.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the associated cost for this special town meeting would be less than $5000. One of the major costs associated with a town meeting is the printing and mailing of the warrant to each household. Given the Special Town Meeting would likely be one article, the cost to print and mail would be less than a regularly scheduled Annual Town Meeting or November's Special Town Meeting.

According to Town Clerk Marion Douglas, the most recent Special Town Meeting called by a citizen's petition was held on August 12, 1996 to approve the borrowing of $9 million to construct a new school. The meeting was held at the South Shore Music Circus, tickets were distributed and there were over 3,000 attendees. The article passed and the new Osgood School was built.

An architect's rendering of the 26,000 square foot building that will have three floors, an elevator and an underground parking garage in the basement.

James Lane hearing plugs along

Neighbors question lack of commercial component

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The proposal for a 17-unit condominium project on James Lane got a second look in front of the Planning Board last week. The basement meeting room had a standing room only crowd; the majority were residents of the close-knit James Lane neighborhood and surrounding streets.

Still in the data-collecting process, the Planning Board heard from the building's architect and neighbors.

Stoughton-based South Coastal Development Group has put forth for a special permit a 17-unit condominium building to replace a single-family ranch house that currently sits on the half-acre property. The property is in the village business zoning district and falls under the relatively new village zoning regulations passed at the November 2008 Town Meeting.

The 26,000 square foot building will have three floors, an elevator and an underground parking garage in the basement.

The property at 8 James Lane is located behind the seasonal hot dog and ice cream stand that has operated under a number of business names in recent years — Boys of Summer, Henry's Root Beer, Strawberry Parfait. The property abuts the MBTA commuter rail tracks and fronts on James Lane.

In the coming weeks the reconstituted Design Review Board will take a thorough look at the project details. The Design Review Board was used in the past to lend expertise to projects from a primarily aesthetic point of view to ensure the best project for the town.

Andy Zalewski of Stoneham-based MZO Group architecture firm went over the various materials the developers plan to use for the building. Low maintenance, high quality products were chosen from vinyl coated energy-efficient windows to slate-like roofing made from recycled materials, said Zalewski.

The building's architecture was partially influenced by the Red Lion Inn built in 1704.

Alix White of 25 James Lane questioned the proposal in that it did not include any commercial component. Her understanding of the village zoning bylaw was that the first floor of any building would have retail or other commercial use.

Planning Board vice chair Stuart Ivimey said the bylaw requires a retail component except in two instances. One, if the building is located behind another building that has one or more retail uses on the ground floor when considered relative to the street or within the same building. Two, where it is found that first floor residential uses will not have an adverse impact on the continuity of any retail uses located adjacent to a street.

"It requires it, but we do have some flexibility," said Planning Board Chairman Moore.

However, the applicant wasn't hard and fast with having the building all residential.

"This property could be 100 percent commercial, but given the wooded area we think residential is a better use of the land," said Paul Cleary of MSC Development, the project developer.

"The impact of this project is going to carry on up to the hillside and change the neighborhood in a negative sense 100 percent."
— Gail Whitehouse of 17 Ash St.

This statement got some members of the audience angry.

"This project makes me truly upset…the neighborhood is going to be impacted negatively, don't say you're doing us a favor by making it all residential. The impact of this project is going to carry on up to the hillside and change the neighborhood in a negative sense 100 percent," said Gail Whitehouse of 17 Ash Street.

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson asked if Whitehouse would be satisfied with the project if there were first floor retail.

She said it would not, "this (property) needs a single family house," said Whitehouse.

The problem is, according to Moore, is that the property is zoned for the village business district meaning it could be entirely commercial and a single family house (like the one that exists now) is not a permitted use.

"We understand feelings run high, but we're not the zoning board of appeals where they can look at things very subjectively…we have to go by the law that we have," said Moore.

The town's consulting engineer John Modzelewski said there was a number of zoning problems – items, as the application stands now, would need zoning relief. This included a too close driveway setback and parking space size.

Other residents questioned the development's proximity to wetlands and adjacent public water supply. While the planning board does not have oversight over those issues, they would require all local and state boards to make the appropriate approvals before a building permit is granted.

"(Our) approval from us is not a carte blanche for them to go out and start hammering," said Ivimey. All relevant local and state boards have to be involved and signed off. Any modifications made after Planning Board approval the applicant would have to come before the board with a revised plan.

The public hearings on the 8 James Lane project will continue on Wednesday, May 20 at 7:15p.m. For more information, call the Planning Board office at 781-383-3517.

Town Hall use policy floated

User fees could be charged

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Any organization that wants to use the Town Hall auditorium may in the near future have a policy to follow. A Floated on Monday night, the Town Hall Auditorium use policy could bring some order and structure to where there was none.

At present, there are little or no standard policies relating to the use of the auditorium. In the interest of fire safety, liability and facility upkeep, Town Manager Bill Griffin felt a standard set of policies needed to be implemented.

The two-page document covers fees, prohibited items and activities, clean-up and room capacity. The package also includes an application, a closing checklist and a two-page pamphlet from the state fire marshal on fire safety in places of assembly.

"Many of this is being implemented, but it's not enforceable," said Griffin, adding there wasn't a single place where it was all written down.

Because the Cohasset Dramatic Club is by far the most frequent user of the auditorium for rehearsals and performances, Griffin provided a copy to Lisa Pratt, president of the CDC, for review and invited her to the meeting.

"There's no question we are extremely respectful of the 89 years of history we have had in the Town Hall. Sadly and scarily, it is very much the same," Pratt joked.

Wherever possible Pratt said the CDC has undertaken projects to improve and keep up with the spaces maintenance. They recently had the basement de-molded, painted the dressing rooms and purchased new flame-retardant stage curtains.

The CDC uses the auditorium for their rehearsals and performances. The non-profit organization puts on three shows a year – one in the fall, one in the spring and a youth production in conjunction with the Rec Department in the summer.

All seemed to agree because of the CDC's high use and commitment to the space's upkeep, the organization falls outside the policy's proposed fee structure. The club will discuss a waiver or decrease of the fee with the Town Manager.

Private and commercial entities would pay $250 per day May through September and $275 per day for October through April. Non-profit organizations would pay $50 per day May through September and $75 per day for October through April. Governmental entities would be exempt from the schedule.

The Board of Selectmen was more or less in favor of the policy.

"Any hall you go to you can get a packet of policy, I don't find it objectionable," said Selectmen Vice Chair Karen Quigley.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer was less willing to jump on board. He wanted more time to review the specific language to ensure a solid policy.

The board will review the policy again at their meeting next Monday, May 18.

Recreation Director Ted Carroll and town manager assistant Jen Oram developed the policy, with input from the Fire Department. The policy is modeled after the policy in place for the Town of Hingham's Town Hall auditorium.

Can you help locate a black Scottish Terrier?

AROUND TOWN
JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

PUPPY NEEDS HELP

Hi Cohasset. How is everyone this week? We have a lot of news to share so here we go.

Here is a story that I am hoping will help this family obtain the information that they are looking for. On Sunday, May 3 at 10 am, Ron and Mary Slavinskys' 12-week-old yellow lab puppy was bitten by a black Scottish Terrier while at Sandy Beach. It was not a pretty sight and in the haste to get the puppy to the hospital in Weymouth, the proper information was not exchanged between the owners. The only piece that the Slavinskys are looking for is the vaccination information; otherwise their sweet puppy is faced with a 6-month quarantine. The family that was at the beach with their Terrier were there having photos taken for a family picture.

Please, if you have any of the information or if this was you and your family, send an email to: aroundtowncohasset @yahoo.com, send the information to Around Town, PO Box 33, Cohasset or call the Slavinsky family directly at 781-383-0263. THANK YOU!

FUN DAY

It was a fun day for Mrs. Welz's and Mrs. Golden's Red Room class at the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School when Peter Vitello's sister Amanda played her trumpet for his class. Amanda is a member of the 4th Grade Deer Hill Band and an alumna of the Community Center Nursery School. Making it even more special is the fact that Amanda was a former student of Mrs. Welz's and Mrs. Golden's. Amanda did a demonstration, fielded questions and had a sing along with the children. Peter was so very proud of his sister and is looking forward to playing the trumpet some day as well. Also in attendance was Amanda's proud parents Jacqui & Peter Vitello. A good time was had by all!

The love, warmth and family-ness" of this piece is so sincere. Thank you for sharing with all the Cohasset Mariner readers.

SNOWBOARDER

Sam Sullivan, who is 9, joined the Waterville Valley, N.H. Snowboarding Team this year and ended up qualifying for the Nationals of the USA Snowboard Association. He was invited to compete with the top snowboarders in the country at Copper Mountain, Colo. in April and managed to make it to the finals in a few events, including his favorite, boardercross.

His dad, Paul, who has been a snowboarder for about 16 years, also qualified and did very well. "The two of them had the experience of a lifetime together, and we are so proud of them!" wrote Sam's Mom, Sara.

What a wonderful accomplishment to you both and a bonding experience as well for father and son. Nice work!

SOX TICKETS

May 15th (today) is the last day to be automatically entered into a drawing for two Red Sox tickets when you purchase your tickets to this year's CEF spring benefit. The "Tent Event" will be on May 30th under a tent adjacent to the Music Circus and will feature Red Bones BBQ and Bellevue Cadillac. If you did not receive your electronic invitation, please update your profile at www.cohasseteducation.org so you can be included in future correspondence.

SCHOLAR-ATHLETE

Huge congratulations go out to Cohasset resident, Courtney Culhane, who attends Notre Dame Academy. Over the past year or so Courtney has received the Coaches Award in 3 different sports. She's a three-season scholar, athlete at NDA (currently a junior) and was awarded the coveted Coaches award by three different groups of coaches the first in Varsity Cross Country, second in JV Ice Hockey, and third in outdoor track and field. The Coaches award is given to someone with leadership, determination, hard work, excellent grades and skill. She was elected Captain in Cross Country and in Ice Hockey. All awards that show your spirit, hard work and effort Courtney, keep up all of the hard work.

CORNELL

Cornell University announces that Katherine Simpson Englander of Cohasset graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in Government with the Class of 2009 during Commencement ceremonies in Ithaca, N.Y., May 24, 2009. Congratulations and the best of luck as you move forward in your decisions in life.

LAW DEGREE

Alison Kinchla, a 1998 graduate of Cohasset High School and 2002 graduate of Boston University, will be awarded a law degree from Northeastern University School of Law this month.

While at Northeastern, Alison served as the treasurer of the Student Bar Association and worked in internships at the National University of Galway, Ireland; the Office of General Counsel at Boston University; K&L Gates, LLP; and Sherin and Lodgen, LLP. She also advocated on behalf of committed individuals by submitting an amicus brief to the European Court on Human Rights and a writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Alison has accepted a position as an attorney with international law firm K&L Gates and will practice out of the Boston office.

Best of luck to you, Alison.

DRAMA SIGNUPS

Don't forget to join the summer Cohasset Dramatic Club this summer in one of their productions! Yes, CDC has chosen to offer two separate musical theater programs designed for specific age groups this year. The first, open to kids 8-13 is the musical, Annie. The second program is designed for teens and open to 13-19 year olds. This show will be The Wedding Singer, an upbeat, rock n' roll musical based upon the Adam Sandler movie of the same name. Open registration begins on Saturday, May 16th from 9 - 1 p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium. Please contact Lisa Pratt at lisa.pratt@comcast.net or at 617-852-0091.

SHAKESPEARE

South Shore Home Learners would like to invite readers to their presentation of children's version "A Midsummer Night's Dream," by William Shakespeare on May 23. Performances are 10am or 12 pm at Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St. Tickets are $5 each and can be purchased in advance at the OWM or by emailing southshorehomelearners@yahoo.com.

All proceeds benefit the OWM and will help this valuable resource open for families and homeschoolers on the South Shore and beyond. We hope all our Homeschooling friends will come out in support of this wonderful Homeschool friendly children's museum, not to mention to see a great show!

ARTS NIGHT

Don't forget Osgood School's May Arts Night, this Wednesday, May 20 from 6-8. Bring the kids for a fun-filled evening of art projects, dance performances by Boston Ballet, South Shore Ballet, Dunleavy Shaffer School of Irish Step and Isadora Duncan plus a chance to get in on Mr. Dykas's line dancing. Grab a hot dog and a Del's Lemonade and take in some wonderful music performed by many of our own Osgood students. The CHS Jazz Ensemble will be on hand to liven the atmosphere as well.

SAILING CLUB

The Cohasset Sailing Club has revised and expanded its web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which has updated details on the club's many features, including the instructional programs beginning with fourth-graders and continuing on to teenagers and adults. Application forms can also be downloaded from the site and turned in at the 2009 Registration Weekend, which will take place at the Club on Government Island on Saturday, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Sunday, May 17 from noon to 2 p.m. Applications for membership and all programs, dock slips etc. must be made in person at Registration.

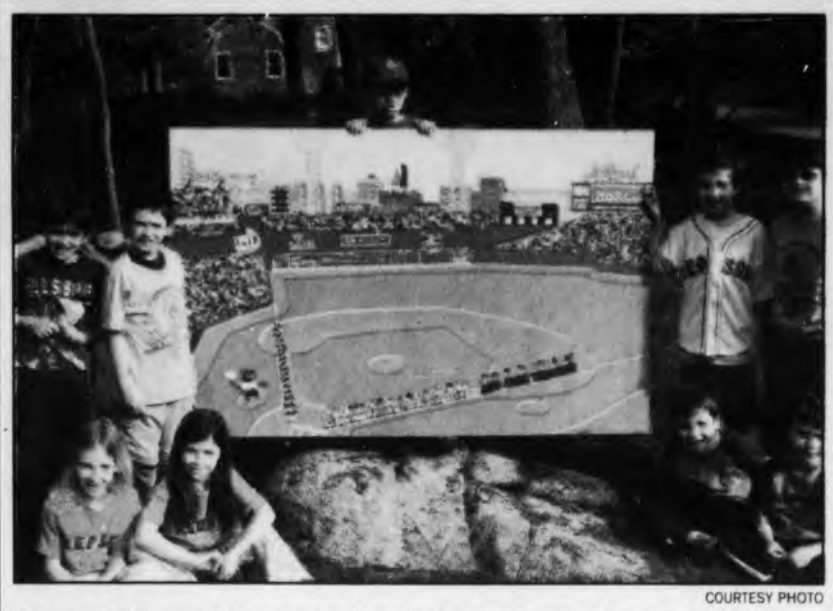
CDC to produce two summer shows!

Open registration begins on Saturday, May 16, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium.

Come join the summer Cohasset Dramatic Club this summer in one of their productions! Yes, CDC has chosen to offer two separate musical theater programs designed for specific age groups this year. The first, open to kids 8-13 is the musical, Annie. In this production, the kids ages 8 to 13 fill all the parts including the leading roles. This show is a slightly shorter version of the original, with a run-time of 60 to 80 minutes, and it is specifically written for elementary and middle school age actors. The second program is designed for teens and open to 13 to 19-year-olds. This show will be "The Wedding Singer," an upbeat, rock n' roll musical based upon the Adam Sandler movie of the same name.



Open registration begins on Saturday, May 16, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium. Rehearsals for Annie start June 1, and run Mondays and Thursdays from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. until June 18. Starting June 23, rehearsals will run Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Rehearsals for "The Wedding Singer" start June 3 and run Wednesdays and Fridays from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Starting June 23, rehearsals move to Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 9 p.m. The performances for both shows take place in the air-conditioned Cohasset Middle High School Auditorium. Show dates and times for both shows are as follows:

- July 17, Friday, 10 a.m.: Annie
- July 17, Friday, 7:30 p.m.: The Wedding Singer
- July 18, Saturday, 3 p.m. Annie
- July 18, Saturday, 7:30 p.m.: The Wedding Singer
- July 19, Sunday, 3 p.m. Annie
- July 19, Sunday, 7:30 p.m. The Wedding Singer

The cost per child is $350. If there are two or more children from the same family in the program, the cost is $300 per child. Included in that cost is a show t-shirt, script, complete libretto, cast party, and two free tickets per family to one performance of the show that your child is in. In addition, your child will also receive one free ticket to one of the other drama program's performances.

CDC will also offer up to five student intern scholarships to teens 16 and older who are interested in learning about directing, music directing, set design and choreography. If accepted they will work closely with the director, music director and choreographer of the youth program and be assistants on staff for that production. In exchange for their assistance, they would receive 50 percent off the cost of the tuition for their drama program. Acceptance into the internship program will be based on application. Applications will be available at registration on May 16.

CEF gearing up for spring event

Pull out those flip-flops and sandals for The Tent Event on May 30, a traditional barbeque to be hosted by the Cohasset Education Foundation on May 30.

This is the third year the CEF has hosted a spring fundraiser. Due to the popularity of the event in the last two years, the Event Committee was interested in finding a venue that could hold more attendees while also providing a relaxed atmosphere. The decision was made to host a barbeque under a tent adjacent to the South Shore Music Circus. With food provided by Red Bones Barbeque and live music by Grammy Award winning Bellevue Cadillac, the evening is sure to provide great food and entertainment for all who attend.

As well as musical entertainment, the evening will also feature a silent and live auction. This year the Committee has done an extraordinary job finding unique and one-of-a-kind auction items; from a hand painted mural of Fenway Park that could hang in your child's bedroom or playroom to a very special outing at the Lilly Pulitzer showroom in New York. For the adventurous, you can fly with aerial photographer Margot Cheel and receive a photo of your own home from the journey, and for history buffs, there's an opportunity to spend the night in JFK's dorm room at Harvard. Vacations in Grand Cayman and Nantucket are also available to the highest bidder, as are multiple tickets to sporting events. Art, jewelry, food and wine and teacher classes, will also be auctioned off. In short, there are large and small items for everyone.

The Cohasset Education Foundation is a non-profit local education foundation that invests in programs that enrich and maintain excellence in our schools in ways not supported by the regular budget. Over the past two and a half years your support has enabled the CEF to make significant contributions to your children's educational experience including Virtual High School, Smart Boards, the Middle School Engineering Lab (with the PSO), the Deer Hill STEM Lab, the Osgood Computer Lab and the Center for Student Coastal Research.

Proceeds from this year's benefit will be earmarked for a new Foreign Language Lab at the Middle/High School. The existing Lab was a gift from the Cohasset Education Foundation in 1993 and is in need of updating. For more information and for tickets please visit www.cohasseteducation.org. The CEF is a 501 (c) (3) organization. Contributions are tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law.

Clothing drive for Cradles to Crayons

Spring cleaning? People are asked to donate gently used clothing and baby equipment to the Cradles to Crayons clothing drive to benefit needy children in Massachusetts. The O'Donnell family at 11 Beach St. will host the clothing drive from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday May 16.

Cradles to Crayons collects clothing, baby equipment, school supplies and crafts, shoes, books and jackets and distributes these goods through a network of social service agencies benefiting children from birth through age 12.

Saturday's drive will include snacks and a jump house for kids. Interested in helping? Email kariod@comcast.net. Community service hours for Cohasset High School students available.

Adult sailing lessons offered at Hull Yacht Club

Hull Yacht Club is offering evening adult sailing lessons beginning the week of July 6. COHASSET RECREATION

Signup for Summer X-treme!

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Summer Registration – Registrations at Cohasset Town Hall will take place for all of our programs including playground, summer xtreme, youth tennis and any program listed on the brochure Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. and Tuesday from 5 to 7 p.m.

Summer Xtreme – has students entering grades six through nine traveling to premier field trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball fields to adventurous outings like the Codzilla thrill ride out of Long Wharf, Boston, which will be paired with an IMAX movie. With a $99/week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs. "This program fills that void where it offers the bests of both worlds; providing the kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends but most importantly for parents it is in a fun and safe atmosphere", according to Carroll.

"This program fills that void where it offers the bests of both worlds; providing the kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends ..."

What's in store this summer?

Week 1 – June 29 – July 2, Water Country and Monster Mini Golf

Week 2 – July 6 – 9, Codzilla Boat Ride and Boston Bowl and Billiards

Week 3 – July 13 – 16, Six Flags and Morton's Pond

Week 4 – July 20 – 23, Water Wizz and Paintball

Week 5 – July 27 – 30, Canobie Lake Park and Kayaking

Week 6 – Aug. 3 – 6, Paw Sox and Fenway Park Tour/Tomb

Week 7 – Aug. 10 – 13, Water Wizz and Lazer Tag

The program meets four days a week, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders, and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Director of the program, Michael Curtin has been a Middle school teacher at Atlantic Middle School for 14 years teaching math, science and technology. Curtin has worked for Quincy recreation for 20 years, running gyms and after school programs. He also acted as sports specialist during summer recreation in Quincy. Curtin was Co-recreational director for three summers at Great Harbors Resident Association in Falmouth where he operated the swimming pool, organized activities for adults and children and ran tournaments. Curtin is the proud father of two beautiful little girls.

Assistant Director of the program, Michael Barra, has been involved in recreation departments on the south shore for the past decade. Barra started as a volunteer counselor in training at Hingham Recreation in seventh and eighth grade, where he worked for the next five years as a counselor for children ranging in ages from 4 to 12. Barra enjoys all forms of outdoor activity and avidly engages in kayaking, mountain biking, snowboarding, hiking with his golden retriever and tent camping in his free time.

Yoga – Cohasset Town Hall. Hatha Yoga Class - Moving meditation including gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Cost: $8 drop in. Thursdays at 9:30 a.m.

Elementary Engineering – Recreation Center. This exciting hands-on engineering class combines LEGO Educations & LEGO Technic materials to explore motorized simple machines by building realistic models. Student teams creatively solve challenges using concepts learned in class. Celebrating science and technology to children ages 7 to 12, using real-world context and hands-on experimentation. Cost: $90. Tuesdays: Engineering 1: 3:45 to 4:30 p.m.; Engineering 2: 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. May 12 – June 16. Six weeks

Sunday Afternoon Jam Session – Cohasset Rec Center. Aspiring musicians can come down to the Rec Center on Sunday afternoons from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. and get together and play music. Music industry veteran and Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz is teaming up with Cohasset Rec and thanks to the generosity of Crossroads Music from Hanover for this new program. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Amps and drums will be available on site generously provided by Crossroads Music. Cost is $6 per visit or an all access pass of $20 for five weeks.

Lt. Col. Dan Driscoll mobilized to Walter Reed

(judge advocate general) Corps, the legal arm of the US military.

"If you want to fly jets the place to do it is the Navy, if you want to be a lawyer the place to do it in the Army," Driscoll said. In one fell swoop he went from being an aviator to JAG lawyer and from the Navy to the Army. He still proudly wears a set of wings indicating his naval service on his Army uniform.

Driscoll found out he would be mobilized for the one-year stint in March. Despite the sacrifice for both him and his family, Driscoll is looking forward to the work in Washington and says his family has been extremely supportive.

"I feel duty is a word that's apt. I enjoy contributing and I'm proud to contribute," Driscoll said.

Since 2001, Driscoll has worked at the Barnes Building in Boston in the Army's legal military unit providing New England veterans with legal services as they mobilize and demobilize. In his current role he serves as the deputy commander of his unit, which consists of lawyers and paralegals.

While in the reserves, the commitment is typically one weekend per month and two or more weeks of active duty. But, sometimes the work requires even more time.

"Life doesn't stop just because we're not on duty," said Driscoll. Yet, the reserve duty is vastly different than being on active duty day in and day out.

For the next year, Driscoll will be living and working in Washington, D.C. providing legal counsel to the wounded soldiers at the Walter Reed Army Medical Hospital.

"Our mission (at Walter Reed) is to be soldier's counsel," said Driscoll. He and other mobilized lawyers and paralegals will solely represent an individual soldier's interests before one of two boards — a medical evaluation board or physical evaluation board.

Dan Driscoll listens to his daughter Brigie play Canon in D by Pachelbel. All three of his children play the piano.

"I feel duty is a word that's apt. I enjoy contributing and I'm proud to contribute."
— Lt. Col. Dan Driscoll, U.S. Army

His cases will be at the appellant level when after a paper review the soldier was not satisfied with the outcome and requests a fuller board review.

He anticipates having plenty to do, "it's going to be a significant case load" of approximately 10 cases per week, Driscoll said.

As the soldier's counsel, he'll work on their behalf to ensure they put their best case forward and get the benefits they are entitled to, "I want to be sure they have the best shot at fairness."

While in Washington Driscoll will serve as the regional military counsel and oversee a team of uniformed JAG officers.

Since he hasn't even begun to get his feet wet, Driscoll wasn't prepared to say what type of cases, but he's ready to jump in to the work.

"I'm looking forward to exploring the nuances, getting into it and seeing what it's all about," said Driscoll.

His family, Sandy, his wife of 21 years, and three kids, Erin, 11, Brigid, 10 and Danny, 8, will hold down the fort at their home in Cohasset.

"My family has been absolutely fantastic about this, incredibly understanding," said Driscoll. "It's a sacrifice to them, it's a sacrifice on the professional and personal fronts as well."

Yet, he said all this with a smile. He believes in the work he does for the country and the work he will undertake at Walter Reed Army Medical Hospital.

"It's righteous work, it's good work. There are many things you can do in the JAG Corps that are less satisfying," he said.

This coming week, Driscoll will head down to Washington, D.C. to get his first taste of the work he will be doing for the next year. A full week of training he expects will give him a better understanding of the challenge ahead.

Being an hour plane ride from his family he hopes will allow him to come home a lot.

"If I can swing it, I'll be home," Driscoll said.

Lt. Colonel Dan Driscoll also was a US Navy aviator from 1980-1988 when he flew an F14 Tomcat. After his eight years of active duty, he joined the Navy reserves and enrolled in law school.

Volunteers sought for Art Festival, June 19-21

Volunteers are being sought for the South Shore Art Center's 54th annual Arts Festival, regarded as one of New England's premier outdoor arts festivals. Hundreds of volunteers are needed for the three-day Festival and fill two or three hour shifts. Volunteer positions include working at the entry arbors, assisting Festival artists and exhibitors, helping with art sales, working in the KidsTent, and assisting in the Membership Tent.

"Everyone loves working at the Arts Festival—there's a wonderful atmosphere, it's fun, and a great way to give back to the Art Center and the community," said Diane Shipp, Assistant Festival Coordinator.

To volunteer, contact Diane at festival@ssac.org or call 781-383-2787 x19.

Agents of the licensing board

Following on the recommendation of Police Chief James Hussey, the Board of Selectmen designated the police lieutenants, sergeants and detectives as "agents of the licensing board" to inspect and enforce the liquor licenses of the town.

Hussey said the police supervisors recently attended training on liquor license enforcement and it was recommended the town be explicit in who can perform inspections and enforcement. Most towns have this type of agents, said Hussey.

In Hingham all the officers are agents of the licensing board.

Hussey said before the police department starts inspections they would be doing some outreach and public education with those establishments holding liquor licenses.

"We'll education, then give them time to adjust and follow up," said Hussey. The police department will be working on tightening the rules and regulations governing liquor licenses.

Parking on Depot Court

Following a letter from the South Shore Community Center, the Selectmen voted to change the parking signage on Depot Court from 30 minutes to one hour. In a letter to the Selectmen, Community Center director Stephanie Church stated many patrons who attend the typically hour-long classes have returned to their cars to find parking tickets.

Prior to the revitalization project, those spaces were posted for one hour parking.

"This raised the bigger question of are there other things we should be looking at? Take a more comprehensive view," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he and members of the police department were looking into the conflicting parking signage throughout the village.

Commendations for sea rescue

The Board of Selectmen congratulated and thanked the members of the police, fire and harbormaster departments for their heroic efforts to save a struggling kayaker right outside the harbor.

Fire Chief Bob Silvia recounted the events of Tuesday, April 28 when a call came in about a kayaker in distress about 300 yards off Whitehead Road outside the harbor. A private citizen, who did not want to be named at the meeting, heard the man's cries for help about 20 minutes before 8p.m.

Fire personnel quickly mobilized and sent a rescue swimmer (paramedic firefighter Jonathan Hickey) in a survival suit to start a shore-based rescue. Simultaneously, Harbormaster Lorrie Gibbons along with off-duty firefighter Lieutenant Bob Protulis and police Officer Dan Paul Wilson headed from Government Island to the kayaker. In a matter of minutes, the struggling kayaker was pulled from the harbor with mild hypothermia and transported to South Shore Hospital.

Fire personnel were Captain Frank Mahoney, Lt. James Curley, and firefighter paramedics Dan Smith, Rob Martin, and Robert Nadaeu, in addition to those names listed above.

Selectman Karen Quigley, who witnessed the entire rescue while walking her dogs, said she was impressed with how quickly and organized the rescue response was.

"Thank you for your bravery, professionalism and teamwork," said Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson.

Goal setting

The Board of Selectmen spent about 15 minutes following up on their Dec.15, 2008 discussion on goals Monday night. The Selectmen reviewed the items brought up at the last session as put together by Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson. Not much had changed since the discussion five months ago.

Selectmen Vice Chair Karen Quigley suggested the town begin to strive toward being a "green town" by creating a town-wide policy that included efforts like using organic fertilizers on the fields and incorporate energy efficiencies in the buildings.

Now that the Board of Selectmen had a general list of goals to work from, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested they take each issue up one by one in order to ensure a complete discussion.

"My own view on these things tends to be we have to be very careful when making policy," said Dormitzer.

Carlson said many of the goals suggested in January, like the possibility of a new senior center, reviewing the stormwater and wind turbine bylaws, looking at the technology town-wide, were actively being worked on.

It was the sense of the board that the goals needed to be prioritized and given a point person.

Quigley suggested each selectman return next week with what they see as the top four goals for the town.

"That's a really good idea," said Dormitzer.

The Board of Selectmen goals include categories of information technology, financial planning, building maintenance, energy conservation and bylaw review.

An essential ride

Cohasset FISH helps residents get to the doctor

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We fill the gap when neither family nor friends are available or times are too uncertain for using the Cohasset Elder Affairs van."
— Dick Avery, chairman of Cohasset FISH

When people hear 'fish' in Cohasset, they probably think of the kind that swims in the ocean. But, for some residents, Cohasset FISH, when spelled with capital letters, is a lifesaver.

Cohasset FISH is an organization that provides rides to and from medical appointments for in-town residents. FISH, which stands for friends in service helping, has been serving members of the community for about 40 years. A fleet of volunteer drivers uses their private vehicles to transport mainly elderly residents to medical appointments on the South Shore and Boston.

"We fill the gap when neither family nor friends are available or times are too uncertain for using the Cohasset Elder Affairs van," said Dick Avery, chairman of Cohasset FISH and a long-time driver. On average, FISH provides between five to 10 rides every week.

The drivers and the clients both get something out of the experience.

Anne Kelly, along with her husband, Bill, both drive for FISH once a month. Anne has been volunteering for at least two decades.

"These are people who have no way to get to the doctor and they depend on someone to take them and that's me," said Anne. "I have the time and I feel good helping people, that's been the reward."

FISH volunteer drivers are available Monday through Friday except for holidays. The way it works is each day has a different driver assigned and a schedule is sent out to all drivers so that they can arrange swaps or assistance when there are too many rides needed at one time. The schedule is put out a month in advance.

FISH services are limited to Cohasset residents; those needing a ride call a 24 hour a day, seven days a week local number that connects to an answering service. Drivers call the answering service a few days prior to their duty day to see who needs to go where and when.

"The riders have all been very nice, very grateful," Anne said.

Arguments over what radio station to listen to doesn't seem to come up, "most just like to talk, carry on a conversation. Some are very interesting," she said.

Avery said younger Cohasset residents, or those new to town, who volunteer to drive find out a lot institutional town knowledge simply by driving longtime Cohasset residents to the doctor.

"It's as much a social event for the drivers and clients as it is a medical boost," Avery said.

For Mary Casey of Elm Street, she often reminisces with the driver about her husband, whom many remember was an old-time wrestler and her son, who was a star athlete for the Cohasset High Skippers.

"We'll chat about this and that, everyone is so pleasant," said Casey. Having lived in Cohasset since 1950, she offers a unique perspective.

"Now I'm 87 years old and to have people like that who are really willing to help the elderly is really nice," said Casey, who has used the service for about seven years. Casey said she walks with a cane and the drivers are very accommodating, "they jump out of the car to get to the door."

Drivers typically accompany the clients into the doctor's office and wait for them to be finished. Casey attests the drivers show up on time and don't seem to mind waiting, most bring along a book or magazine to keep them entertained. She said some drivers will even ask if she needs to stop anywhere on the way home.

"They go out of their way to be nice," Casey said.

The relationship is a two-way street, according to the drivers.

"I've made a lot of new friends. You tend to strike up good relationships with people. I've met a lot of new people that I enjoy," said Gordon Flint, former town treasurer and FISH driver for almost 20 years.

There is no charge for using FISH, but donations from grateful riders are accepted. Because of the largely volunteer effort, there is minimal overhead cost for the organization. Drivers give of their time, gas and vehicle. About $2000 a year pays for the local telephone services charges, postage and fees for the answering service. Local organizations have provided the bulk of needed funds with some riders providing small donations in gratitude.

Sara Marmo has been using FISH for more than 10 years to get to her medical appointments and can't say enough about the drivers and the service, "I don't know what I would do without it. People should know how wonderful it is."

There are about two dozen active drivers on the FISH roster and about the same number of current or recent clients. But, Avery wishes more residents would take advantage of the service.

"Ridership is much less than in previous years, most likely due to greater availability of the Cohasset Elder Affairs vans and passing on of many of our former clients," Avery said. "We could always use a few more drivers, especially if this article gets us more riders!"

Those interested in becoming a driver, which takes a commitment of one day per month, should contact FISH Chairman Dick Avery at 781-383-6043. Those needing a ride to an upcoming medical appointment can call FISH 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 781-545-7073.

Register of Deeds to host office hours in Cohasset

This is a community outreach program sponsored by Register O'Donnell to make it convenient for residents who may have a Registry question...

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will offer scheduled office hours at Town Hall, Room 2B, 41 Highland Ave., from 10 a.m. to noon, on Wednesday, June 17. The Register and his staff will be on hand to answer questions or concerns about any Registry of Deeds matter. The Register will have information about the Massachusetts Homestead Act as well as an Internet computer and printer that can be used to confirm the status of a mortgage discharge, print out a deed, record a document or demonstrate how the Registry's Web site works. Appointments are not necessary.

This is a community outreach program sponsored by Register O'Donnell to make it convenient for residents who may have a Registry question, an interest in understanding the recording process or difficulty traveling to the Registry building in Dedham. Although the Registry staff cannot provide legal advice, they can provide answers to basic questions, give general information, provide Homestead Declaration forms or confirm that a document has been recorded.

The Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Hundreds of thousands of Registry land records back to 1793 are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1956 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. The Registry of Deeds can be contacted via telephone at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at norfolkdeeds.org.

Stormwater Committee needs members

In February, the Board of Selectmen voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee. They sought members for the committee with specific expertise or knowledge to bring to the board. To date, no residents have applied to be on the committee and the Town Manager is still actively seeking members.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will take on myriad tasks including conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, providing opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seeking funding sources for stormwater remediation and advising the Board of Selectmen on recommended capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management will be participating as well. Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org

Arts night at Osgood May 20

On Wednesday, May 20 from 6 -8 pm, Osgood School will host its annual May Arts Night. This year's theme, Art in Books, is sure to inspire the creativity of students and parents alike. Children will have the chance to stand in the shoes of their favorite author-illustrators, illustrating books of their own inspired by the art found in many of their most beloved books. Children will use a variety of techniques and media including charcoal sketching, tissue paper collage and macro photography, among others.

In addition to book making, May Arts Night will host many exciting demonstrations including a variety of dance companies (including the ever-popular line dance stylings of our own Mr. Dykas) and music events including an Instrument Petting Zoo and student demonstrations. New this year will be an exhibit focusing on the Martial Arts.

As always, hot dogs and refreshments including Del's Lemonade will be available for sale. And in support of the PSO, raffle tickets offering the chance to win some fun prizes will also be available. If you would like to host a table or lend a helping hand, please contact either Sarina Fusco (383-2612) or Catherine Harvey (383-6310).

EDITORIAL

Parking rules

We all must admit that we have a love-hate affair with parking rules and restrictions.

When we want to park close to our destination – whether a convenience store, shop, restaurant or even the dentist's or doctor's office – and then find a great spot, we are happy, perhaps even delighted.

However, a sure mood-killer is coming out to find a ticket on the windshield or worse, finding your car gone because it was towed away.

In fact getting a parking ticket probably ranks up there with other high stressors in our lives. We would even guess that a parking ticket can be more upsetting than a speeding ticket or other moving violation, even though, with those violations our insurance rate can be affected.

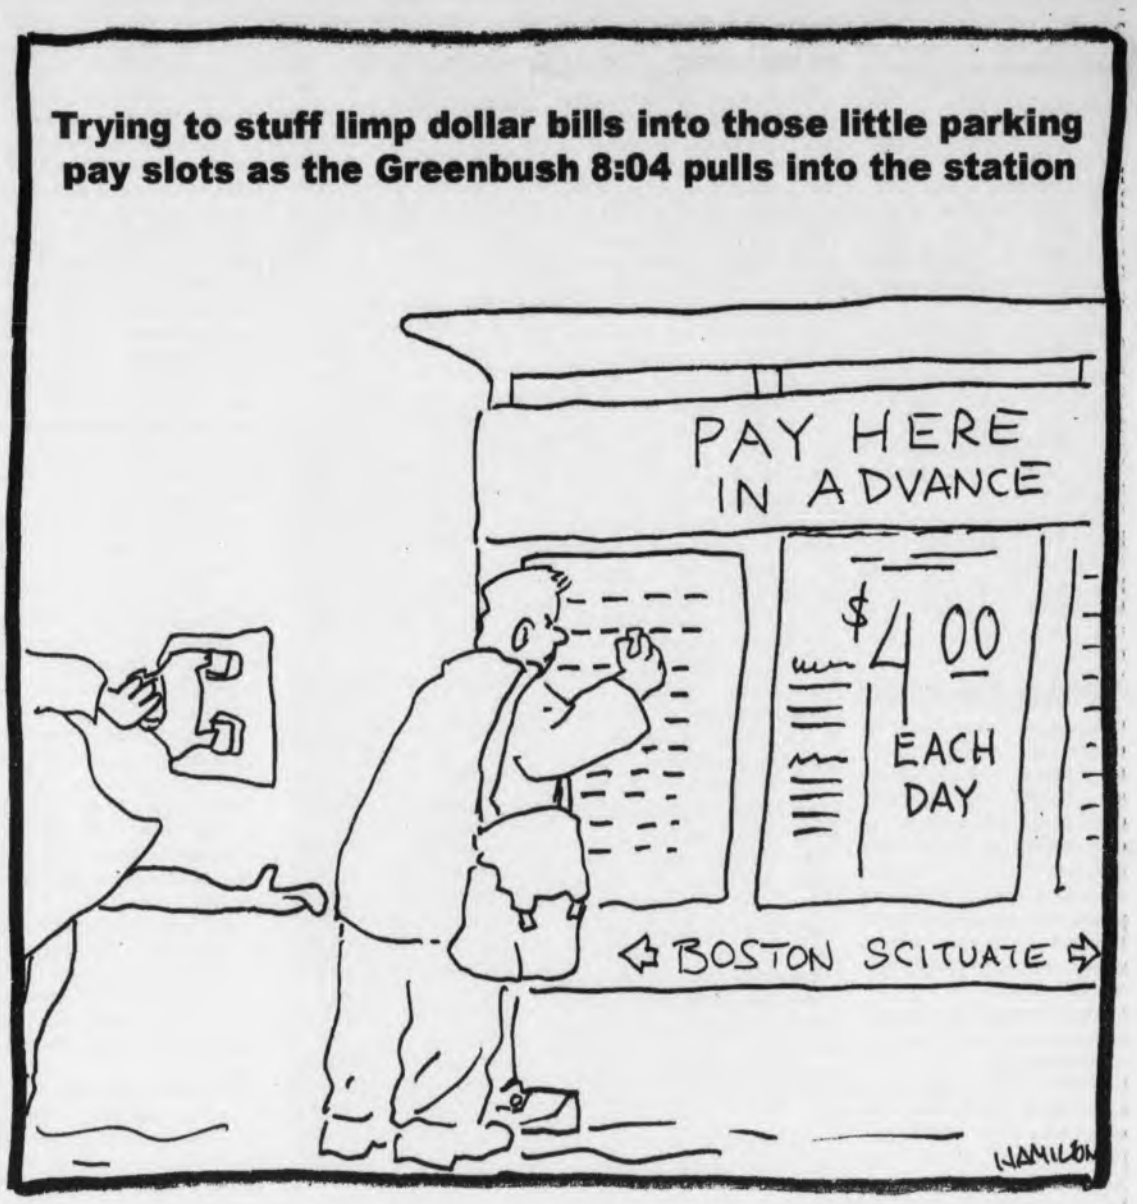
With speeding – we usually admit it was our fault: we were exceeding the limit. That can also be true with other violations. For example, yes, we did make a right on red when the sign said not to, or yes, maybe we did cruise through that red light (but only a split second after it turned from yellow).

But parking tickets can cause a different response. For one thing, the time issue can be confusing. How long did you really park there? Was it longer than 15 or 30 minutes? It can be difficult to recall. Motorists often find themselves either angry about the ticket (I'll never come here again!) or they are sure that they are completely innocent and have been falsely accused.

Some city motorists just ignore parking tickets altogether and then eventually find themselves arrested and hauled off. Sooner or later they are stopped for some unrelated traffic violation and the police computers reveal the host of unpaid tickets. Not good.

When it comes to parking, most of us are either in a rush or looking for convenience – so we park (and yes, even hog) – prime spaces. However, by doing that we could inadvertently be causing harm to a local business or shop that is depending on attracting drive-by traffic.

Selectmen showed this week that they are receptive to legitimate complaints about parking restrictions by extending the parking time limit on Depot Court from 30 minutes to an hour.



Town Manager Bill Griffin and Police Chief James Hussey are looking at parking throughout the village to see if the signs are clear and restrictions adequate.

However, in the end it is up to us to be good citizens. If we are able, we should take advantage of the spring weather and park in the Town Lot or in spaces farther from the front of local shops and businesses.

How many times have you not stopped to grab something because there were no spaces in front and you did not have the time or the patience to keep looking for a place to park?

Well, our shops and businesses cannot afford to lose any patronage during these tough economic times.

So first, make it a point to shop locally. And second, please pay attention to the parking restrictions. If possible park farther away and walk. It can be a good thing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Right decision/wrong results

TO THE EDITOR:

The result of the Planning Board's vote on Wednesday, which rejected the proposed wind turbine project was, in so many ways, the right decision for Cohasset, yet part of me feels as if the entire process yielded the wrong result. Two wind turbines each the height of International Place, infringing on neighborhoods and other businesses would be the wrong decision in any town, but renewable green energy is where we should all be looking.

As the events unfolded over the past year, I sporadically found myself thinking back to the Aesop Fable about the dog and his reflection; which tells the story of a dog carrying a large bone seeing his reflection in a stream. Thinking it's another dog carrying another bone he decides he wants both bones and attacks the reflection – only to end up wet and lose the bone he had. The moral of the story is "Too much greed results in nothing."

Much like the dog in the fable, CCI-Energy continued to be greedy and insist on oversized intrusive turbines that were quite possibly dangerous for the location. As a result, due to the common sense of Planning Board vice chair Stuart Ivimey, they lost. Mr. Ivimey's vote will go down as one of the better moves in the history of the town and we all should be grateful, but it really doesn't cure my "Hull Envy."

Two considerably smaller turbines, a scaled down business model with the town seeing a defined portion of the energy would have been a win for everyone involved. Here's hoping common sense continues to prevail over greed and in the end the town of Cohasset moves forth with a logical green energy program.

Social Service League appreciates support

TO THE EDITOR:

The Social Service League of Cohasset would like to extend our sincere thanks to the following corporate sponsors and silent auction donors who made our recent fashion show a huge success: Mariposa Massage and Body, The Balance Studio, Adrian Morris of LemonLime, BC Tops, Bella Blinds and Windows, Brentwood Designs, The Clutter Coach, Cohasset Dog Wash, David Talbot's Plumbing, Focus Gallery, Friends of Cohasset Elders, Goodwin Graphics, KA Ricco Hair Design, Dr. Katherine McArthur, DMD, Keurig Inc., LauraPaige Jewelry, Linda J. Fagan, RN, Lisa Stein of Let's Go Pets, Matthew's Jewelers, Paperscapes, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Ports and Company, President's Landscape and Design, Running Solutions, Scituate Harbor Travel, Strecker Eye Center and Talbots.

We would also like to thank the following individuals for their time and enthusiasm: Heather Ford of WZLX, Lisa Lynch of Ports and Company, Jackie McLean of J. McLaughlin, Adrian Morris of LemonLime, Nina Berkowitz and her talented art students from CHS, Emily Mondon of the Hingham Gift Company – and all our beautiful (and handsome!) models.

As a result of these contributions, the League will be able to give generously to the many causes we support including the building fund for the new Cohasset Senior Center.

Last but not least, we would like to thank the many guests who came out to support this event. We were so thrilled that this fundraiser sold out despite these tough economic times. We are certainly lucky to live in such a generous community.

Greenbush loose ends still being tied up

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Speaking of loose ends, this week they are scheduled to dig up North Main Street at Woodside Cemetery to repair areas in the driveway where rainwater accumulates.

Greenbush – The Greenbush Project has come alive recently. We have had more communication with the project in the past several weeks than we have had in quite some time. It is actually good to know that they are trying to get the loose ends tied up. Speaking of loose ends, this week they are scheduled to dig up North Main Street at Woodside Cemetery to repair areas in the driveway where rainwater accumulates.

Late last week (after we went to press) the Greenbush Project placed a large information sign at the Hingham Skating Club warning travelers of the impending construction work. CBB, the MBTA's contractor has removed asphalt from North Main Street and part of the Woodside driveway, as seen in the photograph. After that they will need to reset some of the granite curbing in the area and regrade the driveway. When that is completed they will be repaving the driveway and North Main Street. We hope they are able to complete the work this week, but weather and other uncontrolled events such as funerals will often affect the work schedule. This work should be close to completion by the time you read this. But, we'll just have to see.

As an added note, while we were at Woodside Cemetery to snap progress photos, two vehicles, driving from Town, made illegal left turns around the center island while facing the "No Left Turn" sign. In each case the person could not make a clean left turn and ended up hitting the curb. What do you suppose they were they thinking? The sign applies to everyone except them?

The Greenbush will also need to close the new parking lot on Pleasant Street, known as the Roy Parking Lot, for repairs next week. There are several pieces of curbing that need to be reset and the western edge of the lot needs some finishing touches in the area now overgrown with prominent vegetation, as shown in the accompanying photo.

Last week a very major Greenbush bit of re-work took place. When the project placed the guardrails alongside on the new Rocky Lane entrance road, on the western side of the bridge, the guardrail was placed too close to the road. Why is this important, you ask? It's really simple. The MBTA assured the Town in numerous written correspondences that, although they felt that they were not obligated to construct a sidewalk alongside the new road, that they would allow sufficient space for the Town to do so.

Last week, CBB moved the guardrail back from the edge of the road for the minimum sidewalk clearance of 4 feet 6 inches. Or at least, they almost did. The facts be known, one post is 2 to 3 inches closer to the road than it should be. Presently, we are in discussion with CBB to get that one post moved the necessary remaining distance.

Little Harbor Project – The Little Harbor Project paving work continues. Coordinating paving activities with LMH's construction work, as well as with the weather, is no mean feat. Some of the project related delays are associated with the sewer-testing portion of the project. When the new pipe does not initially pass its pressure leak test, finding where the leak is, is not necessarily as simple as it may sound. There have been instances where the actual leak is quite a distance from an apparent leak location. We have seen as many as 4 or 5 holes dug along a section of pipe to actually reveal a section of faulty piece of pipe or faulty pipe connection. In the more extreme cases, the sewer lines are filled with helium gas and sophisticated helium gas sensors are used to detect the leak locations.

The first paving priority is for roads that have passed their pressure test and have absolutely no paving on them. If none of the "no paving" roads are ready for paving then we may choose to use our allotted paving contractor time to pave a top coat on a road that already has been base coated and has had a chance to settle. A good example of the latter is Deep Run, which received its base coat last year and has now over-wintered and settled. Paving Deep Run this week should result in a very long lasting paving job.

Before the paving can be done all of the structures in the roadway need to be raised by the planned thickness of the paving. You can see what this looks like in the photo, or by just driving around Town and looking at the areas being prepared for paving. Please be careful and drive very slowly when you need to drive over one of these raised structures. Hitting a raised structure at speed with your car is very tough on tires and rims. However, creating these raised hazards is just a necessary part of a paving job. So, please do be careful.

Before a base-paving coat is laid, in addition to the structures being raised, the road must be graded so that the road way has the proper contours and will shed storm water. We have included a photo of the grading being done on Joy Place this week.

This present week paving was scheduled to take place on Thursday, May 14.. Again, by the time you read this you may know whether it was actually done and the weather was cooperative.

Giving meaning to phrase 'Support Our Troops'

COMMENTARY

JOE MC ELROY

Cohasset is blessed to have volunteers and veteran's organizations that are committed to remember the sacrifices of our fallen comrades and assure that those scarred or maimed by wars are never forgotten.

Memorial Day is intended to honor those who have made the ultimate sacrifice.

The Sons of the American Legion will post flags at the "Healing Field" at 9 a.m., on Sunday, May17, followed by a 1 p.m., dedication on Saturday, May23. The "Healing Field" will remain open until Saturday, May30. On Memorial Day, Monday, May25, those in the parade will gather in front of the American Legion and opposite Cohasset Veterans' Memorial Park at 8 a.m. Participants will render honors at Cohasset cemeteries (N. Cohasset at 0845, N. Cohasset Honor Roll at 0900, Woodside at 0930, Beechwood at 0945, Music Circus-Reassembly at 1030, Central Cemetery at 1100, Village Square at 1130, and Veterans' Memorial Park at noon).

Cohasset has always supported its veterans. However, "something is wrong." On the one hand, it is inspiring to see families emerge from their homes to wave flags and cheer our marching veterans as they proceed to visit respective cemeteries to honor our fallen heroes. However, the majority of those who go to the cemetery are the veterans and their families. Memorial Day is not just another day off; it is a day for you to display flags and join us in honoring those who made the ultimate sacrifice. Unfortunately, the majority of our citizens use the day to clean their yards, go to Memorial Day sales, or prepare their boat for launching.

COURTESY PHOTO

The Healing Field has become a part of Cohasset's traditional Memorial Day observances.

We have been at war in Afghanistan for eight and a half years. We have been in Iraq for more than six. These are two of the longest wars in American history, but the personal impact of these wars has fallen on a smaller percentage of American families than in any war for more than a century.

Remember all those yellow-ribbon magnets from the beginning of the wars? Most of them have fallen from cars never to be replaced. Do you still feel comfortable walking up to someone in uniform to say, "thank you?"

- Fly your American Flag, not just on holidays but often.
- Put that magnet back on your car.
- Greet men and women in uniform.
- Volunteer at a VA hospital, nursing home or clinic.
- Transport veterans to VA medical centers.
- Help that older veteran or surviving spouse who can't do chores around the house.

Do those concrete things that give real meaning to the phrase, "Support Our Troops." An American serviceman who is killed in Kandahar today is a statistic in the news tomorrow. And on the following day, the memory of the incredible sacrifice he or she made for you and me begins to fade.

If you do not live on the parade route, join us at noontime at Cohasset Veterans' Memorial Park (on the Harbor). May God bless you as we pay tribute to those who gave their all to protect this great country and our precious freedoms.

Joseph R. McElroy is Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services.

HEALTH NOTES

Cohasset Café offers fun and good food

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Board of Health suggests that most Cohasset elders are fun to converse with, since collectively, they know more stuff and by and large, have been quite successful.

A new diversion and important event has been added to the busy schedule of events worthy of our attention in town, in the form of Monday morning's Cohasset Café. Every Monday, from 9 to 11 a.m., coffee and light breakfast goodies are produced in the kitchen of a building with one of Cohasset's most beautiful outlooks; the Cohasset Lightkeepers on Government Island. The Friends of the Council of Elder Affairs have sponsored, and members produced, the breakfast gathering to benefit elders and hopefully raise money for a much-needed senior center. The town is presently considering a location on town land near the Sohier Street entrance to the Swim Center. At present, little space is available for seniors at the Community Center, which is bursting at the seams sponsoring activities for citizens of all ages.

Last Monday, seniors were served by four members of the Friends: Mary Kay Richardson, Karen Oronte, Liza Salerno and Linda Falconiero, as well as John Campbell, president of the group. Words that come to mind are caring, efficient and helpful. Altogether a very pleasant experience.

There is good reason for everyone to take advantage of this opportunity since the baby boom has hit town with a vengeance: There are more than twice as many 60- to 70-year-olds in Cohasset than residents between 50 and 60.

The Board of Health suggests that most Cohasset elders are fun to converse with, since collectively, they know more stuff and by and large, have been quite successful. We propose that you find such company to attend a Monday event that's fun; lacking in salt; harmful additives; fat free (and therefore healthy), as well as being of benefit to seniors who make up more than a third of the town population.

Discussions with people having great experience is usually interesting and enlightening. The same can be said about successful people and Cohasset has lots of success stories. Finally, those with an artistic nature recognize and appreciate beautiful places, so we have many such successful citizens who've enjoyed the experience of living a long time in a beautiful place.

Cost for this pleasant morning interlude is small. We hope you will approach your favorite elder (above 60) and accompany him to Government Island for breakfast. One of you will have to cough up $2 as a fee to cover the cost of the ingredients, but you will not be lectured about the crying need for services to elders in Cohasset. That's done here!

The only venue created specifically for elders in Cohasset is the Cohasset Housing Authority apartments called Harborview at 60 Elm St. where 70 or so Cohasset seniors live. Somehow, many consider the apartments, because non-residents can apply for them, not a part of the Cohasset citizenry. They live in town; some for many years, and are by and large the nicest people one could meet. Only recently have facilities and surroundings been upgraded for these Cohasset residents, a change for which they have waited for years. And, they are residents, no matter where they started, but somehow they've contracted the aura of not being like real Cohasset residents:

If everyone was just like me.

We've all had some days in our life that end with a feeling of being very old indeed. Not a matter of chronology as much as events and one's outlook. The Friends of Elder Affairs at the Lightkeepers building on a Monday morning is an unbeatable combination that will surely improve your outlook. Visit a beautiful place; enjoy a cup and a bite with congenial company.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Band to play Liberty Tavern June 6

New Son Rising is the Wicked Local Web Jams champ.

The Norton-based rock band made its way through three head-to-head matchups on the Web Jams bracket with its song "Never Knowing." NSR defeated Union Jack of Humarock in round one, Stoughton's Easy Access in the semifinals and Sick Kitty of Plymouth in the final. As Web Jams winners, NSR will perform at the Liberty Tavern in Rockland Saturday, June 6, starting at 9 p.m. For directions and information on the venue, visit libertytavernrockland.com.

In three rounds of voting, NSR amassed 127,990 votes — nearly half the 312,870 total Wicked Local Web Jams votes. The band lists Alice in Chains, NIN, Guns 'N Roses and Stone Temple Pilots among its musical influences and will release a new album titled "Sonset" soon. New Son Rising members are Jake Lundell (vocals), Steve Ohlson (guitar), Jonas Osborne (bass guitar) and Jay Kaplan (drums and electronics).

NSR plays venues all over Southeastern Massachusetts, Boston and Rhode Island. For a schedule of the band's upcoming shows check out newsonrising.com.

Is your band ready to rock online? We're filling up the Wicked Local Web Jams 2 bracket, which will launch next month. E-mail your band bio, photo and MP3 files to Alice Coyle at acoyle@cnc.com. For information, call 508-967-3505.

Prom tickets and permission slips

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

The good news is that my senioritis hasn't completely taken over and I still manage to write this Life at CHS column and get it in before the deadline.

Hello everybody! AP exams are finally over and students can again rest easy knowing that the information that they have been meticulously studying and slaving over all year has finally been put to good use. Hopefully, the results of this said studying and slaving will show in July when scores are returned.

Today, the band and chorus went on their trip to Six Flags after performing at an annual music festival, both receiving rave reviews. Attention seniors! Prom tickets are now on sale! Get them quick while they're hot, because the big night is two weeks from today and it will be an event that you won't want to miss. Also, if you plan on attending the Post-Prom party, you must get your permission forms in by May 22nd along with $30 to cover costs.

Winter sports awards were given out this past week, all those who participated in any sport over the 2008-2009 winter season received recognition by being awarded letters, pins, certificates, and positive comments. Also, next Thursday is High School Arts Night; all students who have done any art in the past year will have their work put up on display for all to marvel at. Hors d'oeuvres like grapes and cheese will be served.

The good news is that my senioritis hasn't completely taken over and I still manage to write this Life at CHS column and get it in before the deadline. However, as you all know, I cannot write it forever because it would be very impossible for me to write about the happenings at Cohasset High School when I'll be miles away. But fret not, for after my name graces the byline of these articles for the last time, a fresh name will appear and he will be sure to inform of the inner workings of the modern high school as I have over the past year. Soon, your future correspondent will finally be revealed — but for now I leave you with one last hint: he has always been a wrestling fan and now even plays the sport himself. And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Goodbye!

Lauren Mack is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital

Save the date. The annual Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital Boston will take place on Friday, July 17 through Sunday, July 19th. The event wills kick-off with a Friday evening reception at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor.

A weekend tournament takes place Saturday and Sunday on private courts throughout Cohasset. Mixed-doubles teams of all configurations (parent/child, spouses, friends) are guaranteed two matches and play within one of three categories: Pros, Intermediate or Social.

To register or to learn about sponsorship opportunities, visit www.cohassettennisbenefit.org.

Register your tennis team before June 15 for $200. After June 15 team donations are $250.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from prior legislative sessions. The roll calls are from recent debate on the House version of an estimated $28 billion fiscal 2010 budget. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

EASIER PRIVATIZATION OF STATE SERVICES (H 4100)

House 17-141, rejected an amendment to the so-called "Pacheco Law" that establishes strict requirements in order for private contractors to provide public services valued at more than $200,000. The amendment would apply the law to contacts worth over $5 million. The requirements include that a state agency compare the cost of using a private company to the cost of the services if the current state employees were to work in the most cost-efficient manner - rather than to the actual current cost. The state auditor also has the final say and can reject a contract that he determines has not met all of the requirements or is "not in the public interest." Amendment supporters said that the requirements are nearly impossible to meet and noted there have only been six very small privatizations contracts awarded since the law passed in 1993. They argued that raising the cap to $5 million would result in more privatization and a savings of up to $20 million. Amendment opponents said that the requirements are fair and argued the Pacheco Law and its strict standards have worked well and have protected working families. They noted that privatization often leads to trouble and that raising the cap would lead to more privatization and the loss of state jobs. (A "Yes" vote is for raising the cap to $5 million to make it easier to privatize. A "No" vote is against raising the cap to $5 million).

RECYCLE UNUSED PRESCRIPTION MEDICATION (H 4100)

House 158-0, approved an amendment requiring nursing homes to return unopened, unused and unexpired prescription drugs to pharmacies. The amendment requires the pharmacies to refund the cost of the medication to the nursing homes and allows the pharmacies to resell it. Amendment supporters said that this program would save nursing homes and the state millions of dollars and ensure that this valuable medication is safely recycled and does not go to waste. They noted that many unused prescriptions are currently carelessly thrown away and end up creating havoc and danger in sewage treatment systems. The House in 2007 defeated the identical proposal on an overwhelming 28-130 roll call. At that time, some amendment opponents said that recycling medicine is simply unsafe and noted that patients and others often mishandle and improperly store the medication. (Both roll calls are listed below. The first is on the 2007 vote. The second is on this year's vote. A "Yes" vote is for the prescription recycling program. A "No" vote is against it).

STOP BUDGET DEBATE UNTIL APRIL REVENUE FIGURES ARE IN (H 4100)

House 21-135, defeated a motion to adjourn the House for four days and stop the budget debate until the state releases its April revenue figures. Amendment supporters said that there is talk of plummeting April tax revenues that would also signal reduced revenues for fiscal year 2010. They argued that the Legislature should consider lowering its estimate of fiscal 2010 tax revenue on which this budget is based and stop adding millions of dollars to the budget. Amendment opponents said that the House should stay on track and finish its work on the budget. They noted that if and when fiscal 2010 revenue estimates are lowered, the House can revise the budget. One day after the House approved a fiscal 2010 budget, Sen. Steven Panagiotakos, chair of the Senate Ways and Means Committee, said that the Senate committee will base its budget on at least $1 billion less than the original $19.53 billion fiscal 2010 estimate upon which the House budget is based. (A "Yes" vote is for adjourning until April revenue figures are announced. A "No" vote is against adjournment).

$12.2 MILLION FOR DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED (H 4100)

House 10-144, rejected an amendment that would provide an additional $12.2 million for the operation of facilities for persons with developmental disabilities. Amendment supporters said this would restore $12.2 million of the $33.4 million that was cut from this funding when compared to last year. They said that it would help protect services for people with developmental disabilities and would prevent the layoff of up to 400 employees. Amendment opponents said that they support an upcoming amendment that would restore $7.5 to this account. They argued that the state cannot afford to add $12.2 million and that the $7.5 million will have to do while money is scarce. (A "Yes" vote is for the additional $12.2 million. A "No" vote is against the additional $12.2 million).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

EDUCATION LEGISLATION - The Education Committee held a hearing on several bills including mandating full-day kindergarten in all public schools (H 361); requiring the Education Department to study the option of creating later starting times for high school class days to begin (S 219) and establishing a pilot program in Lowell, Worcester, Boston, Plymouth and Springfield to provide after school and summer educational services operated by a non-profit organization and staffed by certified teachers and college aged tutors (S 296). The program would focus on urban students who require additional assistance to become academically proficient.

TAX POLLUTION AND USE SAFE CLEANING PRODUCTS - The Public Health Committee held a hearing on legislation imposing a pollution mitigation tax of between .0001 cents and .0002 cents for each pound of air pollutant emitted by any facility (H 2046). The revenue would be used to fund research and education on the health impacts of pollution. The committee's agenda also included legislation prohibiting cleaning products from being used in any school or public building in Massachusetts unless the product is included on the list of safer cleaning products established by the Department of Public Health (S 816). The list would include products that are "environmentally preferable" and do not contain ingredients that the public health commissioner has determined are asthma-causing agents.

Jennifer Aniston to don jewelry

Necklace makes the big time

By Brian P. Nanos
BNANOS@CNC.COM

On May 15, when the film "Management" opens in American theaters, millions of people will be looking at the star, Jennifer Aniston.

Scituate resident Sage Belber, however, might be the only person staring intently at Aniston's neck, as she will be anxious to see her own handiwork on the big screen.

Belber, the owner of Jewelry by Sage, has provided necklaces and earrings for the film, which was written and directed by her brother-in-law, Stephen Belber. On Tuesday, May 12, Sage stood in her Scituate studio — formerly her Scituate one-car garage — and flipped through her catalog while pointing out specific items that Aniston had ordered.

"She ended up with this," Belber said, pointing to a crocheted 14-karat gold necklace. "She liked everything gold."

Originally a painter, Belber said she began making jewelry to have something less expensive to sell at shows.

"I thought maybe I'd make some $10 earrings or something," said Belber, whose husband is Jon Belber of Holly Hill Farm. Belber also recently had a Cohasset shop, Sage Stone Jewelry.

Then, when she was pregnant with her first daughter, the toxins in high-quality paints led her to switch to jewelry permanently. Belber said the switch would last at least, "until I'm done with my mothering time."

Belber works out of the garage, which was converted to a studio in 2003. The workshop is crowded with beads and jewels of all kinds, with a display table in the middle of the room as well as workstations against each of the walls. Sometimes, her daughters use the workshop to make jewelry of their own, with less-expensive beads that she has ordered for that purpose.

Belber said, in part because she studied painting in college, that she feels less pressure when creating jewelry, even though it is now a source of income. Her works, she said, are often inspired by things she sees in Scituate.

"If I go on Peggotty Beach and the sky is blue, blue and the sand is gold, I might make a necklace that reminds me of that," she said.

According to Belber, the artistic process, at least as far as the jewelry is concerned, is less complicated than some may think.

"One idea pops into my head, and I make it, then the next one, then the next one," she said. "People ask, 'How do you get your ideas?' I don't think about it, I just do it."

The jewelry also gives Belber more leeway to make items of different prices.

"I make what I like," she said. "It could be a $15 pair of earrings or a $1,500 pair of earrings."

That flexibility, in turn, widens her audience.

"If you think of the number of people who wear jewelry as opposed to the number of people who buy paintings, it's a much larger crowd," she said.

Belber said providing jewelry for Aniston to wear in the movie was an eye-opening tutorial on the workings of Hollywood.

Sage Belber holds up a necklace she created in her studio in Scituate.

"It was funny. I kept getting e-mails and phone calls, 'She's in the room,' 'She's trying it on,' 'She likes them."
Sage Belber, on Jennifer Aniston trying on her jewelry

Knowing that her brother-in-law was making the film, Belber offered her items. Then, after a long waiting period, the message came — she had to get the jewelry to the set by the next day.

"They wanted almost everything I had, tomorrow, in this really remote area of Oregon," she said. "I was, 'This is Scituate, not Hollywood.'"

After Belber had sent the jewelry to where the movie was being filmed, Aniston herself wanted to buy some pieces, but only if they could get to her while she was still on the set — the next day.

"It was funny," Belber said. "I kept getting e-mails and phone calls, 'She's in the room,' 'She's trying it on,' 'She likes them."

Now that the warm weather has come, Belber's work will be available at the Copley Square Farmers' Market starting May 19 and the Cohasset Farmers' Market starting June 11. Locally, she sells jewelry year-round at Octavia's in Duxbury and the Clothesline in Scituate. She donates 5 percent of her earnings to the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, where her husband Jon works as education director.

Sage Belber was trained as a painter, but took up making jewelry to have something less expensive to sell at shows.

Understanding Cohasset's unique eco-system

By Ellie Tedeschi
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For many years high levels of bacteria in and around Cohasset Harbor have caused concern among town officials and residents alike. Since 2005 Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) has been tracking Enterococcus bacteria levels at local beaches and recreational areas. Last summer, however, was the first time anyone locally had ever thoroughly investigated a potential source of these Enterococcus. With the support of their advisors, Jack Buckley and Ann Thomae, Cohasset High seniors Jean Thomae and August Oddleifson solved more of the bacteria mystery than anyone before them. On May 26, Thomae and Oddleifson will share their findings at the CSCR summer kick-off event. The event will take place at 7 p.m. in the Light Keeper's Residence, Government Island.

Jean Thomae and August Oddleifson presented their research proposal to the Marjot Foundation in 2008.

Thomae and Oddleifson's research has benefited the town of Cohasset and local areas tremendously. "It is a very important piece of the bacteria puzzle," says CSCR founding director Jack Buckley. Last summer their aim was to determine the levels of Enterococcus in Cohasset Harbor's biofilm, a film of organic matter containing bacteria, and assess their relation to the Wastewater Treatment Plant. With a grant from the Marjot Foundation, the students bought advanced equipment for CSCR that will help the association with research studies for years to come. Using the lab at CSCR the two seniors developed and tested their hypothesis, namely that Enterococcus levels would likely be greater in samples taken close to Cohasset's Wastewater Treatment Plant. The two believed that the plant's nitrogen rich outflow caused the high bacteria levels.

"We set up three sights in Cohasset Harbor, two close to each other by the Water Treatment pipe and one over by the Yacht Club" says Thomae. The students completed three separate trials and took thirteen different readings over the course of the summer from the three sites. Although in the end they could not prove their hypothesis, they discovered some very beneficial information about the relationship between rainfall and Enterococcus levels in the harbor. Thomae and Oddleifson will give a presentation and slide show on their research at the May 26th event.

CSCR will continue to build upon Thomae' and Oddleifson's research to better understand Cohasset's unique eco-system. What started as a non-profit organization dedicated to educating students in the environmental sciences has since become so much more. The work done there is invaluable for it enables us to recognize the health concerns of the harbor and to help minimize future pollutants. We are fortunate to have such a terrific organization and so many dedicated volunteers who care about the environment and our community.

For more information about this release contact Jack Buckley at CSCR 781-383 0129).

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

This year also featured a new twist: a 12-minute video highlighting the Deer Hill art project Hats for Rosie's Place.

Deer Hill recently hosted its biggest art event of the year: Deer Hill Favorites Night. Presented like a real art show, Favorites Night has been going on since 1992, when art teacher Ms. Ann Berman first arrived at Deer Hill School. Students from all grades pick their favorite piece of artwork from the year so far to be included n the show. Mr. Berman's husband, Jeff Williams, a pianist by profession, played jazz music throughout the event.

Works from the many different art projects at Deer Hill this year were hung along the main hallway of the school. Each grade has been working on different art projects over the year. The third grade class did a still-life study of flowers in a vase. The fourth grade class has done landscapes, drawings of their hands, still-life desserts (pies, cake, ice cream), and practiced shading techniques to give pictures a 3-D feel. The fifth grade has done block prints and a "bone study." They modeled their drawings off of a human skeleton in the art room, than focused on value, using charcoal and white chalk. This was a study of how bones work and how to make drawings look more lifelike. Self-portraits and ceramics were also very popular. Another original project was packing tape dolls. Ms. Berman organized the students to bring in baby dolls, which they wrapped in layers of packing tape. When the dolls were done, Ms. Berman brought in old baby clothes, which they dressed the dolls in. They were displayed on Favorites Night suspended from the ceiling of the hallway.

True to tradition, the "clay tile" project was unveiled. Fifth grade students leaving Deer Hill will make a 3-D clay tile of their best memory of Deer Hill School. All the tiles are arranged on a board and put up in the main hallway of the school for everyone to see. Students from years ago often come back to find their tiles.

This year also featured a new twist: a 12-minute video highlighting the Deer Hill art project Hats for Rosie's Place. Ms. Berman also started this when she arrived at Deer Hill. She teaches the students how to knit hats and they donate them to a Rosie's homeless shelter. The film was of the students knitting hats and had some short interviews of students and parents were included throughout the film. It was wonderful to see the student's generosity and Ms. Berman's hard work displayed on their biggest art night.

The whole favorites event was a huge success. The students' art was very original and fun to see. The event was mostly run by the students, who chose the artwork and some of the fifth grade students manned the tables. As Ms. Berman said, "I have children choose their favorites, I have no say in it. It's their show. That's what they show the world." They certainly did.

Kathryn Hillman of Cohasset is a junior at Notre Dame Academy.

Bikes Not Bombs collection under way

The Old Ship Church Youth Group is sponsoring a bicycle collection this month along with Bikes Not Bombs of Jamaica Plain. If you have some old bikes hanging around your garages or barns that you are no longer using, please bring them to the Parish House at 107 Main St., Hingham on Saturday May 23rd from 10 am until 2 pm where a representative from Bikes Not Bombs will be waiting to collect them.

The mission of Bikes Not Bombs (www.bikesnotbombs.org) is to provide community-based education and assist with development projects using recycled bicycles, related technologies and technical assistance, as concrete alternatives to the militarism, over-consumption and inequality that breed war and environmental destruction. BNB is part of a worldwide movement for peace and responsible stewardship of the earth.

Most of the bikes collected through drives like this one will be shipped to developing countries for use in youth training programs, sustainable technology projects, and micro-enterprise bike businesses. Some bikes stay at the center in JP for the Earn-A-Bike program where teenagers learn bike mechanics in Vocational Training programs. So, you get to clean out your garage and many people near and far benefit. $5 donation suggested to help cover the cost of transportation. Please, no tricycles or other small bikes.

World War II lecture next week

The Cohasset Historical Society will present the last of it's spring Wednesday night lecture series on May 20, 2009 with a program entitled "World War II; An American Perspective" with guest speaker Michael Vannata, Ed. D.

Dr. Vannata spent 20 years as a Naval Aviator retiring with the rank of Commander. He also taught for 10 years at the University of Phoenix, Eastern Nazarene College and Fisher College. The presentation will address the causes leading up the war, the major battles and the men who provided leadership during the war effort. Dr. Vannata will also talk about the war's lasting influence on life today. This program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Historical Society Headquarters at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. There is no charge for the program, and light refreshment will be served. All are welcome to attend.

Yoga is not just child's play …it's good for their health too

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Combining the physical aspects and benefits of yoga along with the spiritual attributes of the practice is a way to offer kids a solid foundation on which to build their life.

On a recent Sunday afternoon the meeting room in the children's section of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library was filled with the sounds of some of Cohasset's youngest residents ribeting and hooting. It was not part of a drama class as a passerby may have thought…it was a yoga class full of kids doing "frog" and "owl" pose — a free class taught by Kathy Dunn of Balance Studio as part of a Health and Beauty Fair.

Kellie Lynch, owner of Balance Studio, wants to introduce the next generation to the benefits of yoga.

"Yoga is more than the poses and the "oms." It's about the connection, or union, between the body and the mind," says Lynch. "Through the practice of yoga children can build a foundation of being self assured, clear-thinking, responsible people in the world."

The word Yoga means "Union." Performing different yoga postures that require mental and physical energy brings the physical body into balance with the spiritual mind. Yoga helps create mind-body health and also strengthens and deepens the flexibility of the body. It creates self-esteem and fosters the imagination. In this new age children have become more sedentary and for many, the BMI index (Body Mass Index) is out of control. Yoga is the perfect all around activity. Children can carry what they learn throughout their life.

A children's yoga practice draws many analogies from nature and a child's imagination. It is a fun, healthy way for children to move their body and stay active. It helps to improve their posture, refine fine motor coordination and develop their balance. It can even help them sleep more soundly…something a lot of parents can truly appreciate

In addition to the natural health benefits of children practicing yoga, the spiritual benefits are many fold. Among those things children learn when practicing yoga are the Yamas and Niyamas. The Yamas include values like; living in peace, telling the truth, not taking things that aren't yours, mastering your urges and teaching us how to manage stress. The Niyamas relate more to healthy living habits such as cleanliness, self discipline, contentment and self study…the discovery of who we really are. In the class at the library, Dunn explained to the kids that there is no right or wrong way to do yoga.

"You always do your own practice and you do your best," said Dunn to her aspiring yogis. "You want to be healthy in your mind, your body and your spirit."

She then asked them to think of one thing in their lives that they feel lucky about…and to whisper the words "thank you." They were also asked to think about one thing that makes them happy, and to say "thank you" for that too.

Combining the physical aspects and benefits of yoga along with the spiritual attributes of the practice is a way to offer kids a solid foundation on which to build their life. It can compliment all the other things they do. No matter how overwhelming their little life gets, they can always fall back into bah-LAHS-anna (child's pose) to rest and rejuvenate as they get ready to take on the world.

Balance Studio in Cohasset Village offers different classes geared to three different age groups: ages 6-9: pre-teen or tween class for kids ages 11-14; and a High School age class for teenagers ages 14 and older. For more information on children's yoga classes visit www.balancestudio.com Namaste.

Flu fluke at the Middle-High School

"What it comes down to is the same old thing – wash your hands, wash your hands, wash your hands,."
— Judy Collins , school nurse

On Tuesday night, Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini informed parents through a school-wide "Connect-Ed" message that a student at the middle-high school had the flu. At the time of the message it was unconfirmed whether it was the swine flu (H1N1 influenza).

On Thursday morning, middle-high school nurse Judy Collins said the student not only did not have the swine flu, the student didn't even have the flu.

"It was mis-diagnosed," she said.

Overall, Collins said the students at the middle-high school were healthy. There had been a few cases of the regular, seasonal flu, but nothing out of the ordinary.

"What it comes down to is the same old thing – wash your hands, wash your hands, wash your hands," Collins said.

The Department of Public Health recently updated their guidelines and encouraged schools not to close schools, instead recommending a policy focused on keeping all students with symptoms of influenza out of school during their period of illness and recuperation, when they are potentially infectious to others.

Earlier this week the DPH confirmed 8 additional H1N1 influenza (swine flu) cases in Massachusetts. This brings the confirmed case count in Massachusetts to 115. Two of the newly confirmed cases were hospitalized but have been discharged. Each of the new cases is expected to fully recover.

Because there is no vaccine for H1N1 influenza, public health officials remind all Massachusetts residents to continue taking simple steps to keep themselves and others healthy.

Wash your hands frequently with soap and warm water or use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer.

§ Cover your cough with a tissue or cough into your inner elbow and not into your hands.

§ If you are sick stay home from work and if your child is sick keep them home from school.

§ Stay informed about the latest developments on the H1N1 flu.

For more information on H1N1 flu (swine flu) please visit www.mass.gov/dph.

Lady Skippers take chances at MIAA Individuals

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset girls tennis team continued to make a run for a South Shore League title with a 5-0 win over Carver on Tuesday afternoon in Cohasset.

The win improved Cohasset's record to 10-3, with a 9-0 mark in league play.

Maddie Altholtz was a 6-0, 6-0 winner in the first singles spot, while Danielle Sookiasian took a 6-0, 6-1 in the second singles position.

Jean Thomae won 6-0, 6-2 in third singles.

In doubles action, Lauren Allen and Tina D'Antonio won their first doubles match 6-1, 6-0. Maggie McGoldrick and Kate O'Callaghan were 6-2, 6-1 victors.

Girls' Tennis

The win came on the heels of the opening weekend of the MIAA Individual Girls Tennis Tournament in Hingham over the weekend.

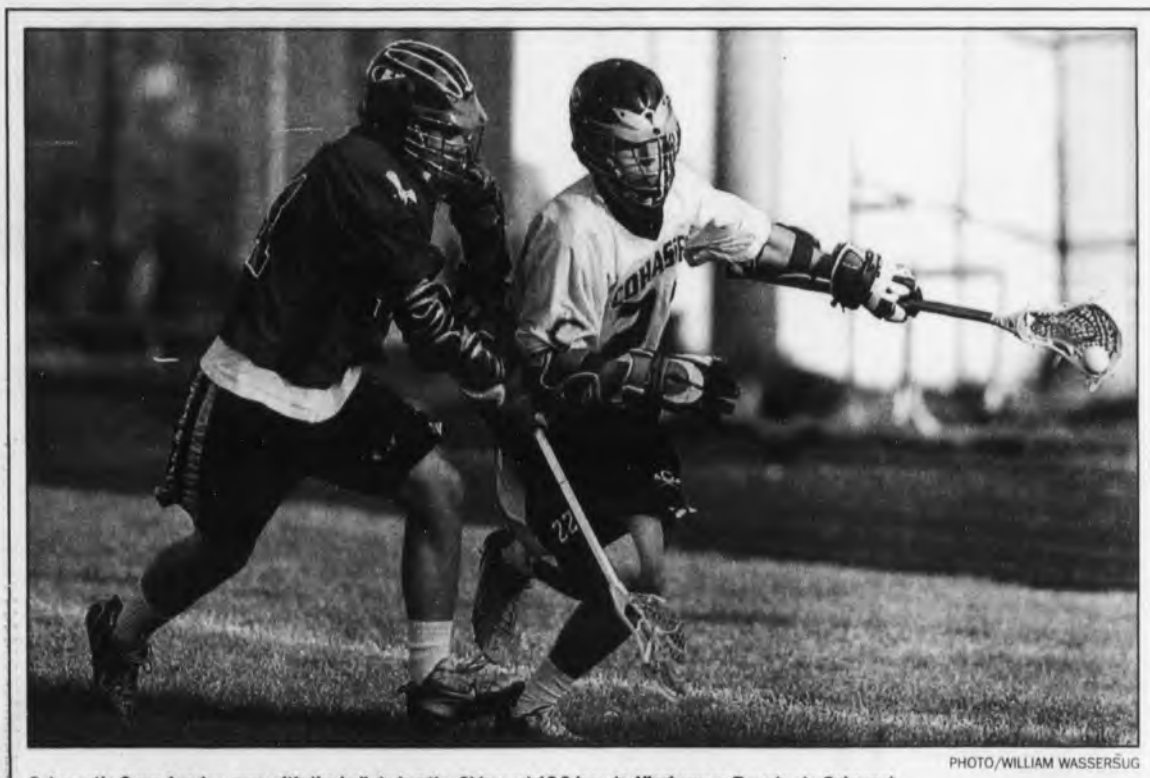
While nobody made it to next weekend's round, Cohasset players fared well.

"The weekend was great," Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan said. "Maddie made it to the third round. She was seeded 10th. She lost to the girl who was the seventh seed. She did a great job."

Allen won her first round match over a player from North Attleboro before bowing out.

Meehan said Colby Smalzel showed something.

"Colby played a great match against a girl who's going to play Division 1 college tennis," she said. "I was very happy."



In doubles action, Thomae and Sookiasian made it into the third round before meeting Scituate's Shelagh Joyce and Brittney Cangemi, who went all the way over the weekend.

Laxers prepare for tourney

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

While the Cohasset boys lacrosse team lost a showdown against Hingham on Tuesday night, coach Stew Curran has no complaints.

Part of the reason for that is the wins that came before, during a 2-1 week.

One of those victories was a 14-13 overtime win over Barnstable, one of the top teams in the state.

There was also a win over Hanover.

Barnstable was a good win down there," Curran said. "The weather was (lousy) and we got down a couple of goals. After we were down we took the ball away from them and tied it. Then Vin (Curran) won it in overtime."

In the Hingham loss, Cohasset jumped to an early 2-0 lead on a Dean Driscoll before Hingham's Jake Quinn closed the gap with a goal that made it 2-1.

Boys' Lacrosse

Will Wise made it 3-1 for Cohasset, but Cohasset wasn't able to pile on. The score was only 5-4 at the half.

That's when things started to go wrong for the hosts.

"We had a really good first half, but we didn't play well in the third period," Curran said. "Hingham is a very solid team. They did a good job."

Wise scored four goals and Thomas Flibotte chipped in three for the Skippers.

Curran said Hingham gave

Tennis team gets a shot at league crown

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys tennis team is headed to the next level.

The Skippers qualified for the MIAA Tournament with easy wins over Carver, Mashpee and Harwich over the past week.

"We were 5-0 in every one of them," Cohasset senior captain Ivan Sceery said. "I think it's been about 150 games to 50."

In the team's most recent action against Harwich, Victor Hartmann, Will Choi and Robbie Hill all played very well.

That same group was also in action in the MIAA Individual Tournament in Wellesley over the weekend.

Boys' Tennis

Hartmann won his first tournament match before falling 7-5, 7-5.

Choi had a strong showing in a 6-0, 6-4 loss to Braintree No. 1 singles player David Ng.

Hill dropped a 6-0, 6-2 decision to Aaron Revzin.

To Skipper coach Brian Hill, the tournament came at a good time – just before the team was scheduled to play Norwell for a share of the South Shore League championship.

Norwell, which has won the title for 15 straight seasons, handed Cohasset its only league loss of the year. The Skippers are 10-3 overall, 7-1 in league play.

"The tournament helped get them into the right mental frame to prepare for the showdown on Monday," Hill said.

Robbie Hill enjoyed the experience.

"It was a great challenge," he said. "And it was a lot of fun. The competition was unbelievable. It was great being able to watch and play some of the best players in the state."

Robbie said his goal was to give his best.

"I played as hard as I could," he said. "This year it wasn't enough. Some kids are just born to play."

Still, he's fired up for Norwell.

"We're all really excited for Monday," he said. "We're all hoping we can pull off a win at

"They beat a team from Oliver Ames and a team from Notre Dame before falling gracefully," Meehan said. "That doubles team from Scituate is good. I hope they win it all. They're really positive on the court. It was a great match."

Cangemi had praise for Cohasset.

"They're good competition," Cangemi said after Scituate's match just down the road, Tuesday afternoon. "We always have fun when we play them. They're always fair and they play good tennis."

Margeaux Donze and Jenny Magruder played well in a first round loss to Duxbury.

Meehan said the individual aspect of the tournament was a fun change for her charges.

"It's good to showcase individuals," she said. "The individuals aren't as important with a team like ours. We have a strong team. For some girls they don't have the team, so it is bigger."

Cohasset's players will have another chance to shine in the postseason.

Their ten victories qualify the team for the MIAA team tournament

Meehan said one aspect of the sport is social.

"The girls stayed and cheered with each other," she said. "We were sitting with some Hingham parents. Everyone competes, but are friendly."

For the big picture, Meehan is optimistic.

"I feel unbelievably good about us," she said.

home. I like our chances. They're tough, but beatable."

Sceery agrees.

"We'll have to be strong against Norwell," he said. "If we beat them we get a share of the league. There's no reason we can't beat them."

One factor on Monday might be health.

Mike Filbey has been hurt the past few meets.

"Mike's been out with a foot injury the last three matches," Sceery said. "We'll be looking for him on Monday. He almost won the last time."

With Filbey out, there has been a bit of juggling in the lineup.

Sceery has been playing with Travers Craven and Luke Brewer has seen some playing time.

"Luke came in and won all his matches," Sceery said. "He won two in a row in third singles and another at second doubles."

Sceery said the team heard an early season prediction.

"Mr. (Paul) Carrol was our coach last year," he said. "He passed away mid-season. He said he thought we'd go 12-4 this year. Right now we're 10-3."

With Norwell and Scituate still on the schedule, 12-4 would be fine, 13-3 even better.

"We're preparing to go into the tournament," he said. "I think we'll do well. If we can beat Norwell and Scituate that would be great. We're a different team now than we were when we played Scituate. I think we can beat them."

Girls Youth Lacrosse recaps for Sunday May 10

The U15 Blue team was on the road again on Mother's Day at Scituate and fell behind early on a couple of quick scores. Hope Kissick would get the offense rolling as she rifled one home after a nice feed from Katie McKenna. Cohasset would continue the surge as Maddie Curley, Lexa Grasz, McKenna and Kissick scored and the team took a 5-4 advantage into the half. Nicole Farren and Mackenzie Axelson each made strong passes and picked up assists on the goals. Goalie Molly Fitzgerald turned away five shots, including a nice catch on a free position shot.

Cohasset would dominate the second half as they shut down the Scituate attack and had excellent ball control and passing on offense. Micaela Durkin and Christina Tedeschi used their blazing speed to stop multiple Scituate fast breaks and newcomer Katherine Naughton scooped several ground balls and transitioned the ball to the Cohasset attack. Fitzgerald would return to her regular defensive position and harassed the Scituate offense into several turnovers. Farren took over in the cage and made three strong stops.

Scituate had one final surge in the closing minutes but the Blue team would finish strong on goals from McKenna (3 g, 3 a), Kissick (5g, 2a), Curley (2g, 2a) and Grasz (2g, 2a) to make the final score 12-7.

The U15 White Team was buffeted by raging winds and a blustery Scituate team in the early going. Scituate came out winning draws and launching well coordinated offensive ball movements for 6 goals in the first half. The opposition also presented a stifling defense and a talented goalie that kept Cohasset off balance until the break, forcing many turnovers and saving several shots on goal. Mikayla McGrath assisted Kristin Alexander and Kathryn Dunn for one goal apiece to end the half with Scituate leading 6-2.

After the break, Cohasset charged out with Kate Bodner (2 goals on the day) winning several draws, setting up a feed to Alexander (2 goals on the day) for a goal, and blasting two more home herself, to bring Cohasset within 1. Dunn logged her second goal of the day on a surgically placed penalty shot to tie the game. The White team defense kicked it up with several key ground ball wins by Victoria Bryan, interceptions by Abby Carrier and Caroline Evans, controlled clears by Emily Robbins and Caitlin Mavilia, and 6 fine saves by Olivia Blackburn. Running hard at middie, playing tight defense, and helping set up a settled offense in the second half, were Carrier, Maria Buckley, Anna McCarthy, Maggie Ernst, Alexander, Bodner, Isabelle Dunne, Isabella Flibotte and Maggie Littlejohn.

In the fourth quarter, attack Sydney Blanchard, taking a pass behind the crease under a settled offense, dodged defenders to claim open space in front to fire home the go-ahead goal on a hard bounce shot. Buckley then placed another winner on a shooting space penalty shot. Scituate tallied another before McGrath put the game away with another score to finish off a remarkable comeback win by Cohasset. The final score was 9-7.

The U13 Cohasset White team did a stupendous job against Scituate. The team came together to 'show their stuff in an 8-5 defeat on the turf field in Scituate.

In the first half, the game started strong when Sophie Wolfe, normally a Goalie, scored. Other goal scorers were the ever consistent Erin Driscoll, Madigan and Callahan O'Neill (watch out for the sister team!) Dagmar Seppala, Haley Marshall, and Madison Hagearty. Attempts on goal were made by Christine Guinee, Isabel McCarthy, Grace McMeekin, and Bennett Tierney. And, even with a four point lead, Adaline Nuesse, Lily McCarthy, and Caelin McDonald continued to fight end to end.

Despite the fact that Scituate woke up in the second half and made several goals, Goaltender Taylor Frederick thwarted numerous attempts and all of the defense played strongly. Bridget Condon continued to psyche out breakaway runners. Meredith Corry and Cassandra Lieberman did a great job of digging out ground balls. Megan Fitzgerald took the lead in picking off Scituate balls and turning the play. And, Middie Molly Cunning had several strong plays where she would emerge from a swarm of Scituate girls and transition the ball to a teammate mid-field.

On Sunday, the U11 Girls White team came away with a tough, hard fought 2-1 victory over Scituate at the Deer Hill School. The win improved the teams record to 5-0 on the season. The girls received strong defensive play from Ellie Jackish as she was able to pounce on multiple ground balls in the Cohasset defensive zone and take the ball the other way. The offense scored both of their goals in the first half by utilizing great ball movement and quick hard shots. Emma Humphrey tallied the first goal of the game after an outstanding fake to catch the goalie off guard. Elle Hansen was credited with an assist. Olivia Gomez beat the goalie with a low shot to make the game 2-0. Julia Hertzfelder helped set up the second goal with a pretty give and go. Lauren Cunning did her part to keep Scituate off the board in the first half with some quick stick work to give the ball back to the home team. The second half was full of opportunities for both teams as crisp passes led to shooting opportunities for both sides. Humphrey had a shot that hit the post early in the half and Marcella Flibotte also kept the pressure on the visitors with a couple of quality shots. Scituate cut the Cohasset to 2-1 mid way through the half but would not get another shot on goal the rest of the game due to great play by Madeline Schwandt, Margot Robbins and Abby McGrath.

The U11 Girl's Blue squad captured their fifth straight win of the season. Playing full field on the Scituate turf, the Blue team controlled the game's tempo and remains undefeated. The score was 5-2 with Scituate's goals both coming from 'free position' penalty shot situations. Katie McKeon and Maggie O'Donnell split duty in the net for us. Erin McElhinney played tough defense. Lili Astino and Olivia Coveney were hustling end to end. Kaitlin McGovern put us on the board first with an assist from Niki Federle. Alex Martini scored our next two goals with assists again from Niki and from Olivia Sanderson. Kara Nelson stuck our last two goals with assists from Kendall McConnaghey and Lilly Patsos. Overall we ran the field well, used long passes to transition the ball, and spread out offense around the goal. Well done. Let's keep our momentum going.

Cohasset's Stone wins NESCAC honors

Middelbury College tennis ace, Elizabeth Stone of Cohasset, has earned NESCAC post-season honors.

Elizabeth, a senior, earned second team honors in singles and doubles. She earned a spot on the second team, playing at No. 3 singles for most of the spring with a 13-5 mark. In doubles play, Elizabeth and her doubles partner, Chandra Kurien, were named to the second team. The duo has a 7-9 record and is ranked fifth in the Northeast.

Elizabeth is a 2005 graduate of Cohasset High School.

Hockey players from the towns of Scituate and Cohasset recently joined forces to compete in the Town Cup Hockey Tournament, which featured some of the best players from over 20 area towns. Congratulations to the combined Scituate/Cohasset team, who won the tournament championship at the Squirt Level. Representing Scituate and Cohasset on the team were: Tommy Marhoffer, Dylan Brady, Will Englander, Jack Nisbet, Evan Delano, Cam Francis, Ryan Harrigan, Conor Joslin, Ian Murphy, Ryan Campbell, Alden McHugh, Ben Rice Adam Guard, and Michael McKelvey.

Cohasset girls edge Harwich

With its back to the wall, the Cohasset High School softball team showed what being a South Shore League power is all about.

The Skippers scored twice in the sixth and again in the seventh to defeat league rival Harwich, 4-3, on Tuesday.

"It was a great game," said coach Rob Spofford, whose team improved to 14-2, 7-2 in the league. "We're swinging the bats well now. Everybody's hitting, it's not just one or two (people)."

Those bats struggled early against Rough Riders starter Nell O'Connor, who allowed one run through five innings.

But in the sixth, Cohasset struck. Carly Salerno drilled her second RBI double, bringing in Meredith Kelly, and Brittany Dunn followed up with a two-out double off the fence to bring in Salerno and tie the game.

O'Connor got herself into trouble in the seventh. Freshmen Kayla Orner and Hayley Wheelwright drew walks, and senior Kristin Monaco singled down the third-base line to score pinch runner Letra Kimla and end the game.

"She did everything she could do," Spofford said of the Harwich pitcher. "It was a great pitching duel. She had a tough sixth and seventh. We got to her. Once we see a pitcher two or three times through, we bear down."

The rally gave Kelly Naegelin the victory. The junior went the distance, fanned six and allowed eight hits.

"It was a great game. It was a great pitching duel, and it turned out as advertised," Spofford said. "We're not taking anything for granted. We'll see Harwich again. We just were a little bit better today."

Laxers prepare for tourney

FROM TOURNEY, PAGE 19

Flibotte a lot of attention.

"Thomas works so hard," Curran said. "He is an offensive talent at midfield. But the way he plays, he can wear down a little. Yesterday Hingham focused on him a lot. He still broke through for three goals."

One problem Cohasset had in the third period of the unusual 6 p.m. start was the sun.

"The sun was right in (goalie) Jack Murphy's eyes," Curran said. "He couldn't even see right in front of himself. That created a big change in the game. The sun was glaring off the water tower. I've never seen it glare like that."

Curran said Hingham also did a good job slowing down attacker Dean Driscoll.

Cohasset (11-6) has already qualified for the MIAA Tournament, so the team is playing for pride and seeding now.

They'll keep working on their team-first style as they prepare.

"A lot of the great teams have two outstanding scorers," Curran said. "Scituate has a pair. Duxbury has a pair. We don't have those two big standouts. We're more balanced. We have a group of pretty good offensive players."

Other players who have been doing well are Dana Valentine, Anderson Lynner, Vin Curran, Flibotte and Jake Kissick.

Curran has been very pleased with his son, Vin.

"Vin has scored some timely goals for us," he said. "He had two in the Hanover game that was won by Andrew DiPaolo. Vin's our second top scorer as a midfielder."

Driscoll leads the team in scoring and Wise is right up there as well.

Upcoming games include Nantucket on Saturday and Abington on Wednesday.

Sailing Club announces signups

The Cohasset Sailing Club is excited to announce its new web site and 2009 season. The revised and expanded web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, has updated details on the club's many features, including the instructional programs beginning with fourth-graders (kids turning 10-years old by Labor Day 2009) and continuing on to teenagers and adults. Application forms can also be downloaded from the site and turned in at the 2009 Registration Weekend, which will take place at the Club on Government Island on Saturday, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Sunday, May 17 from noon to 2 p.m. Applications for membership and all programs, dock slips etc. must be made in person at Registration.

Cohasset/Scituate Legion team hosting tryouts

The Cohasset/Scituate Legion team will be holding tryouts May 17 at 6 p.m. at Cohasset's Milliken Field.

This is the final tryout for anyone interested.

Coach Greg Taylor is back for his second year at the helm.

For more information, contact Taylor at Gregory.Taylor@hingham-mutual.com.

Two U12 boys soccer teams remain undefeated

Two of the Cohasset U12-Boys soccer teams continue with their playoff hopes by remaining undefeated at 6-0, as they compete in the Coastal Youth Soccer League, which includes teams from Plymouth to Hingham.

The Cohasset U12-2 boys team a great group of kids and they are a lot of fun to coach. At times during practice they are a handful, but once the game begins they are all business. They stay focused and communicate with each other on the field. They all know each other's strengths and consequently play up a level as a team. There is not one player on our team that does not contribute in some way. We started the season without a goalie, and Ethan Avotins stepped up and started as our keeper. Since then six players have spent some time in the goal. Our defense has kept the ball away from our goal. Strong play by Cole Joslin, Nick Rosen, and Noah Althuis have helped to keep total goals against the team this season to only five.

Many of the players have contributed to our scoring drive with goals from Sean Mavilia, Ben Moy, Mathias Loft, JD Dietrich and Mike Mckelvey to name a few. We have controlled the center of the field with speed from Charlie DeVries, Ray Tolosko, Lucas Brown and Dan Toomey.

In the short time this team has been together, the Cohasset U12-3 boys have really developed as a team according to the coach. Offensive play by Max Whetstone, Matt Legge, Mitchel Buckley and Ryan Golz have contributed to big wins for the team.

Strong defense from Mark Bodner, Graham Schwandt, and Matt Montefusco have helped to keep shots on goal to a minimum. You can?t forget our keeper. Jack Coffman has been a big part of our D. Thomas Durkin, Eamon Osmanski, Michael Durkin and Dom Sestito have dominated the mid-field.

The two U12 teams are playing in different divisions within the league, but they practice together on Monday and Wednesday afternoons.

Hopefully, both will make the playoffs in June. There is a chance the two teams could face each other in the postseason play.

Canadian Maritimes

Alan R. Earls
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

If the current economy has you dreaming about a spectacular summer vacation but worrying about your budget, the answer may be found in our neighbors to the northeast - Canada's spectacular Maritime provinces.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island all offer cultural diversity, abundant unspoiled natural beauty —including plentiful sea views —and best of all, a lot for your money (in addition to already lower prices for hotels and meals, the exchange rate has tipped back in favor of Americans).

Another plus: Lines, traffic and crowding are the exception in the Maritimes, particularly if you travel prior to July 1 — when Canada Day starts the Canadian school vacation period and the summer season kicks into high gear.

Culturally, all three provinces have much in common with New England, particularly in their early English settlers. Nova Scotia was the "14th" English-speaking colony in North America — the one that stayed loyal to King George. Even today, many monuments to these migrants from the south dot the region, some maintained by a very active association called The United Empire Loyalists.

And the Canadians of the Maritimes have managed to keep alive many of their distinctive immigrant traditions.

French Acadians, descendants of settlers from the 17th and 18th century and culturally distinct from the French-speaking inhabitants of Quebec, are found in communities in all three provinces. Scottish culture is celebrated with particular fervor in Nova Scotia (the province whose Latin name means New Scotland) through a number of large festivals. For example, in July, the village of Pugwash hosts the 58th Gathering of the Clans, an event which includes Highland dancing, parades, Highland pipe bands, musical contests and athletic events such as caber tossing.

In the fall, the Cape Breton region of Nova Scotia, which is perhaps the most Celtic part of the Maritimes — some communities even have signs in Gaelic in homage to the remaining native speakers — caps the season with the Celtic Colours International Festival. The event includes performances by more than 200 musicians, dancers, singers and storytellers at various locations. Cape Breton is also home to the spectacular not-to-be-missed Cabot Trail, with its rugged coastal vistas, considered one of the most scenic drives in the world.

On Prince Edward Island, the city of Summerside hosts the summer-long Celtic Festival at The College of Piping and Celtic Performing Arts of Canada. In New Brunswick, the Miramichi Scottish Festival, in mid-August, includes dancing, piping and a unique Candlelight Tartan Ball.

At any time of the year, chances are, wherever you happen to be in the Maritimes, you'll find a local ceilidh - an informal concert at which musicians gather as much for their own enjoyment as for the bene-

IF YOU go...

FERRY SERVICE: A glance at a map of the Maritimes will show you how they got their name - there is water everywhere. While that water can be a barrier, it can also be a link thanks to a substantial network of ferries. The drive from Boston to New Brunswick is about 350 miles, to Prince Edward Island (via the Confederation Bridge) about 600 miles and to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia (via New Brunswick) about 850 miles. That's why many travelers choose to shave hours or even days from their drive time by taking The CAT - a high-speed ferry - from either Portland (about 5 1/2 hours) or Bar Harbor (about 3 hours), Maine, to Yarmouth. The huge, state-of-the-art vessel can carry a full complement of vehicles and passengers with little sensation of being at sea thanks to its multi-hull design. For details on the seasonal schedule, fares and package deals, you can visit the company Web site at www.catferry.com/.

The same company, Bay Ferries, also runs more traditional ferries across the Bay of Fundy between Saint John, N.B., and Digby, N.S., as well as to Grand Manan Island.

Prince Edward Island is now linked to New Brunswick by the spectacular Confederation Bridge, but a ferry also links the eastern end of the island with Nova Scotia.

Ferries also run from the Cape Breton end of Nova Scotia to Newfoundland and from P.E.I. to the remote and beautiful Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

fit of the audience. These events are full of spontaneity and are a gathering spot for locals and visitors alike. To find them, check with local visitor offices or simply watch for hand-painted signs at many crossroads. The musical fare will likely include a smattering of popular music and American country and western as well as more traditional fare with roots in the culture of the French Acadians or the British Isles.

Of course all the cultural treats on offer shouldn't distract visitors from enjoying what nature has available. New Brunswick and Nova Scotia share the spectacular Bay of Fundy, whose shape and orientation provide it with the world's highest tides up to 40 feet. Those tides have produced spectacular scenery. For instance, on the New Brunswick side, the Hopewell "flower pot" rocks — bedrock eroded into arches and pillars by the waves — are a must-see attraction. Be sure to time your visit to include low tide, when you can walk through a fantastic landscape of sand and sea creatures on the "floor" of the sea.

On the opposite side, make sure your Bay of Fundy experience includes a stop at Nova Scotia's Joggin's Cliff, a Mecca for fossil hunters. Here, sedimentary rocks formed during the Pennsylvanian period of 300 million years ago are constantly falling victim to the sea's relentless assault, leaving a beach scattered with the remains of long extinct plants and animals.

Acadian culture is found in communities in all three provinces.

Both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia also have a number of reversing streams or rivers whose flow to the sea is altered twice a day by the might of the tides. In New Brunswick, you can visit reversing falls in Saint John and the less spectacular but still impressive "tidal bores" found on the Petitcodiac River at Moncton. And you will find reversing waters in Nova Scotia at the Shubenacadie River, the Maccan River, the St. Croix, Herbert and Kennetcook rivers in the Minas Basin, and the Salmon River in Truro.

Prince Edward Island, the storied home of Anne of Green Gables, is a world of its own, with fertile farms, woodlands, golf courses, sandy beaches — and what must be the most amazing complex of walking and biking trails on the planet totaling almost 300 miles. Just to underscore the point, the province has instituted a "Cycle Welcome" program for businesses and municipalities to make the trails and the island even more bike-friendly.

STAYING THERE: The provinces offer accommodations ranging from campgrounds and B&Bs to top-class resorts, and include a variety of inns, hotels and motels.

FOR MORE INFORMATION: The tourism Web sites of Nova Scotia (www.novascotia.com), New Brunswick (www.tourismnewbrunswick.ca) and Prince Edward Island (www.tourismpei.com) offer good information on what to see and where to stay.

IMPORTANT ECONOMIC INFORMATION

During the past few years, low interest rates, war, and an uncertain stock market combined to push prices of gold, silver, and many collectibles to their highest levels in 25 years. We have studied the investment and collectible markets for decades, and in the past during times of economic uncertainty, (which is happening now), there have been dramatic price declines in many areas of the jewelry, coin and collectible markets.

Which is why this may be the best time in decades for you to sell for some of the highest prices ever.

"UP TO" PRICES
IMPORTANT: All prices are based on rarity & condition. If an item is in poor condition, its value will be low. If an item is very rare, and in superb condition, it might be worth more than the "Up To" prices listed. For example, a 1919 10¢ could be worth $1,400 in very high-quality condition, less than $1 in poor condition. In most cases, the "Up To" prices listed in this advertisement are for items of exceptional rarity and quality. Chances are, you will not have those items. But we are willing to take the time to look at your items, just in case, free of charge and give you our opinion.

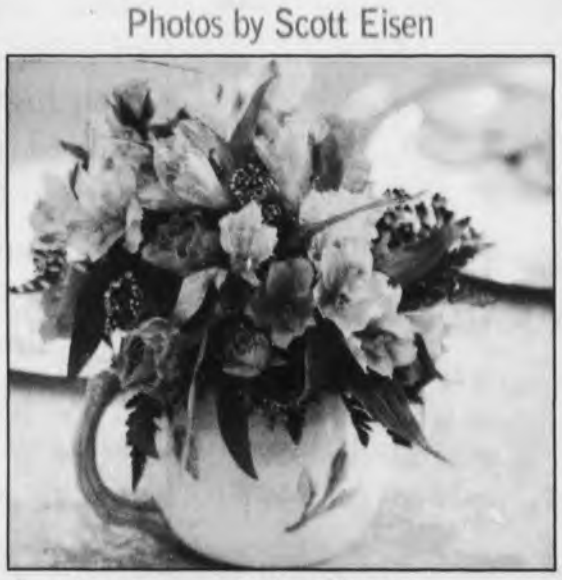
Reilly Nussbaum of Cohasset grabs a chocolate-covered strawberry.

Max Crays of Cohasset watches as he gets a refill on his tea.

Reid Nussbaum of Cohasset enjoys the large selection of treats from the tea party. The South Shore Conservatory in Hingham also serves Cohasset.



Teatime!

With the South Shore Conservatory preschool

Photos by Scott Eisen

Katy Foley of Hingham focuses intensely on stirring her tea.

Spring flower arrangements adorned the tables.

Joey Rubino and Eliza Farley, both from Hingham, walk up to get some food with their teacher Margaret Curtis.

The South Shore Conservatory preschoolers and their guests enjoyed many great homemade snacks including chocolate-covered strawberries last week.

Bryndis Oddleifson and Thetor Nghiem sample some of the delicious treats.

Each student enjoyed his or her tea (apple juice) from his or her own china teacup!

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Krikor O. Baytarian and Peter J. Baytarian, Trustees of Ox Pasture Lane Realty Trust, under a Declaration of Trust dated April 7, 2003, recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 18637, Page 195, to Norwood Cooperative Bank, dated April 9, 2007, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 24694, Page 484, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, there will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described (on the portions of the mortgaged premises being Lots 1 and 2 on Ox Pasture Lane, Cohasset, Massachusetts) on June 4, 2009, commencing at 10:00 A.M., as to Lot 1, and at subsequent times described below, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage, namely,

The land with the buildings thereon located on Beechwood Street and Ox Pasture Lane in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, being shown as Lots 1, 2 and 3, on a plan of land prepared by Murphy Associates, Inc., dated March 6, 2001, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds as Plan No. 440 of 2003 in Plan Book 510. Excepting, however, from Lot 1, so much of that lot as is included within the boundaries of Lot 5 as shown on Plan No. 10 of 2001 recorded in Plan Book 482.

Excepting and excluding from the above described mortgaged premises and not being sold at said auction is Lot 3 on Ox Pasture Lane which was released from the above described mortgage by instrument dated May 16, 2008, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 25788, Page 527.

Lot 1 will be sold separately by public auction on Lot 1 at 10:00 A.M. Lot 2 will be sold separately by public auction on Lot 2 at 10:45 A.M. Lots 1 and 2 will be sold together as one parcel on Lot 2 at 11:15 A.M.. If the highest bid for the sale of Lots 1 and 2 sold together exceeds the sum of the highest bids for the separate sales of Lots 1 and 2, the mortgaged premises shall be sold together and the separate sales of Lots 1 and 2 shall be null and void.

The successful bidder will be required to sign an Auctioneer's Memorandum of Sale and a Statement of Additional Terms at the conclusion of the bidding.

The premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, covenants, outstanding tax titles, municipal or other public taxes, assessment liens or claims in the nature of liens, and existing encumbrances of record created prior to the mortgage, if any there be.

The Purchaser shall be responsible for the cost of Massachusetts documentary stamps to be affixed to the foreclosure deed.

$40,000.00, for the sale of both Lots 1 and 2 together, will be required to be paid in cash (U.S. currency only), certified check, Bank Treasurer's check, or Bank Cashier's check by the Purchaser or Purchasers at the time and place of said sale, the balance within 30 days from the date of sale on the delivery of the deed.

$20,000.00 for the separate sales of Lot 1 and Lot 2 will be required to be paid in cash (U.S. currency only), certified check, Bank Treasurer's check, or Bank Cashier's check by the Purchaser or Purchasers at the time and place of said sale, the balance within 30 days from the date of sale on the delivery of the deed

In case of default by the highest bidder of his obligation to complete the purchase of the premises, the Mortgagee reserves the right to sell the premises to the second highest bidder by execution of the Auctioneer's Memorandum of Sale and Statement of Additional Terms with the second highest bidder for the amount of his bid and closing the sale to the second highest bidder within approximately 60 days from the date of the foreclosure sale.

Other terms if any to be announced at the sale.

Elizabeth O'Brien

Elizabeth "Beth" O'Brien

COHASSET – Elizabeth "Beth" O'Brien, age 48, of Cohasset and Weymouth, died Saturday, May 9, 2009.

Beth was the loving daughter of Richard J. O'Brien, Jr. and Jane L (Leahy) and the devoted sister of Richard and his wife, Deborah of North Kingstown, RI., Kristen Holland and her husband, Paul of Hingham and Carolyn McCann and her husband, Michael of Hingham. Beth is also survived by 8 nieces and nephews and many aunts, uncles and cousins.

Beth was a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and Bridgewater State College. She worked for many years as a sales representative for a sales and marketing firm. She was committed to her faith in the Lord and possessed a powerful moral clarity. She was always gracious and generous and had a smile and greeting everyone she met. Her greatest gifts were caring for children and the elderly. She enjoyed singing, playing and making crafts with her nieces and nephews and spending time with her family and friends. Beth's inspiring and courageous spirit will be missed by all who knew and loved her, especially her family and friends.

A Funeral Mass was celebrated on Wednesday, May 13 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours was on Tuesday, May 12 4-8 p.m. at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony's Church), Cohasset.

The Family would like to make a donation to the new Dana-Farber Yawkey Center with a tile in the Gene Display to commemorate Beth's life. Donations will go to the Dana-Farber Campaign to Conquer Cancer. Donations may be made payable to "Family and Friends of Beth O'Brien" and sent to the Pilgrim Bank, 48 South Main St., Cohasset, MA. 02025. New preschool to at Hingham temple

The Jewish Community Centers of Greater Boston, together with Congregation Sha'ary Shalom of Hingham, are opening the first Jewish Preschool on the South Shore. The center will have a toddler program, which will also be a first for the South Shore. The center will be directed by Myra Perlis.

Perlis has worked as both a toddler and preschool teacher at a temple preschool in Chestnut Hill for the past 15 years. "Working with children is my passion and making a difference in a child's life is my goal. I am excited to be a part of this new preschool. During my tenure at the preschool, I have initiated many programs, worked on NAEYC, accreditation, became a certified children's yoga teacher, and provided professional development programs for our staff. I have enhanced our toddler program by strengthening its curriculum. Through these efforts our toddler program has become very successful. It is this expertise which I hope to bring to the JCC Early Learning Center at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom to make our program a premier school in this area," said Perlis.

The center will offer new classrooms and a state of the art playground. It will offer a varied, developmentally appropriate program that encourages intellectual curiosity, builds self-confidence and respect, and promotes each child's cognitive, spiritual and emotional development. The program is open to non-temple members. The school day will be from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and people may choose from a two-, three- or five-day schedule. Early drop off and extended day options will be offered depending on interest and demand.

For more information, email mperlis@jccgb.org or call 617-817-1610.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
MAY 11, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good week to look at healing bruised feelings and re-establishing weakened relationships. It's also a good week to start new projects and make new job-linked contacts.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Music and art dominate the week, giving the sensual Bovine a lot to appreciate. On the practical side, deal firmly, but fairly, with those who might try to undermine your work efforts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Good feelings continue to flow from your recent efforts to reconnect with family and friends. But be ready to defuse a dispute before it can disrupt all that peace and harmony.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A practical view of a romanticized situation could help to clarify some of its more confusing aspects before you make a decision that could be tough to undo later on.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Pay more attention to what a recent spate of workplace criticism might say about your performance and not what you think it implies about you personally. Some flexibility might be called for.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With new information, and new promises of support (not to mention growing self-confidence), this could be a good time to restart a project you couldn't quite handle before.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Before you decide to close down a problem-loaded project and make a fresh start with someone else, try once more to reach a compromise with your balky partner. He or she might surprise you.

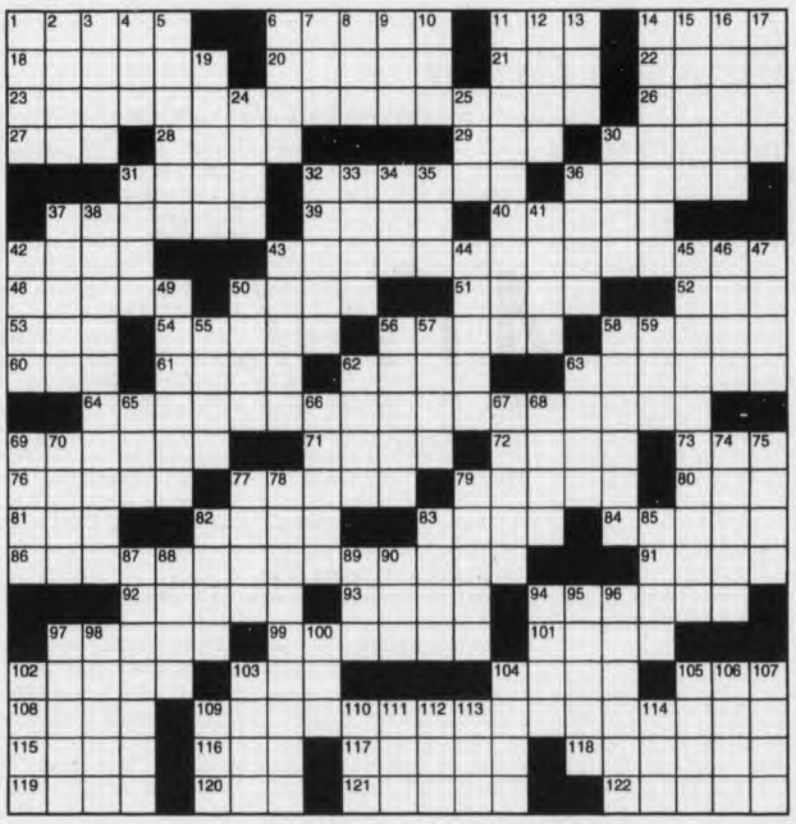
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) While you continue earning points for your sharp negotiating skills, be alert for an attempt to undercut your efforts. You'll need to provide solid facts and figures to stay in the game.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A minor health problem might cause you to ease up on your usually busy schedule. But you'll soon be back in the saddle and ready to pick up the reins and charge ahead.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The adventurous Sea Goat might be eager to take on a new challenge. But before you do, you might want to take some time to check out previously overlooked factors.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A feeling of being overwhelmed by all that you have to do can be eased by setting priorities. Deal with the most urgent and time-sensitive situations first, and then work down the line.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Creating a calm, peaceful place for yourself in the middle of a roiling emotional whirlpool this week starts when you, and no one else, decide how to make decisions about your life.



(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your determination to stick with your principles wins the admiration of everyone who knows you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

TV MAYHEM SET TO MUSIC

'Jerry Springer, The Opera' arrives in Boston

By R. Scott Reedy

Actor Luke Grooms confesses his infidelity to his fiancée, played by Ariana Valdes, in a scene from the SpeakEasy Stage Company production of 'Jerry Springer, The Opera,' running through May 30 at the Boston Center for the Arts. Also shown are East Weymouth native Michael Fennimore, who portrays Jerry Springer, and Dave Christensen as a security guard.

Talk show host Jerry Springer isn't just familiar with controversy; he invites it, and even has bouncers on hand to referee the action. It shouldn't have surprised anyone then that the recent opening of SpeakEasy Stage Company's production of "Jerry Springer – The Opera," the award-winning British musical by Stewart Lee and Richard Thomas, would raise some people's ire with its depiction of everything from Jesus and Satan to a tap-dancing troupe of Ku Klux Klansmen. But the opening day protest in Boston, by a group from an organization calling itself "America Needs Fatima," drew little more than raised eyebrows, especially from the local cast.

"There were maybe 50 or 60 protesters outside the theater the day we began performances. We were videotaping them the whole time while they voiced their objections to our depiction of Jesus. In the play people say things to and about God, and people get all up in arms," explained Michael Fennimore, who plays the title character, by telephone last week. "God doesn't need defending. What people should be defending are the children who are being abused, the homeless, and the disabled.

"There are so many things going on in the world that people can actually do something about. And they are objecting to a play? I don't get it, I really don't. This show is actually very entertaining, especially if people can set aside their preconceptions about the subject matter and just sit back and enjoy."

The subject matter is very similar to what Springer, a former Democratic mayor of Cincinnati, has been using to achieve Nielsen success since 1991.

"The show is a musical comedy, depending, of course, on your sense of humor. The stage show is just like 'The Jerry Springer Show' with all kinds of weird characters having their 15 minutes, or less, of fame. In the second act, they join Jerry in hell, where they blame him for what went wrong in their lives, and ask him to make it right. With the exception of my part, and some other brief dialogue, the show is sung-through, which means that rather than just telling the story, the music is used as a kind of higher art."

The musical ran for nearly two years in London, where it won four 2004 Olivier Awards, including Best New Musical, before touring the UK in 2006. The musical premiered at Carnegie Hall in January 2008, with veteran film actor Dennis Hopper playing Springer.

Director Paul Daigneault found his Springer when Fennimore auditioned for another SpeakEasy play. The 58-year-old East Weymouth actor – whose great uncle, W.C. Robinson, acted in silent movies – was familiar due to his more than 7,000 performances as a Boston Police officer and other characters in the long-running Boston production of "Shear Madness," where he also serves as director.

Fennimore, however, wasn't as aware of Springer or the musical he inspired.

"I knew nothing at all about this show when I was first asked to audition. I was really excited, however, when I was offered the role and, after about 12 hours of total panic, I decided to get down to work. I can't say that I've really ever been a fan or even a regular viewer of 'The Jerry Springer Show,' but I did receive the DVD of 'Jerry Springer – Too Hot for TV' for my 50th birthday, so I knew a little something about the subject."

A graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York and of Bridgewater State College, Fennimore has been with "Shear Madness" since 1986. Prior to that, he was manager of Boston's Bull & Finch Pub and the upstairs Hampshire House Restaurant, immortalized in the long-running NBC-TV sitcom "Cheers." It was Fennimore who showed television producers Glen and Les Charles the rectangular bar, then on the second floor of the Beacon Hill mainstay, which gave the pair the idea for the bar in the center of the room that became the show's centerpiece.

That wasn't Fennimore's only brush with television fame, however, his first going back as far as the 1950s.

"When I was just 5 years old, I auditioned for 'The Perry Como Show' in New York. I was supposed to be in a tap dance number with some other boys and girls around my age, but the other mothers complained that, by being smaller, I would pull attention away from their children, and I didn't end up getting the job," recalls Fennimore, who finally did make a memorable TV appearance several years later.

"I tried out for 'The Dating Game' as a favor to a friend of mine who wanted to get on the show. On the pre-show interview, I explained that when I was 16 I had been in the Civil Air Patrol on Long Island. But when it came time to introduce me it went something like, 'Bachelor number three is an airline pilot who wants to get into politics. He's Michael Fennimore.' That really threw me, and I definitely didn't do my best work on the rest of the show, which ended up airing on January 1, 1972.

"I wasn't too disappointed when I lost, however, because the winner had to spend a weekend in Las Vegas with a file clerk for the LAPD."

The SpeakEasy Stage Company production of "Jerry Springer – The Opera" will be at the Nancy & Edward Roberts Studio Theatre, in the Stanford Calderwood Pavilion at the Boston Center for the Arts, 527 Tremont St. Boston, through May 30. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-933-8600 or go online at BostonTheatreScene.com.

Canton dancer travels the world, stops in Boston, with 'Lord of the Dance'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Aisling Nally hadn't even started kindergarten when she first began taking Irish dance lessons. Even with years of step-dancing classes and triumphs in many local competitions to her credit, however, the Canton native never imagined she would be dancing her way around the world, but that is just what's happened since she joined Michael Flatley's "Lord of the Dance."

COURTESY PHOTO/KEN HOWARD

Aisling Nally (center right) performs a number in the "Lord of the Dance" which will take place at the Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, May 15 to 17.

Aisling Nally caught the Irish dance bug from her mother, Mary (Donahoe) Nally, a native of West Meath, Ireland. Her father, James, hails from County Mayo.

Nally, who has performed in South Africa, Belgium, Taiwan and all over the United States in just the past two years, looks forward to lacing up her step shoes at home in Canton this week when "Lord of the Dance" returns to the Boston Opera House on Friday for a limited engagement.

"I am really excited to be playing Boston, where I actually see shows myself when I'm home," said Nally, 22, from a tour bus last week pulling out of Providence on its way to Greensburg, Pa. "I'll have almost 60 family members and friends in the theatre on Friday night, and almost as many for the Saturday night show. We've played Lowell and Worcester and, of course, Providence, but this is my first Boston visit. I'm thrilled that so many people are coming to see us. It gives me a real adrenaline rush to perform for people I know."

More than 100 million people in 67 countries have experienced the Irish dancing extravaganza since it began touring internationally 11 years ago. Flatley, an American-born World Irish Dance Champion, originated the role of the Lord during the show's debut engagement in Dublin in 1996 and is now its artistic director. Flatley is credited with creating a new wave of Celtic dance mania.

Nally caught the Irish dance bug from her mother, Mary (Donahoe) Nally, a native of West Meath, Ireland. Her father, James, hails from County Mayo.

"My mom has always loved Irish dance, so she signed me up for my first dance class. She also encouraged me to get involved in loads of different sports including soccer, when I was a little girl," said Nally. Nally's sister, Siobhan, was often her dance class companion at the O'Shea-Chaplin Academy of Irish Dance in Melrose. "As I got older, I went full force with dancing. I loved acting in school plays, but dancing was what I always focused on. When I was younger, I just loved competing, but then at about 16 or 17 I realized what I really wanted to do was to be in a show. And the show that I always wanted to do was 'Lord of the Dance.'"

After graduating from Canton High School in 2005, Nally spent two years as a performer in "Emerald Beat" at Busch Gardens in Williamsburg, Va., while always keeping one eye on what she hoped would be her future.

"I love the performance aspect of 'Lord of the Dance.' It makes it so much more than just another traditional Irish dance show. It is a mixture of a great story based on mythical Irish folklore, with wonderful music, great performances and magnificent costumes. As far as Irish dance shows go, this one is it."

Michael Flatley's "Lord of the Dance" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, May 15-17. For tickets and information, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcross America.com.

Barkathon to benefit Scituate Animal Shelter

A walk will take place from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Sunday May 17, at Bare Cove Park in Hingham, to benefit Scituate Animal Shelter. The Barkathon event will begin and end in the parking lot off the Fort Hill Street entrance just past the Fire Museum in Hingham.

To help, people should get one or more sponsors, collect a donation of any amount and bring their dog, real or imagined, to Bare Cove Park. Take one of several trails through the park and meet back in the parking lot for prizes, refreshments and fun.

Companies can help by giving a donation in any amount, making a donation of goods or services that can be given out as prizes during the Barkathon or by helping in the care of the animals at the Animal Shelter. Company information will be posted during the event on their Wall of Fame.

The shelter serves the towns of Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell on an as-needed basis. It is a nonprofit, tax exempt organization dedicated to the welfare of companion animals, whose mission is to rescue abandoned, homeless animals and give them proper care, love and attention. They are a no-kill shelter.

Organizer of the walk is William Hall, a senior at Hingham High School, who is an avid animal lover. His dog, a 4-year-old terrier mix named Princes Leia, was adopted at the shelter, and he has a pet sitting business that he has operated for several years in his spare time. With the help of family and friends, he hopes to make Barkathon 2009 even more successful than it was the last three ears.

Timeframe could be problem

Public hearing set after the scheduled Town Meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When the dust settled at the Planning Board's meeting Wednesday night, a public hearing date for the proposed change to the zoning bylaw had been set.

The only problem?

The Planning Board set the public hearing date for after the scheduled Special Town Meeting.

The Board of Selectmen scheduled Town Meeting for Monday, June 22. The Planning Board scheduled its public hearing for Wednesday, June 24.

By the letter of the law, the Planning Board is within its rights. According to Massachusetts General Law the Planning Board has 65 days from the date they are notified of a proposed zoning bylaw change to hold a public hearing. If they don't hold a public hearing, Town Meeting cannot act on the proposed zoning bylaw amendment.

In a typical town meeting scenario this is not an issue because there is a significant lead-time, but in this case, a Special Town Meeting called by a citizen's petition, the meeting must be held within 45 days of submission to the town.

What started as a simple discussion on when to schedule the public hearing evolved into a discussion on precedent, legalities and procedure, not to mention when each of the planning board members were taking vacation.

The proposed zoning bylaw amendment, put forth by a citizen's petition of 100 signatures, requests Town Meeting to sunset the wind turbine bylaw. The

Honoring the fallen

Healing Field, parade part of observances

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Memorial Day in Cohasset is a time to remember those local heroes who have died for our country and a time for the community to come together.

On Monday morning, rain or shine, hundreds of citizens will gather at Veterans Memorial Park for Cohasset's annual Memorial Day observances.

But, Cohasset's observances really began this past weekend when the third annual "Healing Field" was set up at the intersection of Border and Summer streets across from the harbor on Sunday. The striking patriotic visual of hundreds of waving American flags has become an integral part of Cohasset's observances. The Healing Field is meant to honor all service men and Don't pull plug on LATIN!

Students petition for teacher, program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Latin may be a dead language, but for some students at Cohasset High School Latin is a valued part of both their academic life and the school's curriculum.

Upon hearing news that long-time, beloved Latin teacher Mr. Thomas O'Neil would not be coming back in the fall due to budget constraints — and with him would go the Latin department — a group of students decided to do something.

Earlier this week, they sent a commentary to school administration, the School Committee and Mariner expressing their concerns about the "shifting direction of the curriculum at Cohasset High School." The commentary can be read in its entirety on page 13.

The letter is a direct appeal to the school administration and requests those involved in the decision making process to consider the full repercussions of letting Mr. O'Neil go.

"By losing Mr. O'Neil, the Cohasset School System loses a distinct, defining part of itself," is the concluding sentence of the letter.

The Mariner sat down with three high school seniors, August Oddleifson and Jojo Brophy, who wrote and signed the letter to the editor, and Marcus Barrett, a third year Latin student who plans to major in the classics in college.

Describing Mr. O'Neil as a very unique teacher, the students say he knows "everything about everything" from classic mythology to current events.

"You can pretty much ask him anything and he'll give you a big long answer," Marcus said.

The students said the class is always interesting, yet academically challenging. Students come to the class with differing abilities and strengths, but each is held accountable for the material. Some students take the course as an elective while others take it as their foreign language requirement.

After writing the letter August and Jojo collected 218 signatures of support from the student body.

"For the most part even if (a student) hadn't had him for a teacher, they were willing to sign because they had heard about him from other students," says Jojo. "He's basically a legend."

Through the old-fashioned mail, they sent the letter to the superintendent, the principal and all five members of the school committee. An e-mail copy was sent to the Mariner.

At the crux of the letter and the students' concern is the fact, as the students understand, Latin will only be offered through "virtual high school," a service that provides online course to high school students. Only Latin 1 is offered through virtual high school.

"What are the Latin 2 students going to do?" asked Jojo. This semester the

POLICE BEAT

Alleged speeder gets splashed with coffee

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police spoke to a man, who was walking his dogs along Bancroft Road and had thrown a cup of coffee at a car that he said was speeding.

The victim of the alleged coffee assault went to the police station to report the coffee incident at 7:10 a.m. on Tuesday (May 12).

Police went to the scene and found the dog-walker who confirmed that he had thrown the coffee purposely because he thought the car was going too fast. Police also spoke to the victim about driving slowly in that vicinity and to the dog-walker about not taking matters into his own hands. The two men involved reached an agreement on how to rectify the incident, Chief James Hussey said.

MV crashes

• On Monday (May 11) at 4:16 p.m. a 2004 Honda operated by a Scituate woman, struck a 2000 Chrysler as she tried to pass it, police said. Both cars were headed north on King Street (3A). The driver of the Honda told police that the Chrysler, which was operated by a Weymouth man, had its left directional on as it approached Rose Hill Lane, so she tried to pass on the right but the Chrysler did not turn, resulting in a collision. The man driving the Chrysler denied he had his directional on. The Scituate woman was cited for improper passing. There were no apparent injuries and neither car had to be towed.

• A worker was struck by a 2001 Ford, owned by a Hanover company and operated by a Hull man, at about 9:53 a.m. on Wednesday (May 13) on Elm Street by the housing complex for the elderly. Police said the Ford pickup was backing up and the driver said he had checked his mirrors and did not see the man, who was wearing a safety vest and was knocked to the ground. The worker, who complained of back and neck pain, was transported to the hospital. No citations were issued.

• Police said a1999 Saab sedan, operated by a Scituate woman, turned left at the Beechwood/3A intersection when it was not safe to do so and collided with a 2002 Volkswagen sedan, being driving by a Norwell woman. Police said the Saab was traveling south on Route 3A , approaching the intersection, and the VW was headed north. The operator of the Saab, which turned left at the light, was cited for making an improper turn. As it turned out, she was driving with a revoked registration and will be summonsed to court. Police said there were no apparent injuries and neither car was towed.

OUI charge

A 24-year-old Weymouth woman is facing a drunk driving charge after she was pulled over on East Street just past the tracks and just over the Cohasset line in Hingham. At 1 a.m. on Sunday (May 17) an officer observed a gray sedan going north on North Main Street speeding. Police said the sedan was going 60 mph. The officer pulled behind the Toyota Camry and observed it swerve over the double yellow lines and back and forth. The officer activated the cruiser's lights and stopped the car past the railroad crossing. Further observations and investigations determined the woman was driving under the influence of alcohol. She was arrested and charged with OUI (alcohol). She was cited for speeding and failure to stay within marked lanes.

Vandalism

A Beechwood Street caller reported last week that his mailbox had been destroyed. The call came in at 5:55 a.m. Police said the post had either been pulled out of the ground and the wooden mailbox smashed or a car had hit it. There were no witnesses and police have no suspects. No other mailboxes were reported damaged.

Shoplifting

An elderly man from Hull has been issued a verbal no-trespass order from Stop & Shop after he was spotted shoplifting, police said. When confronted by the manager, he could not produce a receipt and apparently fled when confronted. The supermarket can follow up with a written no-trespass order, police said. The man may have been involved in some prior shoplifting incidents at the store, police said. In this incident, he had taken a bag of potato chips.

Noise complaint

Police responded to a noise complaint at 10:11 p.m. last Tuesday (May 12) at Wheelwright Park that resulted in the arrest of two Scituate teenagers. Police arrived and found cars parked there after hours. The two teens, ages 18 and 19, were in one car that further investigation revealed had eight bottles of beer partially covered by a sweatshirt on the rear floor and raw marijuana leaves and stems on the driver's seat and passenger seat. Police also found various articles used for packaging marijuana. The Scituate K-9 was called to check the car for other drugs but none were found, police said. Both teens were arrested for being minors in possession of alcohol. The 19-year-old was also charged with possession of Class D (marijuana) with intent to distribute, police said.

Richardson Beach

Police will be conducting regular weekend patrols of Richardson Beach (at the end of Whitehead Road) after receiving complaints about kids partying on the Beach at night on the weekends.

Pizza man

A language barrier apparently resulted in the police being contacted about a pizza deliveryman giving a 15-year-old Cohasset teen a hard time after delivering a pizza to her house on Surry Drive last week. Police went to Papa Gino's and waited for the deliveryman to arrive. After speaking to all parties involved, police said no crime was committed. The deliveryman was apparently trying to return the money that the girl intended to give him as a tip, police said.

Glass damaged

A woman had a baseball break her windshield while driving by the Beechwood Ballpark last week. In an unrelated incident, a caller wanted to see an officer about a rear window broken while parked at Milliken Field.

Warrant

A 40-year-old Cohasset man was arrested following a traffic stop for speeding last week after a computer check revealed he was wanted on a warrant for motor vehicle violations, police said. On Thursday (May 14) at about 6:50 a.m., an officer was headed south on Ripley Road when the officer saw a gray Dodge headed in the opposite direction at a high rate of speed. A radar check clocked the Dodge as traveling 49 mph. The officer pulled the car over near 50 Ripley Road. The operator did not have a license in his possession and further investigation revealed that his license (a New Hampshire license) had been suspended. He was arrested on the warrant and also charged with operating after license suspension. He was cited for speeding.

Drifter

A man, whom police heard may be intoxicated, turned out to be a drifter, walking from Plymouth to Hull. A call came in from Tedeschi Plaza at about 8:20 p.m. on Friday. The caller locked the store and left but reported that a man was sitting outside and was unsure why he was there.

Police arrived and determined that he was not under the influence; they gave him a ride to Hull.

Red light

Police responded to a motorist who said a vehicle had cut him off near Stop & Shop then went through the red light, nearly hitting the caller. The motorist was able to provide a license plate and description of the car and driver. Police will try to confirm who was driving and if the motorist is willing to sign an affidavit about the incident, the subject could be mailed a citation.

No trespassing

Police warn that trespassing along the railroad right-of-way will not be tolerated. Offenders will be subject to arrest, Chief Hussey said about the zero-tolerance policy. "The area is well posted and trespassing near the tracks will not be tolerated," he said.

Cohasset assisted Hingham last week in apprehending a woman who was walking along the tracks in that town. Hingham police said the woman had mental health issues and was not arrested.

Building permit inspections to be conducted

Cohasset Assessors' Office staff will conduct building permit inspections for assessment purposes over the next few months as they prepare for certification by the Department of Revenue for fiscal 2010. The staff will be physically inspecting and/or measuring the properties in town that have recent building permits. Digital cameras will be used to produce exterior photos of the buildings for the database.

The Assessors' staff will be able to produce proper identification. If the homeowner or a person older than 18 years of age is not at home on the first call, a notice will be left asking the homeowner to call for an appointment. Property owners are asked to respond to any notices at their earliest convenience to avoid estimated assessments.

Joy Place wants speed bumps

Concerned residents of Joy Place requested in a letter to the Board of Selectmen that speed bumps be placed on the small road.

Joy Place was recently repaved as part of the Little Harbor sewer project. When Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley brought up the letter during the comment period, the board did not seem inclined to support the installation of speed bumps.

Jac McLean of 10 Joy Place said he has talked to many of the residents on his street who share in his concerns. He suggested placing speed bumps along the first part of Joy Place, beginning on the hill right off Main Street and going up the hill down past the cemetery.

"After living on the street for nearly seven years we have watched cars race down our road at such a high speed, and have become more and more fearful for our children and animals," wrote McLean.

McLean stated there are over 15 children under the age of 14 and makes for a high activity area.

"The street is enjoyed by many children playing and riding bicycles, various pets ambling, and neighbors visiting back and forth. Because of the speed offenders, there have been frequent near-misses for pedestrians crossing the street and drivers pulling into and out of their driveways," McLean wrote.

The neighbors are additionally concerned the newly paved roadway will encourage speeding.

Within the last few years the Selectmen authorized the placement of speed bumps on Parker Avenue on a seasonal basis. While the Selectmen have received many requests for speed bumps over the years to deter speeding, they have hesitated believing it would set a precedent.

Parker Avenue was granted the seasonal speed bumps because the road let to a public facility (Mariner's Park, the town dock and boat ramp) was only heavily used in the summer.

As a general rule the fire, police and public works departments are opposed to speed bumps.

POLICE AWARDS

Police officers receive excellence award

Officers Patrick Kenney and Regen Steverman were the recipients of the Excellence Award for their quick actions in responding to a call where a man was seriously injured.

On Nov. 13, 2008 at about 3p.m., the Cohasset Police emergency dispatch center received a 911 call from a construction site where a man had fallen about 20-feet from a ledge and landed on his head.

Officer Kenney, who was working a traffic detail on his day off, heard the call being dispatched, and immediately left his detail and responded to the scene in his own car. Kenney was the first emergency worker to arrive. Officer Steverman, who was working the dayshift in patrol, arrived moments later.

Kenney, who is a long-time emergency medical technician (EMT), quickly evaluated the patient. He found an unconscious 38-year-old male with severe traumatic injuries. At this point, Kenney could not find a pulse and the victim's breathing was labored. Kenney directed Steverman to begin CPR, while he kept the victim's airway open.

The officers continued to administer emergency aid to the victim until the Cohasset Fire Department arrived. The victim was eventually transported to the South Shore Hospital by the Scituate Fire Department ambulance (Cohasset's ambulance was out of town).

Days after the fall the victim's family wrote to the department, "...on behalf of my entire family I would like to thank Police Officer Kenney and Police Officer Steverman for their efforts at the scene. The quick actions and expertise of all involved undoubtedly saved (the victim's) life. We are all very grateful."

Police Chief James Hussey said because of the quick initial actions of Kenney and Steverman, the victim survived several days after the accident.

"This provided the opportunity for the victim to be surrounded by his friends, family, and loved ones when he passed away," said Hussey.

'Disregard for own safety' earns Tarantino award

For his brave actions in arresting a breaking and entering suspect in November, Sergeant Christy Tarantino (right) was the recipient of a police meritorious award. Police Chief James Hussey congratulated Tarantino.

On Nov. 15, 2008 at about 10:50 a.m., Officer Christy Tarantino (who had not yet been promoted to sergeant) responded to a report of a breaking and entering in progress in the area of Cedar Street. The victim gave a description of the suspect who had attempted to climb in her bedroom window. A police search, with the help of K-9 officers from surrounding towns, ensued. Approximately two hours later, Hingham Police K-9 officer gave an emergency distress signal over his radio. Police dispatch also received several 911 calls concerning a police officer in trouble on Fisher Road.

Police Officer Tarantino, along with other Cohasset, Hingham and Hull officers responded to the scene. Officer Tarantino jumped into the fray where a 44-year-old suspect was actively resisting arrest. One of the Hingham officers was yelling the suspect had a knife.

"Officer Tarantino, with total disregard for his own safety, forced his arms between the ground and the suspect's torso, and was able to get a firm grip on the suspect's left wrist, and was able to pry his left arm out from under him thus controlling the suspect's left hand," said Chief James Hussey.

After the suspect was overpowered by the officers and handcuffed, three knives were recovered from him. The suspect was transported to Cohasset Police headquarters and booked on the following charges: breaking and entering, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

"Because Officer Christy Tarantino acted with an extremely high degree of professionalism, proficiency and ability in an extremely critical situation, he is awarded the Cohasset Police Department's Meritorious Service award," said Hussey.

Cogill recognized for 32 years of service

Before retiring in January, Sergeant David Cogill had served on the Cohasset Police Department for 32 years. For his long-standing service to the town, Police Chief James Hussey recognized him at Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting.

Hussey told the story of how welcoming and helpful Cogill was when he first came on as the chief a few years ago.

"(Cogill) is the type of person who said 'anything I can do to help you, I'll do it'" said Hussey. When other officers wanted holidays or days with their families for special events, Hussey said Cogill was the first person to offer to work. In fact, Hussey said Cogill stayed on an extra six to eight months after he was ready to retire because the department was down two people.

Retired Sergeant David Cogill (right) was honored for his more than three decades of service to the community as a police officer. He is pictured with Police Chief James Hussey.

"It's important to take the time out to recognize the work these officers do for the town," said Hussey.

Cogill received a round of applause from the packed Selectmen's office.

Meritorious award for Hunt and Reardon

Police Chief James Hussey presented Detective Garrett Hunt and Police Officer Patrick Reardon the department's Meritorious Service Award Monday night.

During a response to a highly critical situation in September the two officers displayed an extremely high degree of professionalism, proficiency and ability.

On Sept. 19, 2008 shortly before 6p.m., Hunt and Reardon responded to a Cohasset address to check on the well being of an elderly Cohasset resident. The elderly person's son reported that he had been unable to contact his father over the past few hours and feared a second son, who has mental health issues, staying at the family home may have harmed him.

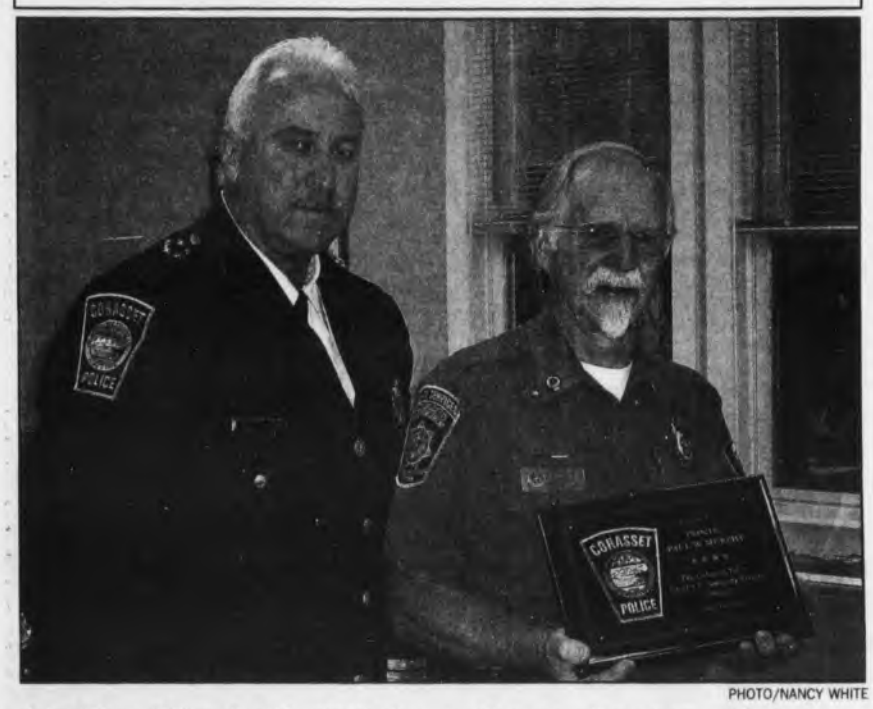
Detective Garrett Hunt and Police Officer Patrick Reardon (center) were awarded the Police Meritorious Award for their response to a highly critical situation in September 2008. The officers are flanked by (from left) Selectman Karen Quigley, Police Chief James Hussey, Selectmen chair Paul Carlson, Selectman Fred Koed and Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

On arrival, a 34-year-old suspect who was pacing back and forth in the front yard confronted the officers. The suspect was 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighed over 250 pounds. He appeared to be in a mental breakdown and his white shoes were covered with what appeared to be blood.

As officers attempted to engage the suspect in conversation and calm him down, the first son who had arrived on the scene after making the initial call to police, entered the home to check on his father. Seconds later, the first son came running from the home screaming for an ambulance. The suspect then began to scream: "they are trying to kill me — I'm being poisoned!" Officers ordered the suspect to his knees. He refused to comply and only became more enraged.



A few seconds later, the officers used pepper spray.

With the suspect secure, officers entered the home to find the suspect had viciously beaten and stomped his 70-year-old father almost to death.

Detective Hunt and Police Officer Reardon then had a short struggle with the suspect while taking him to the ground. Because of the size of the suspect, Hunt and Reardon had to use two sets of handcuffs to secure him.

With the suspect secure, officers entered the home to find the suspect had viciously beaten and stomped his 70-year-old father almost to death. The officers administered emergency first aid until the Cohasset Fire Department arrived. The victim was transported to South Shore Hospital and then to the Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston for emergency surgery.

The victim is still recovering from his injuries at a nursing facility. The suspect is awaiting trial on the following charges: attempted murder, assault and battery on a person over 60 with serious injury, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy (right) received the community service award for his ongoing contributions to the needy both locally and internationally. Murphy is congratulated by Chief James Hussey.

Murphy receives community service award

Animal Control officer Paul Murphy is the 2009 recipient of the Cohasset Police Department's Community Service Award.

"He is always giving back to those people less fortunate," said Police Chief James Hussey.

Over the past five years he has used his vacation time to do community work locally and internationally. With his church, Murphy has traveled to Brazil five times to perform missionary work, providing medical equipment, clothing, medicine and vaccines.

He's gone to the Hopi Indian Reservation in Arizona to repair and renovate schools for the needy and to Rainbow Acres Ranch for handicapped adults in Arizona to repair and renovate homes for the residents.

In the aftermath of three major natural disasters, Murphy had traveled to the location to aid in animal rescue services. He responded to New Orleans following Hurricane Katrina, St. Thomas during hurricane relief and Mount St. Helen's volcano eruption in the early 80s.

Locally, he rings the bell for the Salvation Army around Christmas, volunteers every Thanksgiving and Christmas at local homeless shelters and is a wildlife rehabilitation volunteer for the Humane Society at the Cape Cod Wildlife Center.

"This shows people another side of Paul they may not have realized he brings to the table," said Hussey.

Design Review Board introduced

The recently reconstituted Design Review Board was introduced to Selectmen Monday night. The Design Review Board will act in an advisory capacity to the Planning Board and review applications of commercial buildings or residential structures for two-family or greater.

The board has seven members. Vice Chair Jim Sandell said the board will focus on the aesthetics of the proposed projects, how the building fits into a greater town planning scheme and the appropriateness of the scale to the neighborhood.

"We'll listen to what the developer is proposing and make comments on what we think would best serves the town...we're not trying to reinvent the wheel...our goal is to make good buildings and building that will benefit the town," said Sandell.

Rob Skolnick, 26 Heather Lane, is serving as chairman. Rounding out the committee is John Cavanaro, Margaret Cotter, Marty Nee and associate members Virginia Norman and Can Tiryaki.

The board's first application to review is the proposed 17-unit condominium project at 8 James Lane – a development submitted under the village business district bylaw. In the first two hearing before the Planning Board is has been evident the project is controversial with the neighborhood.

"We thought we would start with an easy one," joked vice chair Jim Sandell.

LIBRARY CORNER

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Great Decisions Discussion Group – The Great Decisions Discussion Group is now meeting every Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. until June 16. Those who have registered for this discussion group may call the reference librarian at 383-1348 for information.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of Maggie O'Farrell's book "The Vanishing Act of Esme Lennox" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, May 27. Call Reference Librarian Gayle Walsh for more details.

Cohasset Library ranks high in activity – Paul Pratt Memorial Library garners high rankings in the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioner's Public Library Per Capita Rankings Report, FY2008. The Library ranks fourth in circulation of library materials among 70 libraries in its population group ((5,000-9,999), and ranks 24th statewide (370 libraries). Attendance levels are also very high, ranked fourth in its population group and 13th statewide.

Aging in Place – A free Aging in Place Seminar will take place at 10:30 a.m., on Wednesday, June 3, at the library. It will bring different professionals in the area together that focus on elder care services. Presenting partners will be reverse mortgage specialist Joseph McParland from Rockland Trust. Also speaking at the event will be attorneys Alison Smith Piasecki and Brian Sullivan, who both specialize in estate planning. John Miller, who owns HomeCare Partners LLC, a business that links those that require extra care at home with a nurse or home health aid, will also speak. Call Heather Weydt at Rockland Trust Co. for more information.

Movie Matinee – Join others for a free movie at the library at 11 a.m., on Friday, June 5. " Around the World in Eighty Days," starring David Niven, Shirley MacLaine and Cantinflas, will be shown. Free admission and free refreshments will be provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

MEMORIAL DAY

Hello Cohasset. I cannot believe it is Memorial Day Weekend, I hope that everyone enjoys the weekend, stays safe and remember and honor all the men and women who have worked so hard to protect and fight for our country. We have a lot of events to write about so here we go.

NEW ARRIVAL

Hey everyone, we have a new baby here in town. Christian Mark Wolpers was born on Friday, April 17th, 2009. He weighed in at 7 pounds, 9 ounces and measured 20-1/2 inches at birth.

Christian joins his big 4-year-old sister, Lauren. Proud parents are Lisa and Mark Wolpers of Cohasset and very proud grandparents are Steve and Barbara Monticone of Hingham.

Congratulations on this wonderful new addition to your family. Christian will have so much fun with you Lauren as he grows; he is so lucky to have a special sister like you.

Christian Mark Wolpers arrived on Friday, April 17th.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

I want to wish a very Happy 14th Birthday to our son, Cody on Sunday, May 24th. I cannot believe he is the youngest and will be headed into 9th grade next year. Happy Birthday, Cody and make sure to have fun.

RED CARPET

Once again, members of the Pre-Prom Committee have organized the very popular Red Carpet festivities for this year's prom-goers at Cohasset Town Hall, rain or shine, On Friday, May 29 starting at 5:15pm. Prom goers will be professionally photographed by Dan Leahy and videotaped by Our Town Producer, Pat Martin. Copies of prom photographs will be given to couples at the post prom and video will be shown on an upcoming episode of Our Town.

The popular roving reporter Rich Ofsthun will emcee this year's event. The town hall parking lot will be closed to prom goers only so attendees are suggested to park on North Main Street or in the town parking lot.

Pat is also currently producing the Class of 2009 Senior Slide Show and asks any parent who has not submitted photos of their senior to do so ASAP.

The video will be shown at the Post Prom and copies will be made available for sale. To order a slideshow, prom video or to submit photographs, please contact Pat at: massmartins@comcast.net.

LOCKS OF LOVE

Maddie Tesauro donated 10 inches of her beautiful hair to "Locks of Love" in celebration of her 12th birthday in March. Her hair cut was donated by Karen Oronte at Lemon Lime Aveda Salon in Cohasset.

Locks of Love is a public non-profit organization that provides hairpieces to financially disadvantaged children in the United States and Canada under age 18 suffering from long-term medical hair loss from any diagnosis.

Maddie's parents, Cathy and Tom Tesauro, are very proud of her perseverance.

COLLEGE NEWS

Congratulations go out to Kyra-Lea Cogill and Andrew Dennis, who graduated on Saturday (May 16) from the University of Maine at Farmington.

Charles Miller, a sophomore in American University's College of Arts and Sciences majoring in music, was named to the 2008 fall dean's list. Charles is a resident of Cohasset.

To earn dean's list status at American University, a student must obtain a 3.5 grade point average or better on their semester courses.

I know that the students in Cohasset are looking ahead to graduations from preschool through college as well as the students who are so happy to look ahead for summer. Congratulations to all and make sure to take the time each day to enjoy all of life's "little moments" as well as the ones that take you day by day in helping you as you grow.

GALA DVDS

Shaun Galvin, who will be taking requests for pre-prom DVD's from senior parents, families and friends for $20 each, will also videotape the pre-prom gala. Shaun says they make great graduation gifts! Send your request with your name, address, telephone number, email address and the number of DVD's you wish to purchase along with a check for $20 per DVD to: Shaun Galvin at P.O. Box 526, Hingham, MA 02043, by phone at 781-424-2197 or by email at Shaungalvin@yahoo.com.

OUR WORLD

The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum still has limited openings for many of its Summertime Kidsclub Programs that will begin the week of June 1. These programs are designed for children from ages 2 and up and each week is a wonderful theme that is enjoyed by all. For more information, you may check out the website at www.ourworldcgdm.org, call Miss Jen or Miss Julie at 781-923-1473 or send an email to ourworldprograms@comcast.net. You may choose the number of weeks, days and times that fits the schedule you are looking for

MARSH MONITORS!

Attention all middle school science lovers. Would you love to muck around in the marsh and get dirty while exploring the coast this summer? Are you currently in 5th, 6th or 7th grade? If so, CSCR (Center for Student Coastal Research) has the program for you, it's Junior Marsh Monitors. The program will run Tuesdays and Thursdays for four weeks starting July 7. Sessions run from 9-11 am or 2-4 pm. Cost is $150 for the month. Sign-ups will be held at the CSCR Open House at the Lightkeeper's House on Tuesday, May 26 at 6:30 p.m. Space is limited. Email hmurphy@hinghamschools.com or macadoo7@verizon.net for more information.

CHAMBER

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a program on Tuesday, May 26th from 5:30-8:00 pm at the South Shore Art Center called "Conversation, Colleagues and Cocktails!" You may invite friends, business associates, fellow committee members or representatives from your non-profit group to join you at this networking event. At the networking event, enjoy the current exhibition at the South Shore Art Center "Losing Ground" by Dorothy Simpson Krause. Dorothy is a Marshfield resident, whose exquisite mixed media pieces and artist books convey her response to the natural environment. The exhibit runs through May 31st. For more information, you may send an email to: info@cohassetchamber.org

COFFEE, AUTHORS

Buttonwood has been hosting the "Coffee with the Authors" for 16 years. The "Coffee" offers an opportunity to hear contemporary authors discuss their latest work. The panel this year is exceptionally fine. Lisa Genova for "Still Alice," Scituate author Lynne Griffin discusses "Life Without Summer," and Cape Cod author Anne LeClaire describes being silent in "Listening Below the Noise." The event is at the Atlantica Restaurant on Tue. Jun.9, from 9:45 -11:30 AM. Reservations and tickets ($16 per person) are necessary. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 to reserve.

RELAY

This year marks the 25th Anniversary of the Relay For Life Fundraiser held at the Alumni Field at the Cohasset High School on Pond Street. This event begins on Friday, June 12 at 3 pm and runs throughout the night, ending at 10:00 am on Saturday, June 13th. If you would like to come and purchase Luminaria Bags to honor or remember a loved one for the Relay For Life, you may come to the Our World Museum and purchase the bags you would like or need and then, if you would like, you may decorate them here at the Museum or bring them home to decorate. More information and the schedule will follow in the next two weeks' columns.

That is all the news for this week. Send in all of your news and information no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

'Alladin Jr.' had magical performances

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

On Thursday, May 7, Deer Hill School hosted the opening night of the Cohasset Dramatic Workshop's opening night of "Aladdin Jr." The audience's excitement was high as the show opened after a brief word of welcome from the director Lisa Pratt. The lights went up in the Deer Hill gymnasium, and the show began.

From start to finish, the play was colorful, interesting, and had a lot of energy. The play is based on the Disney movie with some adaptation for the stage and the younger cast. The opening number, "Arabian Nights," featured Caitlin Conrad, Madison Hindley, Kaitlyn McGovern, Katie McKeon, and Julia Richardson as the narrators, as well as the rest of the cast. The costumes were bright and colorful, giving the play a festive atmosphere. All the principle characters made an appearance by way of introduction. The production was excellently cast. Zack Herman (Aladdin) and Emma Humphrey (Princess Jasmine) preformed well together and expressed emotions well. "A Whole New World," one of the very famous pieces in the show, was particularly well done, both actors expressing their characters' emotion though the choreography. Emma Humphrey in particular had a wonderful singing voice and projected well.

The musical numbers were a big hit with the audience, particularly those featuring the entire cast. "Prince Ali" was an especially good number, which incorporated on-stage acrobatics into the choreography. Another musical number with excellent group choreography was "One Jump Ahead" in which the principal characters performed a scene while the ensemble carried the singing and dancing. It was a very impressive piece of staging with some great dialogue.

Two particularly (ironically) amusing characters were Jafar played by Max Nakashima – reprising his role as the villain in the school play (from last year's production of "The Jungle Book" when he played Sheer Khan) and Iago, played by Halle Pratt. The two actors played well off each other, providing some very funny dialogue.

One unforgettable actor was Madison Pratt as the Genie. Performing the role with energy and enthusiasm, she was particularly superb in the musical number "Friend Like Me."

In addition to the lead characters, the ensemble put on a superb performance and looked like they were having fun. The whole play was energetic, fast-paced, and well articulated. The cast, crew, and directors have clearly worked very hard to put on this production. As director Lisa Pratt said, "They have energy any time of day." These students clearly deserved the standing ovation they received from the audience.

Kathryn Hillman of Cohasset is a junior at Notre Dame Academy.

The 2009 Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital will be dedicated this year in memory of Paul Carroll, who championed the benefit for more than 50 years.

Tennis tournament dedicated to Paul Carroll

He had a particular passion for tennis, playing competitively throughout New England and serving as assistant coach for Cohasset High School boys' tennis team until his recent illness.

Cohasset Tennis Benefit, scheduled for July 17 through 20, will be dedicated this year in memory of Paul Carroll, a friend, tennis enthusiast and champion behind Cohasset's Children's Hospital benefit since it's inception more than a half century ago.

For more than 50 years, Carroll's love for tennis coupled with his devotion to helping those with needs, has been the cornerstone of the weekend tennis tournament, which has become increasingly vital to the growing financial needs of Children's Hospital in Boston. Proceeds this year will be given to the Children's Hospital Extraordinary Needs Fund in memory of Carroll. The fund helps defray the transportation and lodging expenses for families visiting a sick or injured child.

A U.S. Marine, Carroll was a history teacher in Somerville for 34 years. He was involved with numerous charitable programs, including summer youth theater, a variety of sports initiatives and other recreational programs for children in and around the Boston area. He had a particular passion for tennis, playing competitively throughout New England and serving as assistant coach for Cohasset High School boys' tennis team until his recent illness. He was an instrumental participant in the Cohasset Tennis Benefit each summer as an organizer and player.

The tournament will begin with a reception at the Lightkeeper's residence on Friday, July 17, followed by tennis matches on private courts throughout Cohasset on July 18 and 19. Cost is $200 per team before June 15 and $250 thereafter.

For information about the tournament or how to become involved, visit the Web site at cohassettennisbenefit.org.

The committee can be reached by email at chs1969reunion@gmail.com; by mail to CHS 1960 Reunion Committee, c/o Fred Koed, 10 Hill St., Cohasset, MA 02025; or by calling Denise (Dolan) McCarthy at 617-481-2402. Reunion Committee members include: Lynda (Cogill) Hubbard, Marilyn (Congdon) Previte, Denise (Dolan) McCarthy, Ron Goodwin and Fred Koed.

Youth group to host pasta dinner

The St. Paul and St Anthony youth group will host a pasta dinner from 6 to 10 p.m., on Saturday, May 30, at St Anthony's Parish Center, Cohasset. The night will feature a video of last year's mission trip and some of the youth will speak on behalf of their experience. A silent auction will also be featured.

This is an opportunity to see what the youth of the community are doing. Tickets will be sold at both parishes this weekend. Cost is $10.

— WIND TURBINES —

Public hearing set after the scheduled Town Meeting

intent according to the proponents of the amendment is to give the town time to re-draft the bylaw while no other applications for wind turbine projects could come forth.

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson said he was personally uncomfortable with making zoning bylaw changes in a short time frame.

"To me zoning bylaws are meant to be something stable and consistent…this is a major thing and we should take the time and consider this thing," said Samuelson.

While vice chair Stuart Ivimey more or less agreed with Samuelson, he said the zoning bylaw amendment proposed before the board and the town was "nothing more than to rescind the existing bylaw."

Yet, Samuelson was adamant there was a process in place to thoughtfully change zoning bylaws and it was not followed in this case.

"There should have been a proposal, (the planning board) should have vetted it, talked with other committees and once there was consensus (that the amendment) is a good thing to do and there's some urgency, citizens could call a special town meeting…we're putting the horse before the cart," said Samuelson, who was inclined to not hold the hearing at all.

Ivimey felt this instance was unique and there was some urgency to place a hold on the bylaw.

"There is a large number of citizenry that are unhappy with the wind turbine bylaw. We have heard at least anecdotally there are other landowners considering applying. Given this is a hot item right now with a lot of interest it might be worth us bending the rules to accommodate it," said Ivimey.

Later in the evening, after the 8 James Lane hearing, the Planning Board took up the issue of scheduling the public hearing again.

During this second half of discussion emotions ran high. A heated argument broke out between Samuelson and Conrad Langenhagen, a member of the audience and a proponent of the proposed zoning bylaw amendment. Samuelson reiterated his procedural concerns and made a personal plea to the proponents of the article who sat in the audience to withdraw the zoning bylaw amendment and work with the planning board to refine the bylaw.

"I just don't see the urgency of basically setting a bad precedent," said Samuelson.

In response, Langenhagen said Samuelson was being disingenuous, he knew other turbine applications were coming and he was hiding behind a procedural argument to stop the amendment from going forward.

After some back and forth, Chairman Al Moore stepped in; Samuelson left the meeting in a huff. Langenhagen left the room to apologize but returned shortly after.

The Planning Board continued its discussion to schedule the meeting. Getting at least four members to the meeting was difficult as most of the planning board members had vacations or other family obligations in the upcoming month.

"I don't want to miss it, I don't think anyone should miss it. It's important stuff," said Moore.

In the end, the Planning Board decided to set the public hearing date for the evening of Wednesday, June 24 and Moore said he would call Town Manager Bill Griffin to alert him of the public hearing date and scheduling issue with Town Meeting. The Board of Selectmen would have to vote next week to change the date. The Town Meeting must be held by Thursday, June 25 to comply with the 45-day rule.

Special town meeting in brief

Called by a group of citizens, at this point the town meeting will address a single issue -- whether or not to place a moratorium on the wind turbine zoning bylaw.

The Board of Selectmen could still add an article to the warrant in the coming week.

The wind turbine zoning bylaw was unanimously passed by the 2008 Annual Town Meeting. One project proposing two 100-meter turbines to be building off Route 3A by a private developer has come before the Planning Board under the bylaw. The Planning Board denied the project in the first week of May.

During the public hearings for the project, which began in September, scores of residents expressed major concerns with the potential impacts (visual, noise, safety) on the town from the structures. At several points during the public hearing process, citizens expressed concerns with how the wind turbine was drafted and pointed out what they felt were shortfalls in the bylaw.

If passed the article, as submitted to the Town Clerk's office on Monday morning, would disallow any application or consideration of a wind turbine special permit. The article's stipulations would take effect on the date of the first public advertisement of the special town meeting.

Because the proposal requires a change to the zoning bylaws, a two-thirds majority vote is needed for it to pass.

The wind energy conversion facility bylaw made wind turbines a permitted use by special permit and establishes criteria in which projects are evaluated. The current zoning bylaw, which is about three and half pages long, establishes definitions specific to wind turbines and criteria on various aspects and impacts of the structure – height, setback, color, noise generation, visual impact, lighting and shadow flicker, to name a few.

The bylaw specifically regulates commercially sized wind turbines (turbines greater than 500 kilowatts), not residential turbines.

Special Town Meeting scheduling

Complicating the process is a Special Town Meeting called by a citizen's petition runs on a very short time table. Special Town Meetings can be called by the Board of Selectmen or by a citizen's petition of 200 signatures.

Once the signatures of a citizen's petition to call a Special Town Meeting are certified, the clock starts ticking on many levels.

- The Special Town Meeting must be held within 45 days of the filing of the citizen's petition calling Town Meeting. The date of the Special Town Meeting will be Monday, June 22, 7p.m. at high school gymnasium.

- The deadline for any citizen's petition article (requiring 100 signatures) for the Special Town Meeting had to be filed seven days of the Town Meeting being called (Monday, May 18).

- The Board of Selectmen can place an article on the Special Town Meeting warrant anytime and are not subject to the seven-day rule. However, they are constrained by the printing and mailing of the warrant, which happens three weeks before a scheduled town meeting (approximately June 1).

- For all potential zoning bylaw changes, the Planning Board is required to hold a public hearing on the article. They must hold the public hearing within 65 days of its first notice from the town. The Planning Board scheduled the public hearing for Wednesday, June 24.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the associated cost for this special town meeting would be less than $5000. One of the major costs associated with a town meeting is the printing and mailing of the warrant to each household. Given the Special Town Meeting would likely be one article, the cost to print and mail would be less than a regularly scheduled Annual Town Meeting or November's Special Town Meeting.

Text of the article

"All provisions of Section 19 and any other provisions of the Cohasset Zoning Bylaws which would allow an application for and consideration of a special permit for the placement and/or construction of one or more commercial wind turbines in Town shall cease in their effect and operation, as a whole and severable, upon passage of this paragraph by action of Town Meeting, such that no further special permits for the placement and/or construction of one or more commercial wind turbines in Town may be applied for by any person, partnerships, corporations, or other entity following the date of the first public advertisement of the amendatory town meeting warrant article containing this paragraph."

Paving the way

Selectmen discuss dirt roadway off N. Main Street

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

To pave or not to pave, that is the question.

It may seem simple, but the Board of Selectmen had plenty to discuss after a resident of Dolan Lane wrote to them requesting at least a portion of the road be paved.

The dirt road off North Main Street, roughly across the street from Rocky Lane, is neither a well known nor a well-traveled way. In recent years, a specific portion of the road has a recurring drainage problem that led the residents to become concerned with safety, particularly in the winter months when the water becomes ice.

Diana Karcher of 264 North Main St. (the homes on Dolan Lane have North Main Street addresses) wrote to the Selectmen describing the condition of the lane as "deplorable, not only are cars being abused so are our bodies."

"I really don't think we're asking a lot."

264 North Main St

In the short term, DPW superintendent Carl Sestito said the town could fill in the trouble spots on Dolan Lane (pictured above) with a special porous tar called 'rap.'

Dolan Lane is a cozy road off North Main Street that is having drainage issues.

At the meeting, she said she was concerned fire and other public safety vehicles would have difficulty accessing the road. She said the majority of the residents are senior citizens.

"I really don't think we're asking a lot," said Karcher.

The issue became more complicated as Town Manager Bill Griffin said it was unclear whether Dolan Lane is an accepted public way. Although listed on the state list of public ways, the town has yet to find a record of Town Meeting approving it as such. In order to use the most likely and most available funding, a portion of the town's Chapter 90 state grant, to pave the road Dolan Lane has to be a public way. On roads considered private ways, all the town can do is temporary repairs, Griffin said.

The town is continuing to look through the town records.

More than simply a paving question, some of the residents explained part of the problem is related to stormwater and drainage. During heavy rainstorms not only does water come down and pool in the road, but also it bubbles up from the middle of the lane, said Edward Karcher of 264 North Main St.

"To get a car up there can be tricky," Karcher said.

Clark Brewer of 262 North Main St. said there were two issues – individual ownership rights and fairness. First, no one was interested in changing the legal status of Dolan Lane. If property rights were not affected, he believes most, if not all, of the residents would be for paving the road.

Additionally since Dolan Lane was considered a road by the state, it should be eligible for chapter 90 funds.

"I think maintaining the upper portion of the road would be a reasonable thing for the town to consider," said Brewer.

The paving of Dolan Lane could be further complicated by the presence of nearby wetlands. The Conservation Commission may have to be involved.

Mark Brennan, one of the town's consulting engineers, concurred the winter was tough on the road. There is a significant amount of ledge in the area exacerbating the stormwater/drainage issues and there was a lot of wetlands surrounding the neighborhood.

"It's a very bad combination," said Brennan.

Preliminary estimates to simply put a layer of asphalt on the 1050 feet long, 10.5-foot wide road would cost about $18,000. But, he did not recommend that action, "it will only last about three years."

To do a complete overhaul of the road, add in proper drainage, deal with the wetland impacts it could cost between $30,000 and $200,000.

In the short term, DPW superintendent Carl Sestito said the town could fill in the trouble spots with a special porous tar called 'rap.' The solution has been done before to some success according to residents.

"Last time the rap made a big difference, we're not looking for a highway here," said Diana Karcher.

Selectmen felt they needed more information before coming to a conclusion. The legal research will continue on the legal status of the road and board members intend to take tours of the area in question. The issue will be discussed again at an upcoming meeting.

EDITORIAL

All is well, safely rest

As the sound of taps rolls over the hills on Memorial Day, our heroes may safely rest because their spirits know that we who remain will carry on.

More than carry on, we will survive, achieve, and prosper.

We will protect and preserve the freedoms they sacrificed so dearly for.

Our Ship of State is navigating turbulent waters, yet this is nothing new. All through our history, Americans have faced up to daunting challenges set before them and not just endured, but emerged stronger.

On Memorial Day, we honor members of the armed forces who have gone on to eternal rest; we honor them with parades and speeches, wreaths and flags, prayers and tears.

Later, on that traditional hot dog and hamburger fest known as the Memorial Day cookout, we enjoy family and friends and honor those no longer with us by quiet remembrances and heartfelt stories.

The history of Memorial Day is the history of a nation striving for unity and for connection to dearly held ideals.

The official location of the first Memorial Day was Waterloo, a village in New York, where Civil War military losses were honored on May 5, 1866, and every May thereafter. Only in those days, this day of remembrance was called Decoration Day. After World War I, Decoration Day became Memorial Day, a time set aside to honor American military casualties in all wars and police actions. The term Memorial was not officially adopted nationwide until 1967.

In the Memorial Day Order of May 30, 1868, we are urged to preserve and strengthen "those kind and fraternal feelings which have bound together the soldiers, sailors, and marines." And, "What could do more to assure this result than by cherishing tenderly the memory of our heroic dead?"

We are urged to bring ourselves to a state of fraternal unity with the members of our Armed Forces, which connects us to the ideals they gave their lives for, a united and free United States.

As we carry on to preserve these ideals, we truly honor our fallen heroes.

Sewer Commission, June 9 & 16, 6 p.m.
Water Commission, June 1, 7 p.m. at the King Street Plant.
ZBA, June 3, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Check out 'Free Lunch with Rich Ofsthun'

In an occasional series, Cohasset resident and funny man Rich Ofsthun visits local lunch hot spots to see what's cooking. This time, he stops by Elder Affairs at the South Shore Community Center to check out the gourmet Wednesday lunch. Each Wednesday a group of volunteers calling themselves the Angel Food Project plan and cook a gourmet spread for a group of about 30 seniors.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Accident avoidance

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was addressed to Bill Griffin, Town Manager., with a copy provided to the Mariner for publication.

The new pedestrian walkway on Jerusalem Road just above Bow Street needs some corrective work. The bolts, which affix the horizontal planks to the embedded wooden posts, protrude through the posts into the pedestrian walkway, about knee height, and protrude about three-quarter inch beyond their nuts. The walkway is quite narrow and the risk of injury significant, especially if pedestrians traveling in opposite directions are meeting each other. Rather than reverse the bolts (and shift the risk of injury to the many pedestrians that avoid the narrow walkway and walk on the road), I suggest a light wooden strip on the pedestrian side, with wooden spacers sized so that the exposed side of the strip is just beyond the ends of the protruding bolts. This would prevent injury from collision with the bolts or with the posts, which collision is probable given the narrow walkway and the necessity of pedestrians to pass each other when traveling in opposite directions. It might also reduce the town's risk of claims for injuries.

Also, the lower end of the walkway extends about 70 feet beyond the guard fence next to the ravine, so that the pedestrian is separated from the ravine only by the 18- to 24-inch high steel crash guard, and could easily fall over the guardrail.

The walkway is too narrow for most child strollers, and more pedestrians avoid it than use it. The bank on the other side of the road should have been cut back and the vehicle road moved over to make room for an adequate walkway. That correction probably is too expensive to undertake now, but at least protection for pedestrians (and for the town against injury claims) from the protruding bolts should be provided.

In the long term, the walkway should be redesigned and rebuilt so that it is usable by all pedestrians, including those with three-wheeled child strollers and wide carriages. One option, although also expensive, would be to cantilever the walkway beyond the edge of the ravine, using embedded posts on the roadside as anchors. The small trees at the lower end could be removed to accommodate greater width.

Support for troops appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank manager Ken Brown of Starbucks, Route 3A, Cohasset, for donating a case of coffee and grinders for our local soldiers.

I try to send out packages to our local soldiers every other month. If anyone has anything they would like to contribute please feel free to contact me. Also, if anyone has a family member or knows of a soldier, contact me with the name and address.

'Reject James Lane project'

COMMENTARY

CYNTHIA A. MACCEAVE

The following was addressed to Chairman Alfred Moore, Cohasset Planning Board, with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

I am writing today regarding the proposed Village District project called "The Residences at Cohasset Village." My family has lived at 9 James Lane for 15 years. I am an abutter to the proposed 17-unit condominium complex. I have cited many sections of the Cohasset Zoning Bylaws and urge you to deny the project for many reasons. First of all the condo driveway will be located diagonally across James Lane where James Lane measures only 17-feet wide. This is almost half of what a road should measure. James Lane is essentially a sidewalk for Pleasant Street as there are no adequate sidewalks on Pleasant Street for pedestrians to walk downtown. James Lane is the "gateway" to the village for the people who live on the Lincoln Hillside, Cushing Street, Smith Place and Pleasant Street to walk, bike, or simply stroll with their children to get downtown. Spring Street and Smith Place closed due to the railroad tracks. James Lane is the only safe way to the village.

If you let this condo be built you will be adding 35 plus cars to this narrow lane. Right now there are six small single-family homes including 8 James Lane. The small ranch house that is 8 James Lane was built in 1960. It is all that site has ever known. The site is completely ledge. The Cary's, who built 8 James Lane, had to blast tons of ledge and the basement flooded every rainstorm. The MBTA will not allow blasting that close to the railroad tracks. The developers will have to chip away all the ledge. This expensive, slow process of endless chipping would bring a tremendous amount of agonizing noise to residents and businesses surrounding the site. (See Sec. 12.4 , 1A, 1B, 2,5, 6 Sec.12.,1 2 a, d, e, f).

Also the property abuts conservation land and the town water supply known as Ellms Meadow Well field. This precious source of spring water is too close to this project to ignore. (see Sec.14.1A, Sec.14.3 d, g, j, k). Also the Water Department has brought to our attention a brand new water line must be installed on James Lane to accommodate the 17 units.

Also I do not believe the new Village Bylaw was intended for this project as the developers only own 8 James Lane and not the proposed retail space for Joel Rosano's property 2 Pleasant Street. The new village bylaw was intended for the Bates House, Dr. Pompeos' office and the hardware store to house people above their retail space. There is no retail space proposed in this project (sec.18, 2A). I believe there is no market for expensive $600,000 units built within feet of a railroad track and a lane that cannot support the 35-plus cars that go along with it. Condos are fragile properties where investors tend to buy up the units and rent them. Condo fees and taxes do not need to be paid until a unit sells. Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

Cynthia A. MacCleave lives at 9 James Lane.

Entrance to Woodside Cemetery making progress

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush – The good news is that the Greenbush project is still fixing various locations around Town that need to be fine-tuned. As we reviewed last week, work continues at the entrance drive to Woodside Cemetery. As of the middle of this past week CBB was leveling the area, had re-laid the curb and was preparing for the final paving. CBB has been very cooperative with the Town and the normal business of the cemetery. On any day where there is a burial, they have agreed to not work in respect for the families of the deceased. We think that this is a very honorable thing for them to do.

In the first photo taken at Woodside last Friday, May 15th, you can see that the cemetery entrance is very rough. All of the paving has been taken up and new contours are being established to assist drainage. The second Woodside photo shows the progress as of early this past week after the base coat of asphalt has been laid and the granite curbing has been reset. The workers are truing up the level for the sidewalk in preparation for final paving. By the time you read this, CBB should be finished, or nearly so.

At Spring and Pond streets where the MBTA had completely reconfigured the intersection, there was a minor issue after they completed their construction. There is a crosswalk on Spring Street on the South Main Street side of the railroad crossing that always developed a puddle right at its base after any rain. Apparently the grades at the base of the walk did not allow for proper drainage.

The contractor, CBB, sliced away a small portion of the curb and created a stone lined swale that the excess water can drain into. This should help keep the puddle from developing at the walkway. If you look carefully at the photograph you will be able to see the gravel swale that extends from the edge of Spring St. at the handicap ramp toward South Main St.

The driveway at the 39 Beechwood Street condominium was completely reconfigured by the Greenbush project so that the residents would have free access to their driveway around the Beechwood Street Greenbush crossing safety islands. The net result of the driveway reconfiguration was that there is a water-metering pit in the middle of their driveway. (A water-metering pit is an underground structure that contains a water meter. From the driveway it just looks like any other manhole with a round cast iron cover.) Apparently, CBB didn't realize that the cover of this manhole would need to be much more substantial than a manhole in the middle a grass yard, which is where it was located before Greenbush. Actually, several weeks ago the cast iron manhole cover collapsed. This week CBB replaced the whole cover assembly with a substantially more robust structure. The photo shows the new manhole assembly waiting for its final asphalt, which has now been installed.

Little Harbor Project – Last week, Deep Run was the very first road in the Little Harbor Water / Sewer / Drainage Project area to receive its topcoat of asphalt. The last thing to be done on Deep Run is to put the island in the middle of the road back into decent shape. The two scraggly crab apple trees will be removed and they will be replaced with two beautiful white lilac trees. In addition the island will have all of the poor soil removed and new loam and seed will be added in its place.

The highest priority roads for paving are the roads that have no paving at all. However, last week none of these unpaved roads were actually ready for paving. So, since we had the paving crew scheduled to come, we used some of their available capacity for Deep Run. We would much prefer to base coat the "raw" roads, but that doesn't always work out. So we will utilize the paving capacity to top coat roads that already have their base coat.

We just learned that there will be no paving this week. The paving contractor had been scheduled to do work in Town this week, but changes in his scheduling and weather issues have caused him to reschedule until next week. We expect to get to various roads that have no paving such as Lothrop, Meadow, parts of Gammons, and Beach, weather permitting, by the end of next week.

Jewels of my family

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

My cousin Scott and I spent a lot of time together as kids, fishing, playing hockey, setting off fireworks, burning leaves with magnifying glasses, burning plastic army men, setting off fireworks strapped to burning army men —standard boy stuff. What I'm saying is that we had the same starting point and grew up doing similar things.

A month ago Scott and my Uncle Jeff met up in Dublin so they could deliver something to a guy in the Netherlands. This thing was a Boeing 767. Scott piloted and his father copiloted the otherwise empty plane. They spent the night in Brussels, took the bullet train to Paris, checked out a few arrondissements, ate some crêpes, then headed home the next day with their paychecks.

I'm pretty sure that in the last 12 months, the thing I did that was closest to awesome was to heroically defeat some plantar warts.

My family achievement gap problem doesn't end with Scott. Another cousin flew helicopters for the Air Force and is now commander of the 1st Special Operations Wing in Florida. His brother is a Brigadier General working at the Pentagon. Even my father, a nerdy mechanical engineering major like me, was flying Navy jets off an aircraft carrier when he was 23, which also happens to be the age at which I learned to type. I did that completely on my own without any military training, but I don't think you can really compare the two in terms of danger level or adventurism.

I feel fortunate to have ancestors going back many generations, but the deeper I look into my family history the more banal my life seems. The hardships these people endured were unbelievable — most of the women in those days were named Mehitable, for instance. They made their way from Scotland, Wales, and the famous English parish of Alphage Cripplegate to the early American colonies in ships named "Confidence," "Hope," and "Somewhat Likely to Make Land."

One of them didn't make it. Nathaniel Oak, born in 1645, was the only survivor of a ship that foundered several miles off shore. "In his distress," wrote his great-grandson, "he solemnly promised the Lord that if He would preserve him to get to land, he would never go into the water again." Nathaniel was true to his word, and stank until he died in 1730. Then he smelled a bit better.

I keep hoping my life will become noteworthy in some way, so that I get at least two paragraphs in the family history.

My great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandfather Lieutenant Thomas Baker was captured by Indians in Deerfield, taken to Canada and sold to some French Jesuits. He kept trying to escape, which to their minds put him at risk of further exposure to Protestantism down in the colonies. Being good Christians they wanted to save him, so they decided to burn him at the stake. But Thomas didn't understand their motives, perhaps due to his lack of French, and focused mainly on the fire aspect. He took off like a shot soon after being lit, and escaped from Canada with several other men who may also have been on fire. After much suffering and smoldering they made it back to Deerfield in 1705, only to find that the Vietnam War was already starting to heat up.

It's weird to think that if Thomas Baker had been successfully saved by those Canadians I wouldn't be me right now. In fact if my genealogical calculations are correct I would be someone named Carrie Prejean.

As it is I'm descended from at least eight men who fought at Lexington and Concord, Bunker Hill, and Fort Ticonderoga, all at the same time. None of them, however, earned the fame of my great-great-great-grandmother Sarah Ann Davis, who in 1864 was voted the most popular widow in Lowell. As is still customary there after such an election, the men hauled a barrel of flour to her and she greeted them with refreshments.

I keep hoping my life will become noteworthy in some way, so that I get at least two paragraphs in the family history. "Father of three and enjoyer of cheeseburgers," just doesn't paint a cool enough picture. I tried going to Canada but nothing very harrowing occurred unless you count the exchange rate. I stopped bathing for a while but nobody believed my Andrea Doria story. In hopes of indirect credit I raised my children to be pillars of society but they're more like deadweight.

The only way I might stand out is to rewrite the history and make my family more boring by comparison. From now on my great-uncle Bob did not train dogs to sniff out ambushes in the Pacific Theater during World War II. He actually trained them to attack warts.

HEALTH NOTES

CPR training can be a life-saver

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Here's a chance to broaden your knowledge base, help your community, further your education and get prepared to deal with a medical problem in a way that will potentially benefit many in a local emergency situation:

Sudden cardiac arrest is a leading cause of death in the United States, killing more than 325,000 people each year. During SCA, heart function ceases abruptly and without warning. When electrical impulses in the affected heart become rapid (ventricular tachycardia, or VT) or chaotic (ventricular fibrillation, or VF), called arrhythmias, the heart is no longer able to pump blood to the rest of the body and in more than 90 percent of victims, death occurs. The general public and media often mistakenly refer to SCA as a "massive heart attack." SCA is an electrical problem, whereby the arrhythmia prevents the heart from pumping blood to the brain and vital organs causing an immediate cessation of the heart in most cases, without warning signs or symptoms.

A heart attack is a "plumbing" problem caused by one or more blockages in the heart's blood vessels, preventing proper flow and the heart muscle dies. Symptoms include chest pain, radiating pain in left arm, between shoulder blades, and/or jaw, difficulty breathing, dizziness, nausea and vomiting, and sweating. In some cases, a heart attack may lead to a sudden cardiac arrest event.

In an effort to help save more lives, the American Heart Association hopes to train 1 million people in CPR next week: National CPR & AED Awareness Week. The emergency first responders at the Cohasset Fire Station are asking for public-minded citizens interested in helping to get trained in CPR, or to make a donation and share the message.

On Wednesday, June 3, between 6 and 10 p.m., at Cohasset Town Hall, firefighters and EMT's are offering to provide American Heart Association CPR courses for all interested citizens. Fee for this instruction and the accompanying written materials is $45. Participants receive a certification card that lasts for two years.

Deadline for registering is Tuesday, May 26, so that John Dockray, the firefighter/EMT giving the course, can have everything ready in time.

Instruction includes adult, child and infant CPR with an automated external defibrillator or AED, a portable electronic device that automatically diagnoses the potentially life threatening cardiac arrhythmias of ventricular fibrillation and ventricular tachycardia in a patient and is able to treat them through defibrillation, the application of electrical therapy that stops the arrhythmia, allowing the heart to reestablish an effective rhythm. AEDs are designed to be simple to use for the layman, and their use is taught in many first aid, first responder and basic life support level CPR classes all over the world.

It's possible to register for this course online at the Cohasset Recreation Department Web page at www.cohassetrec.com where you will find many other interesting opportunities. Just find "CPR Class," which includes a form and the ability to register online.

Deadline for registering is Tuesday, May 26, so that John Dockray, the firefighter/EMT giving the course, can have everything ready in time. If you decide to get trained, make your training count. Share this information with others by registering it on www.cprweek.org or call Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 and speak to Ted Carroll who can help with the details.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

CPR course offered at Town Hall

American Heart Association CPR courses, instructed by members of the Cohasset Fire Department, include CPR instruction in adult, child and infant CPR. At two-year certification card will be issued. Cost is $45. The class meets Wednesday, June 3, from 6 to 10 p.m.

CEF awards five new grants

This past week the Cohasset Education Foundation approved five new grant awards, bringing the total number of grants awarded in two and a half years to twenty-two. The total dollar amount of grants awarded to the Cohasset Public Schools is now over $276,000.

The grants will be implemented immediately across all of the schools. They are; Math Literature that supports the Everyday Math curriculum for grades K-2, a Resource Center and Staff Training for Differentiated Instruction for students in grades 3 – 5, Math Literature for all teachers in grades 3 – 5, two additional modules for the Middle School Engineering Lab and an autoclave for high school students and CSCR participants (Cohasset Center for Coastal Research).

"In a short time there have been so many accomplishments," said CEF President John Englander. "It's extremely gratifying to see this level of support and generosity from the community—we can confidently say that together, we are having a positive impact on the public schools."

This news of the grant awards comes as the CEF is gearing up for its Spring Event to be held next Saturday, May 30. This year's event will be a traditional barbeque hosted in a tent adjacent to the South Shore Music Circus. Food will be provided by Red Bones Barbeque and live music by Grammy Award winning Bellevue Cadillac.

Proceeds from this year's benefit will be earmarked for a new Foreign Language Lab at the Middle/High School. For more information and for tickets please visit www.cohasset-education.org

Students petition for Latin teacher, program

Latin level 2 and level 3 class in combined for a classroom of 16 students, only a few of which they said are seniors. "They won't be able to continue."

Additionally, the students expressed concerns with the replacing of a classroom environment and a teacher with a virtual classroom.

"They can't replace the classroom experience with a virtual one. It's just not the same," Jojo said.

When asked if the students could come up with something else that could be cut instead of Mr. O'Neil, August was quick to answer, "anything else."

"Latin should have a priority. If you cut Mr. O'Neil you are cutting the department," he said.

In a phone interview, Mr. O'Neil said he had nothing to do with the writing of the letter and the students took the initiative after he announced he would not be returning next year. He said he explained to them that the school superintendent's actions were due to a strained budget and that most of the layoffs were dictated by budget considerations.

On Wednesday, he had the chance to read the letter. "I was very flattered; it was very moving," O'Neil said.

While not optimistic the students' plea would overturn the decision, he felt the students deserved to have a hearing.

"We try to teach them that they have this right (to speak up)," said O'Neil.

In fact, the students said Mr. O'Neil's class and teaching partly influenced their decision to write the letter and petition the administration.

"He's basically a legend."
— Jojo Brophy, CHS senior

"He's always taught us to stand up for what's right and to be politically active," August said. "We are in a position where we could do something so we did."

"I just hope it makes a difference," said Jojo.

Mr. O'Neil started teaching Latin at Cohasset High in 1966 and over his 43-year career he has had many parents and their children. He retired from full-time teaching in 2003, but was asked to come back on a part-time basis the next year. Since then he has taught full-time for the second half of the year offering courses in Latin 1, 2, and 3.

Although Latin is no longer a spoken language, O'Neil said many of his students come back to tell him they found the class useful for varying reasons — grammar, English root words, vocabulary, classical history, to name a few.

The current students said their Latin class has helped them in their English class, their other world language classes and even science.

Mr. O'Neil said the opportunity to teach great students and have that pride in seeing them succeed in life has been the most rewarding part.

While he is beyond retirement age and will return to full-time retirement next year, Mr. O'Neil said he has concerns about the shifting focus in public schools.

"The emphasis is on money, budget cuts and meeting state standards. We used to talk about how to get the student to do better," said O'Neil. "How can we continually lay off teachers and maintain academic standards in general?"

High School principal Joel Antolini said the decision for Mr. O'Neil not to return next year was a combination of concerns: the budget, teacher certification and low student interest in the Latin program for the upcoming year.

"This time of year we need to make adjustments and decisions based on student enrollment," said Antolini.

Those students who are interested in an introduction to Latin will be adsorbed through the virtual high school or will pursue another foreign language course.

"For those advanced students, I don't have an answer," said Antolini, but they are looking at a co-operative programs with another school, independent study options or other online vendors who may have an advanced Latin courses.

Antolini said he planned to respond to the students who wrote the letter directly.

"Mr. O'Neil has been a very valuable asset and a wonderful teacher…we're going to miss him."

Superintendent Denise Walsh said Mr. O'Neil has done the schools a "huge favor" by teaching one semester part time for the past few years.

"To set the record straight, Mr. O'Neil was not laid off. He is retired and has been for a number of years. As a retiree he is allowed by the retirement board to work so many hours a year," Walsh said.

When the numbers for next year's Latin courses came back and Walsh said the program might be better suited for Virtual High School.

"We wish Mr. O'Neil well as he continues his retirement," Walsh said in an e-mail.

Slanetz concerned cuts are 'slippery slope'

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz brought up the issue of Mr. O'Neil, the students' letter and the future of the high school Latin program during the communications portion of Wednesday's School Committee meeting.

The Mariner was unable to attend Wednesday's School Committee meeting, but was contacted by School Committee member Alfred Slanetz as the paper went to press Thursday morning.

"My strong feeling is losing a core competency in Latin is very dangerous and a slippery slope," Slanetz said in a phone interview. "Losing this program is, in my opinion, the equivalent of gutting your academic program."

Slanetz expressed concern that other areas of academia, such as the AP science courses, and the high quality curriculum at Cohasset schools could be next on the chopping block.

"The bottom line is in order to maintain a high quality education we need more resources per student," said Slanetz. "I think it's a slippery slope in taking the most high quality way of learning with a teacher and classroom and replacing it with a computer."

According to Slanetz, Mr. O'Neil's position was among cuts made to make up for an approximate $130,000 difference from the budget the school department originally proposed to what was voted on at Town Meeting. Other issues factored in such as student interest and teacher certification.

While no resolution was made through the discussion, Slanetz said he would like to see the schools be more creative in finding efficiencies, particularly in ways that don't impact academics.

"I raised the point and I think there will be an opportunity to come and revisit the issue," said Slanetz.

Relatedly, Slanetz was impressed by the students' writing capability and their willingness for stick up for something they believe in. "I think political activism is a great thing."

Rockland Trust to host Aging in Place seminar

Rockland Trust will host a free Aging in Place seminar at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, from 10:30 a.m. to noon, on Wednesday, June 3. Topics to be covered will be relevant to growing older, remaining at home and maintaining financial independence.

Joe McParland, senior reverse mortgage advisor for Rockland Trust, will host the event and speak about the reverse mortgage process. In addition, attorney Brian Sullivan, attorney Alison Smith Piasecki and John Miller of Home Care Partners LLC will speak. Light refreshments will be served.

The public is invited to this free informational session, but must register by calling the Cohasset branch at 781-383-0150 or Scituate branch at 781-545-0170.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on roll calls from the week of May 11-15. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

CHANGES TO ETHICS LAWS (S 2050)

Senate 40-0, approved a bill making major changes in the state's ethics laws. The measure increases many penalties for violating these laws including hiking the penalty for bribery from $5,000 and/or three years in prison to $100,000 and/or 10 years in prison and raising the penalty for violating lobbying laws from up to a $5,000 fine to a $10,000 fine and/or a five-year prison sentence. Other provisions ban lobbyists from making campaign contributions; reduce from $5,000 to $500 the maximum contribution individuals can make to state political parties; prohibit governor's councilors from appearing before state boards for compensation and require that all bribes be subject to the state income tax in order to give prosecutors another avenue to go after corrupt public officials.

Senate members' amendments that did not make it into the final bill include making the Legislature, the governor's office and all other constitutional offices subject to the public records law; prohibiting retired state employees who are collecting a pension from working for the state as a contractor and increasing from one year to either two years or three years after leaving their jobs, the period that former state employees and former elected officials, including legislators, must wait before going into the lobbying business.

Supporters said that this long overdue bill is a major step in cracking down on ethics violations and corruption. They argued that it is time to restore the public's faith in the Legislature. Although no one voted against the bill, critics say that the bill is not tough enough and leaves out many of Gov. Deval Patrick's proposed important reforms and other amendments that were defeated on the Senate floor. The House has already approved a different version of the bill. A House-Senate conference committee will eventually attempt to craft a compromise version. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

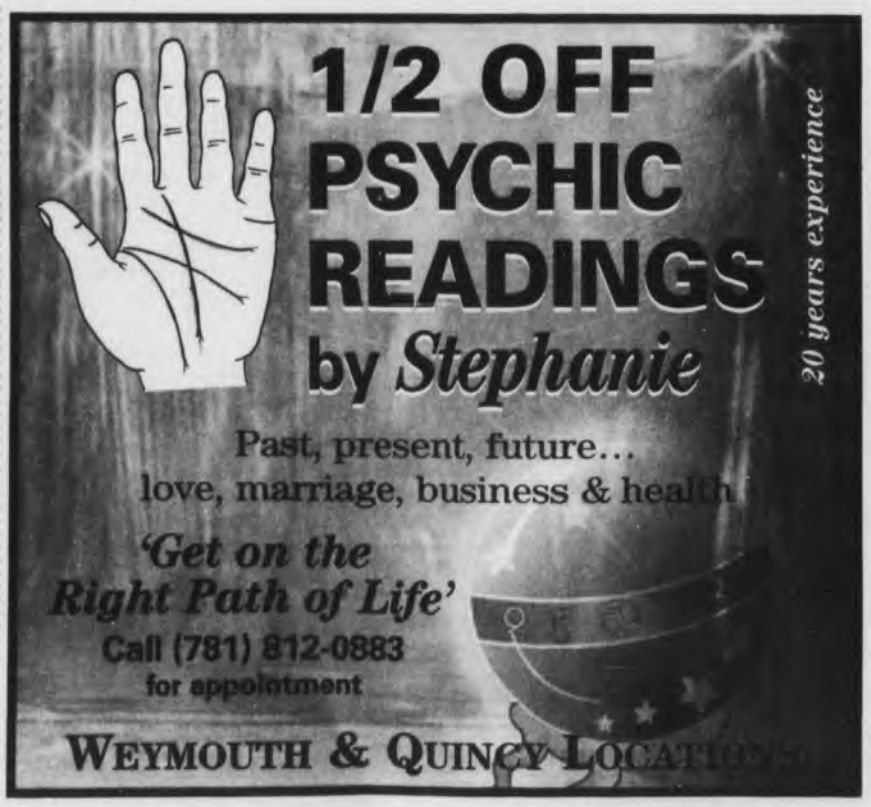
BAN FORMER LEGISLATORS FROM LOBBYING FOR TWO OR THREE YEARS (S 2050)

Senate 6-33, rejected an amendment increasing from one year to two years after leaving their jobs, the "cooling off" period that former state employees and former elected officials, including legislators, must wait before going into the lobbying business. The Senate also 6-33, rejected a similar amendment increasing the waiting period to three years. Amendment supporters said that the current one year is insufficient, blurs the line and opens up the system to abuse. They argued that it is not such an outrageous demand that there be a two or three-year waiting period before potentially "cashing in" on one's public service. Amendment opponents said that the amendment goes too far and would discourage people from entering public service. They said that the restrictive amendment would even go so far as to require a park ranger to wait two or three years before working as a lobbyist for an environmental group. (Both roll calls are listed. The first is on the increase to two years. The second is on the increase to three years. On both roll calls, a "Yes" vote is for the increased waiting period. A "No" vote is against the increased waiting period).

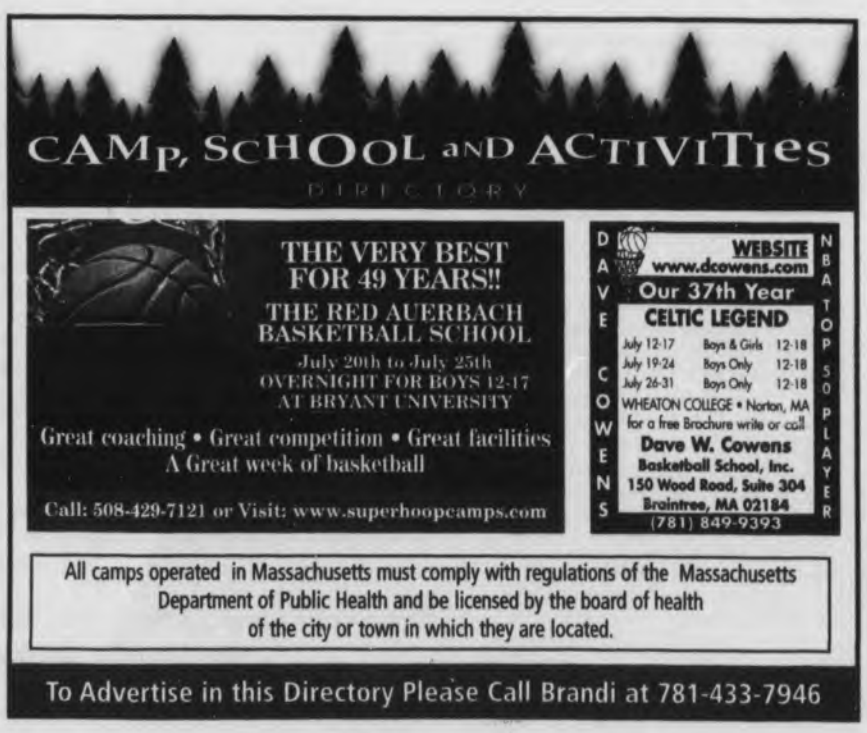
PROHIBIT GIFTS TO ELECTED OFFICIALS (S 2050)

Senate 14-22, rejected an amendment prohibiting anyone from giving a gift to any present or former state, county or municipal employee, including legislators, or to any member of the judiciary because of the employee's official position. The amendment would replace a softer provision that prohibits giving a gift only if the gift is made with the goal of influencing the action of the official. Amendment supporters said that the amendment is stronger and simply bans these unnecessary gifts - period. They argued that the weaker provision is too vague and creates a gray area. Amendment opponents said that the outright ban goes too far and would even prevent a legislator from going to a dinner and receiving an honorarium. They argued that the goal here is to ban gifts that attempt to influence an official - not to make a harmless gesture into a criminal offense. (A "Yes" vote is for the outright ban on any gifts. A "No" vote is against the outright ban).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL



TAKE ANOTHER $461 MILLION FROM RAINY DAY FUND (H 4144) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a proposal to fund the ever increasing deficit in the current year's state budget that runs through June 30. The measure takes another $461 million from the state's Rainy Day Fund and brings the fund's balance to below $800 million. Less than a year ago on July 1, the fund's balance was more than $2 billion.



RAISE TOBACCO TAXES (H 2773) - The Revenue Committee heard testimony on a bill raising the tax on non-cigarette tobacco products including roll-your-own loose tobacco, small cigars and smokeless chewing tobacco. The measure increases the tax on small cigars from 30 percent of the wholesale price to 80 percent and on loose tobacco from 30 percent to 90 percent. Supporters said that the cigarette tax hike to $2.51 per pack has resulted in many smokers switching to these other tobacco sources on which there is a lower tax. They said that this would raise up to $15 million annually and reduce smoking. Opponents said that any kind of tax is not welcome during this recession. They argued that the hike will hurt many senior citizens and lower-income workers who cannot afford it.

Save Latin, save Mr. O'Neil

COMMENTARY

BROPHY & ODDLEIFSON

Long-time Cohasset High Latin teacher Mr. Thomas O'Neil on the recent school trip to Italy.

Several days ago, this letter, along with 218 supporting signatures from students, was sent to the Superintendent, the Principal and all members of the school committee.

Dear educators, school officials, students, parents, and citizens of Cohasset,

As two seniors going off to college next fall, we are concerned about the shifting direction of the curriculum at Cohasset High School. Our concerns arise from the impending dismissal of a highly respected member of the CHS faculty, Mr. Thomas O'Neil. Mr. O'Neil is one of several valued faculty members whose position is being eliminated due to budget cuts, but we as students have singled him out for his truly irreplaceable presence in the learning environment of Cohasset High School.

Mr. O'Neil has taught Latin for the past 43 years. His sense of humor, unsurpassable knowledge of history and politics, and ability to form long-lasting relationships with students has made him a fixture at CHS. Many call him a legend. And they are correct in that his age and experience create a unique bridge between several generations that is just not present anywhere else in the building; it is not unusual for him to talk to his students about their parents, who were his former students. After a lifetime of teaching, it is undeniable that Mr. O'Neil knows how to teach. Beyond his qualified history, in the classroom, Mr. O'Neil is not only incredibly patient but also challenges his academically diverse students to reach their full potentials; Latin is by no means the "easy" language at CHS. But, Mr. O'Neil's lessons extend beyond Latin: he leads students to question their perspective on the world through discussions on current events, politics, ancient history, foreign cultures, and his own international travels. He specifically loves to discuss how historical patterns repeat themselves and provide relevant insight into modern society. Actually, he could probably go into an in-depth discussion of any topic; he simply has a fundamental love of knowledge. But Mr. O'Neil's teaching style transcends the mechanical transmission of facts, as he encourages his students not only to think for themselves but also to value their own opinions.

Mr. O'Neil is a hidden gem at Cohasset but many question the necessity of a Latin program. Some believe Latin is not part of the core requirements for an education. But, are "core requirements" all that is needed for a proper education? Of course not! A complete education consists of many remarkable educational encounters stitched together to create a diverse, worldly experience that prepares one for the unknown later in life. Latin at CHS is such an experience. Students comment that Latin relates to and helps with many other classes: Latin grammar, vocabulary, and syntax supplement studies in English, Spanish, and French, Latin roots aid students in the Critical Reading and Writing portions of the SATs, and Mr. O'Neil's teachings on ancient history and world culture enrich and enliven the study of history. Mr. O'Neil fundamentally elevated Latin beyond the study of a language and created a course that unites multiple disciplines into one all encompassing study. The Latin room is really where it all comes together and students are definitely stronger because of it.

A complete education consists of many remarkable educational encounters stitched together to create a diverse, worldly experience that prepares one for the unknown later in life.

Next year, students will only be able to take Latin I (currently the school offers Latin I-IV) through an online learning program called Virtual High School (VHS) where Cohasset High School students can communicate with a teacher and other students from other schools via the Internet. Many see VHS as a legitimate option in the future where cash-strapped schools wish to offer an increased number of diverse courses. Yes, VHS is great for expanding a school's offered curriculum as VHS offers courses from zoology to Mandarin. But, if the future involves replacing existing teachers with an online course, then it is a poor future indeed. As two students in the era of "technology," we not only highly value the daily face-to-face interaction we have with our teachers but see it as an indispensable part of the education process. Furthermore, the idea of replacing Mr. O'Neil with an online course is not only unappealing to us but also incredibly heartbreaking.

In conclusion, this is a direct appeal to the Superintendent, the school's administration, the School Committee, the CEF, the PSO, and the people of Cohasset. We understand there are legitimate financial reasons behind the decision to eliminate Mr. O'Neil's position. We understand that in such a time of economic recession tough decisions have to be made. However, we insist on clarifying the full repercussions of this decision. By losing Mr. O'Neil, the Cohasset School System loses a distinct, defining part of itself.

Jojo Brophy and August Oddleifson, members of the Cohasset High School Class of 2009/ Supported by 218 student signatures.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cradles to Crayons support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

Over the weekend we held a clothing and equipment drive at our home to benefit Cradles to Crayons. We are overwhelmed by the response from the town. From friends and strangers we received enough clothing and equipment to pack a 17-foot UHaul of goods. This week those goods will be sorted at the Cradles to Crayons warehouse and distributed right to the hands of needy Massachusetts children. Last year C2C served over 280,000 children in Massachusetts. The mission of the organization is to pair communities-that-have with communities-that-need and we are so grateful to all that shared what they have.

We are grateful to the many spontaneous volunteers who stayed and help sort the goods and pack the truck. We are particularly touched by the anonymous woman who dropped off two hand-knit baby sweaters. You have all touched our hearts.

Thank you to all.

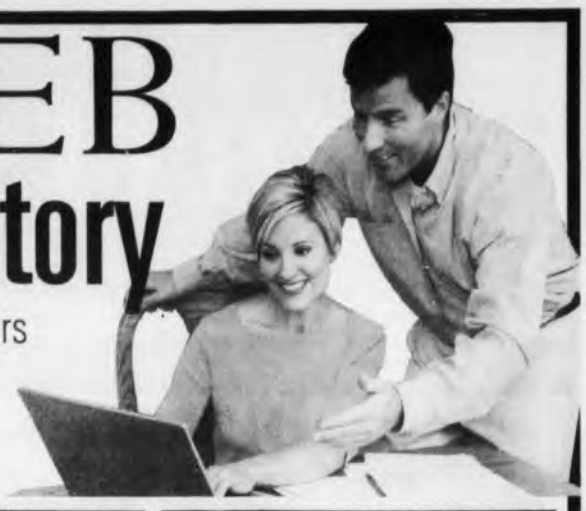
Buttonwood hosts Coffee with the Authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host its semi-annual Coffee with the Authors event from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., on Tuesday, June 9, at Atlantica Restaurant, 44 Border St.

Attendees can enjoy a continental breakfast while three contemporary authors discuss their latest work. Authors will be Lisa Genova, Lynne Griffin and Anne D. LeClaire.



Attendees can enjoy a continental breakfast while three contemporary authors discuss their latest work.

Genova's book, "Still Alice," is about a 50-year-old woman who is diagnosed with early-onset Alzheimer's. Scituate author Griffin writes about the loss of a child in her debut novel, "Life Without Summer," and Cape Cod resident, LeClaire will discuss "Listening Below the Noise: A Meditation on the Practice of Silence" about her decision to turn an ordinary day into a day of silence and how that one day turned into 17 years of total silence twice a month.

Tickets are $16 per person, and reservations and tickets are required. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve seats or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

Cook Estate could be moving house

But proposed use as Senior Center gets lukewarm reception

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town has the opportunity to move a 5,200 square foot home to a new site and a new purpose. But, the opportunity needs quick action and rallying support in order to come to fruition.

So far, there has been only lukewarm response to the idea, primarily because of the short time frame and financial questions.

One of the leading concepts for potential use of the former Cook Estate home, currently located on Sohier Street, is a senior center. Accordingly, Clark Brewer, who first brought the idea before the Board of Selectmen last week, came before members of the Council on Elder Affairs on Tuesday morning. Brewer is an architect by trade and came armed with rough sketches of possible sitings for the building as a senior center.

Brewer targeted the open acreage behind the library as the most appropriate siting for the future senior center. For him there were enormous advantages to the site, including an already disturbed site (no trees), rooftop access for solar panels and the possibility for a symbiotic relationship with the library.

Admitting this concept was a more "modest approach" than the seniors have previously envisioned for a new state of the art senior center, Brewer said it could make the project happen faster and be more financially feasible. He estimated the cost to move and retrofit the Cook Estate would be between $600,000 and $800,000.

The circa 1960 house is well-built, cape style house with large and simple spaces all on one level. Abbott Development, the owners and developers of the Cook Estate, intend to begin clearing the site (including dismantling the single family house on the property) in July. Abbott plans to build a 27-single family homes on the site.

Brewer's rough conceptual plan would use roughly 3,000 square feet of the Cook Estate house, and then add approximately 2,000 square feet of new construction.

Since January the Elder Affairs group had been at work finding a location and funding mechanism for a new senior center. At the Annual Town Meeting in March plans started to come together. Three articles were passed enabling the Selectmen to enter negotiation with the Cohasset Swim Center Trustees to possibly site a new construction senior center on land adjacent to the Swim Center's parking lot off Sohier Street. The proposed senior center would be about 14,000 square feet on two floors, with the second floor devoted to affordable housing.

The Social Service League of Cohasset is in the process of getting permission from the Attorney General to get relief to use principal funds from the Willcutt Fund, a trust they control. If the private donation comes through about half of the estimated cost for the new senior center would be realized.

However, Social Service League president Marita Carpenter said any change in the town's plans for the senior center could affect the donation. The current application before the Attorney General describes a state-of-the-art senior center with affordable housing on the swim center land.

If the town's plans changed from constructing a new senior center to adapting the Cook Estate house, Carpenter said she wasn't sure where the board would stand on the project.

Director of Elder Affairs Linda Elworthy was not sold on the Cook Estate concept.

"A 5000 square feet building is not going to meet the needs of the seniors now and what we want to do is build a senior center that will attract more people," said Elworthy.

John Campbell, president of the Friends of Elder Affairs, a private non-profit group, was of like mind.

"The other senior centers we've visited have told us to build as large a facility as you can because you will outgrow it in five years."

Others had concerns the introduction of the senior center to the location behind the library would interfere with library activities and the active playground.

"The last thing we want to do is polarize the community," said Joe Nedrow, adding his board's goal was to create a win-win for the community. Nedrow is chairman of the Council on Elder Affairs.

"The other senior centers we've visited have told us to build as large a facility as you can because you will outgrow it in five years."

— John Campbell, Friends of Elder Affairs

Selectman Karen Quigley tried to bring out the positive aspects of the Cook Estate adaptive re-use concept.

"It is on a smaller scale, but the cost is less…I think there would be a lot of interest and support for re-using a building and the Cook Estate certainly has an appeal to people in town," said Quigley. "My support for this project would hinge on the fact we would be creating a center that would not be second class."

Quigley said the other consideration was the current economic climate — it is not good for raising money or spending town money. She foresaw challenges in coming up with the funding to build the estimated $2.2 million senior center even with the grant from the Social Service League.

For Glenn Pratt, who has been involved in the development of the new senior center concept since the beginning, said the issue really came down to timing, "the idea has come too late to get it done…as much as I want to believe this is a good idea to re-use the building, the timing is not there."

While Brewer felt the Cook Estate was ideally suited for a senior center, there were other options for the structure. Affordable housing or a secondary police station were possibilities, he said.

Remembering Cohasset's fallen heroes women who have served, continue to serve and those who have paid the ultimate price to keep America free.

On Saturday at 1p.m., there will be a dedication and wreath laying ceremony at the Healing Field. Brigadier General Thomas J. Sellars will speak at the dedication.

On Monday, the Veterans Memorial stone monument provides the backdrop for the ceremony that will include featured speaker Coleman Nee, the current undersecretary of the Massachusetts Department of Veteran Services.

"Cohasset's Memorial Day observances are fitting, appropriate and dignified," said Nee. "They welcome the community into the services. Everyone, especially the young people, walk away with a sense of appreciation for what the day means."

Nee was asked to speak at this year's Memorial Day services before last year's observances were over. Nee said Tom Wigmore, Sons Of The American Legion Commander, asked him during the 2008 Healing Field dedication held on the Saturday of Memorial Day weekend.

Nee is an Operation Desert Storm veteran. While in the Marine reserves, Nee was activated for Operation Desert Storm and served with the 2nd Marine Division in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

He said he subscribes to the "keep it simple, stupid" philosophy when it comes to public speaking and intends to keep his remarks short, particularly considering many of the veterans will have spent the morning paying tribute to those veterans who have passed away.

But, he will speak to the importance of honoring veterans, not forgetting their sacrifice and what the state does for veterans.

"It is a great opportunity to talk a little bit about what we as a Commonwealth do for our veterans," said Nee, who has worked for the Department of Veteran Services for a little under two years.

Through his job he is often invited to various veteran events in communities throughout the state. At some of them when 20 or 30 people show up, it is considered a success.

"The fact hundreds of residents show up is a tribute to Tom Wigmore and the folks at the Legion," said Nee.

The parade arrives at the harbor at about 11:45 a.m. Monday but the day's events actually begin the night before. From 8 p.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. Monday, a Legion member will keep vigil at Veterans Park. At 7 a.m. the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 on Summer Street hosts the annual veterans' breakfast. From the Legion veterans march up to the old Paul Pratt Library building (now the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society) where they board buses for the North Cohasset Cemetery and honor roll.

The buses arrive at Woodside at about 9:30 a.m. that includes visiting the Gold Star Mothers Memorial. Then it's on to Beechwood Cemetery. The veterans join the parade that includes local bands, scouts, a contingent from the Daughters of the American Revolution, and veterans at the Music Circus parking lot at about 10:30 a.m. The parade marches to Central Cemetery at Joy Place, then down North Main Street to the Common, the POW/MIA Memorial, and onto Elm Street and the harbor, arriving at about 11:45 a.m.

Lady Skippers win despite losing

Girls' Tennis

The Cohasset girls tennis team finished the regular season on a positive note – even when the match turned out to be a 3-2 loss at Norwell on Wednesday.

The final score wasn't the story.

The story was written by the team before the match started.

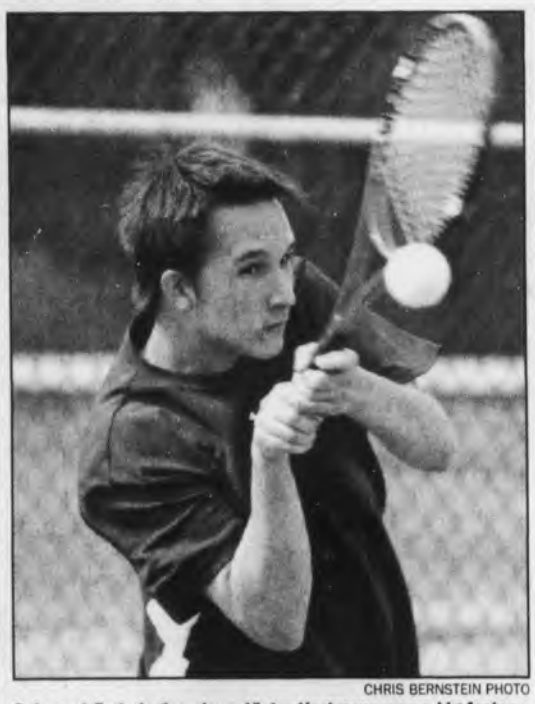
After beating Mashpee 5-0 on Monday to wrap up at least a share of the South Shore League title, the team decided to honor their seniors for their final regular season match.

With that in mind, seven of the team's nine seniors played at Norwell.

"We had to play Maddie (first singles started Maddie Altholtz) at first singles," said long-time Cohasset assistant coach Kathy Prevett. "The rest we played all seniors. We knew it was a risk, but the girls voted to let the seniors play."

There were no regrets, only sportsmanship.

"We won first singles and first doubles," Prevett said. "In the end it came down to second singles. Maggie McGoldrick was playing second singles. The girl she was playing had won the first set 7-5 and was up 3-0 in the second when she went down with an injury. She needed an injury timeout. Later, when it was 5-4 the girl fell again."



According to official rules, that should have ended the match with a win for McGoldrick, but Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan and McGoldrick didn't want to win that way.

After talking with Norwell's veteran coach Judy Field, Norwell was given the extra time and the pair finished the match with Norwell getting the win.

"The Norwell coach (Field) asked what we should do," Prevett said. "We all said let her play. We let Maggie make the decision. Maggie didn't want to win by default. That was a huge display of character. We're really proud of her. It was great sportsmanship. I know a lot of players would have taken the win."

Prevett said the afternoon would be something her players remember for a long time.

After getting off to a great start, the Cohasset girl's lacrosse team has faltered in the last few weeks, but have still qualified for the Division 2 state playoffs, due to a second place finish in the South Shore League. The Lady Skipper's current record is 6-9, and they have two games remaining in their regular season schedule.

Cohasset began their latest stretch on May 4, dropping a 14-8 decision to Pembroke. "The game could have gone either way," said head coach Shannon Curran, "but our shooting percentage wasn't high enough, and we let in some goals that we shouldn't have."

Then, against an excellent Weston team, Cohasset fought valiantly before suffering a 15-12 loss.

"It was a great game, and we played very well," said Curran. "Although we didn't win, the players felt they had put in a good, efficient effort."

The Lady Skippers were very apprehensive as they faced off against two highly regarded teams - Hingham and Norwell.

They lost to Hingham 22-11, but were outscored by only two goals in the second half. They also fell to Norwell, 23-14, but actually edged their opponents by a goal in the second stanza.

Then Cohasset lost a very close 14-12 contest to Plymouth North. The game could have gone either way, and coach Curran felt that her squad "lost the game more than Plymouth won it." The Lady Skippers rebounded against Silver Lake for an easy 15-2 victory, and the coach was able to insert many of her underclassmen and give them valuable experience.

Curran had special praise for several of her players during the current stretch. Sophomore attacker Kelsey Erlen has been "on fire", according to her coach, and has been the team's leading scorer.

"She has really improved her

Not much went wrong this season for the Cohasset softball team.

When they needed runs, they got them.

When they needed a big out, they usually got it.

Coach Rob Spofford is hoping his team can continue on the same road when the postseason starts.

Cohasset went into its final game of the season with a 17-2 record, with both losses to a strong Division 2 East Bridgewater team that the Division 3 Lady Skippers won't face in tournament play.

"We can hit,we can pitch and make things happen," Spofford said. "We know we can score runs and that we're going to be in every game. The girls all believe that no matter where we are in a game, they're always in it."

Cohasset's team batting average this season is .370, and the starting nine in the lineup have combined to hit .394.

On the mound, Kelly Naegelin will lead Cohasset into the tournament.

Naegelin and her backup, freshman Haley Wheelwright, allowed just 18 earned runs the entire season.

"When Kelly is pitching, we know that if we score three or four runs we're going to have a good chance of winning," Spofford said. "The Ever hear of Crow Point Golf Club?

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

There are ghost clubs, golf courses that no longer exists. Most were erased by suburban expansion and one of these was situated on a small spit of land that reaches out into Hingham Bay.

It was called Crow Point Golf Club and sat at the top of Paige Hill in Hingham. It was born in the early days of the 20th century and was a proud member of the US Golf Association until the start of World War II.

"I didn't know there was a golf course here until I purchased my house, about 15 years ago," said Michael MacCune, who lives on Bel Air Road. "The fellow who sold me the house showed me a small concrete foundation. He said it was part of the caddy shack."

The only time the ghost club reappears today is on the Internet, usually on eBay or similar sites where they sell golf antiques. A while back there was a 1904 Crow Point Mixed Foursomes championship trophy offered by a seller from Utah. More recently there was a 1926 club championship medal up for auction from some one in New York.

"I have a friend who collects post cards. He knows I'm a golfer and live at Crow Point," said MacCune. "In Vermont he came across a post card of the Crow Point Golf Course clubhouse. There is an old model T automobile out front. I had the post card blown up and it hangs on the wall in my home."

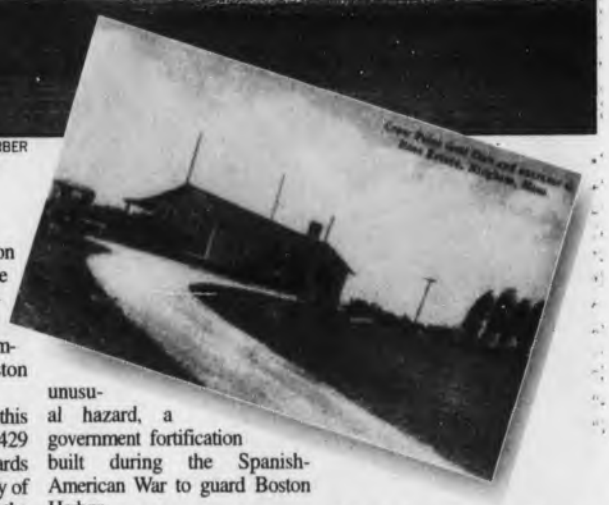
Most of the members were wealthy Bostonians who summered in Hull and Hingham at the turn of the century. One of its first presidents was Edward Sherbune, a Harvard-educated businessman.

At the start of WWII the club closed down. Crow Point's fairways and greens were replaced by new homes on Bel Air, Ocean View and Shute Avenue. They housed workers at the nearby Hingham shipyard during the war effort.

It was one of many clubs that no longer exist in the region. Ever hear of Hull Golf Club? It was an outgrowth of the Hull Yacht Club and situated on a steep bluff known as Telegraph Hill.

From the ninth green, there was a picturesque view of Boston Harbor, where you could see all the steamers and ocean liners — then the only method of trans-Atlantic travel — coming into and out of Boston Harbor.

Like the Crow Point layout, this nine-hole course measured 2,429 yards, short by today's standards but a good challenge in the day of the gutta percha golf ball and the hickory- shafted club.



The golf course also had an unusual hazard, a government fortification built during the Spanish-American War to guard Boston Harbor.

Several times a year there would be matches between the Hull and Crow Point clubs for regional bragging rights.

A helping hand

A week ago students from the Perkins School for the Blind visited at the MGA Links at Mamantapett in Norton for its annual day of golf and lunch. It's not news. It has gone on for the last five years. A few PGA professionals donate their time so these youngsters can experience the game of golf and its basics of putting and full swing.

What isn't surprising is that Bob Beach, the head professional at Braintree Municipal trekked down to Norton to help out. Beach is the consummate pro who has a social conscience.

"It was a wonderful day," said Beach. "The kids are great. What's interesting is that after teaching them, I saw some of them before a Celtic game singing the National Anthem."

Beach is on a mission to help the less fortunate. Earlier this season, as he does every year, he brings in a half dozen other teaching pros to work with mentally challenged youngsters, giving them a day on the links.

Tee to Green

"We did in it late April. We were fortunate to have good weather. Everyone had fun," said Beach.

OF COURSES: Granite Links continues to pick up awards. Golf Digest selected it as one of the "100 Greatest Public Golf Courses in America. That is a list that includes Pebble Beach, TPC Sawgrass, Kiawah Island and Bethpage . . . Pembroke Country Club is on the upswing since being purchased by a group that includes NHL star Jeremy Roenick. He also hired Shawn Hester, one of the premier golf instructors in the Northeast.

ACES UP: Plenty of holes-in-one have been recorded in the region. Jack Hickey notched the first of his career last Saturday at South Shore CC. He poked a 3-wood into the cup on the 201-yard eighth hole. Good friends Mitch Powers, John Dignan and Greg (Doc) Cannon were his playing partners . . . Andrew Foynes aced the seventh hole at Widow's Walk in Scituate. Mike Sullivan, Frank Kelly and Jim Henderson saw him make his "1." A week earlier John Coscia of Marshfield aced the same hole. He used a 7-iron on the 167-yard shot. Bill Ridings, Joe Tondoft and Mike Conlon were witnesses. Nick Lemieux of Scituate scored a hole-in-one on the 11th at Widow's Walk. He hit a wedge into the hole from 70 yards away. His playing partners were Bruce Cresswell, Andrew Lemieux and Katherine McArthur.

A lone golfer hits an approach shot to the 18th green at South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

A Phoenix rises again

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

South Shore Country Club is a phoenix, rising from its ashes so to speak, not just once in its eight-decade history, but twice.

SOUTH SHORE COUNTRY CLUB

Opened in the early 1920s, this wonderful Wayne Stiles and John Van Kleek design flourished as a private course.

But during the housing boom of the mid-1980s, the club was purchased by developers. However, the town took the land over via eminent domain and reclaimed it as a golf course.

Sadly, the conditions of the course were not as pristine as when it was a private club and worsened when it was leased to a company that seemingly wanted to squeeze every penny of profit from the course without maintaining the infrastructure.

As recently as five years ago the course had severe drainage issues. Some fairways and landing areas were unplayable, no more than wetlands.

The town hired Jay McGrail as superintendent and he has overseen the rebirth of the course. His work in a few short years is truly amazing.

When he prepares the greens for tournaments, they are as good as any private club. The fairways are all playable. The condition rivals some of the top upscale public facilities in the state.

But the real lure to play South Shore is the golf course. It is a gem of a design.

The best way to fashion a good score here is to play the par-3s well. There are four challenging tee shots.

It is all carry to an elevated green on the 160-yard second hole, the eighth is a downhill shot of 200 yards to an oval putting surface, the 11th is another 190-yard shot which is disastrous if you are long and the 17th is an uphill tee shot of 160 yards to a two-tier green that can bring even good putters to tears.

Not all of the par-5s are birdie holes. The 555-yard third has more adventure than an Indiana Jones flick. Once you get to the green you think your work is done, but it's just beginning. The 15th is another monster that requires three perfect shots to reach the putting surface. The ninth and 18th holes are reachable by long hitters. But whatever you do, don't be above the pin on the final green. It is deceptively treacherous.

When you stagger off the 18th green, no matter your score, most golfers look back at their round and want to give it another try. That, my friends, is the true sign of a great golf track.

FROM GIRLS TENNIS, PAGE 17

"This was the last one for some of the seniors," she said. "We asked the girls what was more important, winning or letting the seniors play. We knew we had a share of the title. It really was fun. We lost the match but felt really good. We banded together as a team. It could help us going forward."

Along with McGoldrick, seniors Kate O'Callaghan (third singles), Jean Thomae, Lauren Allen (first doubles), Fiona McBride and Jenny Cahill all played.

Cohasset finished the season 12-4, 11-1 in the South Shore League.

The Lady Skippers could face Norwell again in the tournament.

Prevett said she was impressed, but by no means surprised by her team's actions.

"Gigi has been coaching for 18 years," she said. "I've been here for 10. I have so much respect for her. She knows tennis and has a love for the game that she passes on. She's passionate about the game, but she always puts the kids first. She's all about doing what's right. I think that's awesome."

If there was any single drawback to the loss at Norwell it would be the potential for a lower playoff seed.

"We're not going to get the best seed," Prevett said. "But that really doesn't matter too much. Like Gigi says, you have to beat everyone anyway."

ability to work the goalie's circle, and continues to be a scoring threat up top," said Curran. And the coach singled out junior attacker and midfielder Isabelle Franklin for increasing her shooting percentage and raising her confidence level.

Junior Mimi Mahoney has become an "excellent defender," said Curran. "Mimi was overanxious earlier in the year, but has calmed down, reduced her fouls, and become a more controlled player," said the coach. And Curran lauded senior cocaptain and midfielder Caitlin Mahoney, the team's second leading scorer and her squad's assist leader. "Caitlin is very good at identifying our potential scorers when they get in the right position," said the coach.""And she has improved her ability to get back on defense, and slow down her opponent's attack.

Finally Curran praised senior co-captain Lindsay Hill, who she called her "dream player," because she has performed admirably on defense, as an attacker, and even in goal.

Cohasset finishes the regular season with Falmouth and Whitman-Hanson. before heading into the playoffs. The coach is somewhat optimistic about the post -season, because her team seems to play its best against top competition like Hingham and Norwell. "We'll be underdogs, but I hope the girls rise to the occasion," she said.

proposed lineup change.

Ivan Sceery moved from first Doubles to Third Singles. Robbie Hill matched up with Will Choi at first Doubles. Travers Craven and Mike Filbey anchored the second Doubles slot.

All of these were new positions or partners for the title match.

The seniors delivered.

Victor Hartmann, Dan Brady, and Ivan Sceery quickly put Cohasset out to an early lead. All won there first set in singles and Norwell could feel the heat.

Mike Filbey and Travers Craven then won the first set at second Doubles 6-4 and suddenly Cohasset was leading in 4 of the 5 matches.

Hartmann delivered first and dispatched Norwell's J Wright 6-0-, 6-2. Sceery followed with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Tom Koch to give Cohasset a big 2-0 lead.

Hill and Choi lost the first set to Tim Healey and Tim Dalferno but outslugged the Norwell baseliners to move ahead 4-1 in the second set.

Then Craven and Filbey delivered the knockout punch.

Serving at 6-5 for the match Sophomore Craven again came up huge and held serve to clinch it for Cohasset.

Luke Brewer and Garret Canney played very solid doubles to win the exhibition match against Rip Corde and Ali Widener.

Cohasset improved to 12-3 and 9-1 to complete league play.

They faced Scituate in the season finale before the State Tournament on Thursday.

FROM SOFTBALL, PAGE 17

most she's allowed in a game all year is five runs and she's give up four just a couple of times. We know if we get three or four runs we'll have a chance."

Cohasset has only been shut out once all season.

Offensively, Meredith Kelly has been the spark in the middle of the order, belting seven homeruns with 38 RBI and 36 hits. She's also the team leader in runs scored.

"Meredith is getting on base and driving in runs," Spofford said. "And Carly Salerno is doing a great job driving her in."

Spofford said his plan for the postseason is to make sure his ladies stay focused.

"I'm a firm believer in winning each half inning, staying in the moment and focusing on the next pitch," he said. "I really believe that and the girls believe it. They know the last at-bat doesn't matter. It's the next one, the next pitch that counts."

Spofford has set the goal high – an appearance in the sectional finals – but feels his team has the talent, ethic and background to get there.

"We're 17-2, but it isn't a soft 17-2," he said. "We didn't beat up on weaker teams. Actually we did beat up on weaker teams, but there weren't many of them on the schedule. The bulk of the schedule we were playing strong competition."

Beyond that, Cohasset's size is a factor.

"Because we're a smaller school we have girls who have played other sports," he said. "We have three-sport stars, girls who have played basketball and soccer. Those teams have had great success. This team can draw from that experience. Many of the girls have been in big games. They understand what to expect. I think that could help us. I can see other teams not wanting to face us."

Spofford said the one factor his team must continue to work on in the tournament is defense.

"In the tournament, games can turn on one play, one mistake," he said. "We have to make sure we're not making the mistakes. We have dominant pitching. The defense has to help."

The basic game-plan is the same as it has been all season.

Dominate on the mound, hit well and create chaos on the basepaths when the chance is given.

Spofford is a believer in putting pressure on defenses with steals, bunts, slap hitters and anything else the team can do to rattle a defense.

With the JV season over and rosters allowed to expand, Spofford said he'll have even more weapons to work with.

"There are re-entry rules and courtesy runners allowed for pitchers," he said. "That's why you don't see Kelly run the bases. We use those substitution rules and runners as an advantage. I have some fleet-footed underclassmen coming up. We like to use that speed."

With his outstanding pitching, Spofford said a key to winning is getting early leads.

"If we can get out to a lead early, like we did in Hull, it makes things easier," he said. "Against Hull we were up 4-0 in the first. Brittany Dunn hit a three-run homer in the first. Hull rallied back, but couldn't catch up. We won 4-3 but felt comfortable."

Spofford thinks the difference in tournament play could be how the lower part of the batting order responds.

"We've been getting great contributions from 6-7-8and 9 in the order," he said. "I knew what I'd get from then top of the order, but I'm thrilled with what the bottom has done."

Kayla Orner has hit .353 with a .549 slugging percentage in the No. 8 hole, while Christine Coner has 14 RBI in the No. 7 slot.

Kristin Monaco has been a strong addition, adapting to her role as the team's slap hitting specialist.

In a game against Harwich, with the game tied in the seventh inning and a runner on third, she showed bunt to draw the infield in, then slapped a hard grounder right past third to plate the game-winner.

Spofford said Monaco can hit for power as well.

"Kristin is a perfect leadoff hitter," he said. "She's got three doubles, six RBI in the leadoff spot, and she's walked 20 times in 74 at-bats. She gets on base and has some speed. That's what I like."

As a team, Cohasset generally earns their runs.

While softball is a game where strikeouts dominate, at least with top pitchers, the Lady Skippers have only fanned 93 times in 646 at-bats. They've put the ball in play 83 percent of the time as a team.

"When we get runners on, I like to move them, make things happen," Spofford said. "I'm an aggressive coach. I like to create controlled chaos, put runners in motion and make defenses work."

Cohasset has one game left, Saturday at Nantucket, then will wait for their seeding and first game.

In the long run, Spofford said this season has been special.

"Our record is the best I remember for Cohasset in years," he said. "More importantly, the girls love to come out and play. They're a great group of kids. No matter what happens from here, it's been a fun ride."

One final note.

Four Cohasset players were named South Shore League All-Stars.

Kelly, Monaco, Naegelin and Salerno all made the team.

Of the 16 players honored, four were from Cohasset and four more were from East Bridgewater.

Girls Youth Lacrosse Recaps for May 17

The U15 Blue team wrapped up a three game road trip at Hingham and started the game off on fire, as Hope Kissick won the opening draw, passed to Maddie Curley, who gave it right back to Kissick for a give and go score. Cohasset controlled nearly every draw in the first half and that allowed them to work their pinpoint passing attack and take an insurmountable lead. Lexa Grasz (1g, 2a) teamed with Curley (4g, 4a), Kissick (5g, 2a), Mackenzie Axelson (1g, 1a) and Nicole Farren (1a) to work the ball around the offensive zone and find the back of the net 12 times in the first half. Goalie Elizabeth Baker stood tall in the cage and made 3 saves.

In the second half, the Blue team moved players all over the field to try and keep the score down and it gave some defenders the opportunity to show their offensive skills. Molly Fitzgerald stole the ball at midfield and then made a long pass to Shannon McGowan, who ripped one top left past the keeper. Fitzgerald would later score one of her own with a nice jump shot. Isabelle Seal scored her first of the season after digging for a ground ball and driving hard to the cage. Baker stepped out from between the pipes in the second stanza and scored on a penalty shot after a long run down the field. Christina Tedeschi would be rewarded for her hard work at D middie with a goal and multiple ground ball wins. Katie McCabe finished the scoring with a rocket to the top right corner and Cohasset would end the day on top 17-6. Kylie Coffman closed the game out in net with 5 saves and continues to show outstanding ability in goal.

The Cohasset U15 White Team faced off against Hingham on Sunday in a game that was to be a back and forth, evenly-matched contest. Goalie Olivia Blackburn and defenders Emily Robbins, Caitlin Mavilia (1 assist) and Maria Buckley held their own against a very aggressive run and gun offense. Also helping to stifle the many fast breaks were middies Abby Carrier, Victoria Bryan (1goal, 1 assist) and Kate Bodner. The ball moved up and down the field with each team splitting draws and possessions. Bodner (2 goals, 1 assist) won many of the draws moving the ball down the field along with speedy middie Isabelle Dunne (1 assist), Maggie Littlejohn, Carrier and Bryan. Attackers Kathryn Dunn (4 goals, 3 assists), Caroline Evans and Mikayla McGrath (5 goals, 1 assist) passed the ball well in spite of good double-teaming by the opponent. At the half, Cohasset led 6-5.

In the second half Cohasset's middies and defense adjusted to the fast break offense double and triple teaming Scituate to keep them from running away with the game. In the end, good teamwork prevailed with Cohasset taking the win 12-11.

The combined U15 team would play a mid-week match against Derby Academy and the game was thrilling from start to finish. Cohasset played the game with mostly seventh grade girls against a 7th/8th grade Derby team but the age difference did not matter as Cohasset led for most of the game. Mikayla McGrath (5g, 2a), Maddie Curley (4g, 2a) and Kathryn Dunn (3g, 2a) led the offensive charge in the first half with a highlight reel goal coming from McGrath as she switched from right to left and fired one into a tiny window in the bottom right corner. Goalie Taylor Frederick made two stops and the defense of Micaela Durkin, Molly Fitzgerald and Shannon McGowan held up well against a Derby attack that kept charging to the cage.

Cohasset continued to hold the lead until the final minutes of the game, when Derby won several draws and scored quick goals to take a two goal lead with just over a minute to play. Center middies Victoria Bryan (1g, 1a), Curley and Lexa Grasz (1g, 1a) had crucial draw controls in the closing moments that gave Cohasset possession and allowed them to score three goals and win the game 15-14.

On Sunday, the U11 Girls White Lacrosse team continued their assault on the teams of the South Shore with a convincing 6-1 victory over Hingham at the Deer Hill School. The game was in control early on as White scored two goals in the first five minutes of action. The key to the quick start was Nadiya Roy who won the early draws to give Cohasset the possession. The girls did an equally good job on the defensive end as they were able to keep Hingham scoreless throughout the first half. Madeline Littlejohn pounced on three consecutive ground balls and extinguished opportunities for the visitors during that stretch. Cohasset utilized its quickness and superior passing skills to generate wide open scoring opportunities throughout the first half resulting in 5 goals.

Olivia Gomez, Abby McGrath, Emma Humphrey (2x) and Marcella Flibotte were goal scorers in the first half for the White team while Morgan Langenhagen, Margot Robbins, and Julia Herzfelder all added assists in the first half. The second half was exciting as the team was paced by some of the 3rd grade girls. Zoe Doherty, Elle Hansen, Isabel Buckley and Kate McCarthy led the charge on the offensive end of the field and Lauren Cunning played great defensively the keeping the game out of reach. Jenny Wolfe (5 saves) played her best game of the year in goal for the white who look to stay unbeaten in their next contest on May 31 at Norwell.

Smothering team defense and unselfish passing gave the Girls U11 Blue team its sixth consecutive win continuing an undefeated season with two games remaining. The final score against Hingham was 7 – 1 with all seven Cohasset goals coming from different players. Five of our goals were assisted which demonstrates our ability to play as a team and move the ball effectively. Niki Federle was assisted by Clare Glavin. Lili Astino scored unassisted. Kara Nelson was assisted by Charlotte Morrison. Kaitlin McGovern scored unassisted. Charlotte Morrison was assisted by Alex Martini. Danielle Picot was assisted by Erin McElhinney and Alex Martini was assisted by Libby Mullaney. Talk about team work – almost as many players contributed to scoring in the game as take the field for us. It's not all about scoring however. A lot goes into winning and controlling the ball, moving the ball up field, finding open space, and executing what we practice just for the opportunity to score.

In practice and against Hingham, third graders Leanne Hayden, Lilly Patsos, and Kate McGowan stepped up to execute on these important aspects of lacrosse. Maggie O'Donnell and Clare Glavin split time in the net for us, with obvious success. The large crowd got to see teamwork and contribution by everyone on the Cohasset side. Keep it up.

Clark's Fund Run is Sunday May 31

The annual Clark's Fund Run is scheduled for Sunday May 31at 10am.

The 3.5 mile road race will start and end at The South Shore Music Circus. The days events include a 3.5 mile walk at 9:30am and the run at 10am.

The Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee sponsors the run. Clark Chatterton spent his entire life in Cohasset. He and his wife Sally raised their children in town. For more than thirty years Clark was a teacher, coach and athletic director at Cohasset High School.

Clark is also remembered as the Concessions Manager at The South Shore Music Circus, where he spent every summer of his adult life. Clark loved Cohasset and had a special place in his heart for youth sports and community initiatives. It is on behalf of those things he held dear that the Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee was formed. The primary mission is to raise funds and enhance Cohasset's sports and recreation facilities. The 9th annual Clark's Fund Run is set for Sunday May 31, 2009.

Our raised funds continue the long-lasting tradition of giving back to the community in Clark's name.

The Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund to date has spent close to $120, 000.We purchased an AED Heart Saver for the high school, replaced field benches on local athletic fields, built a new basketball court with the Basketball Boosters at Deer Hill Elementary School, provided some funding for playground at the Ripley Library, purchased a new electronic scoreboard for the Beechwood baseball field and financially supported the Cohasset Swim Team. We have supported the "Got Turf" campaign and will continue to enhance opportunities for the community. This years race proceeds will support the CHS Fitness Room.

Please consider joining us on the 31st for a fun family event. Applications can be picked up at The Good Sport or via email from dbeal@cohassetk12.org

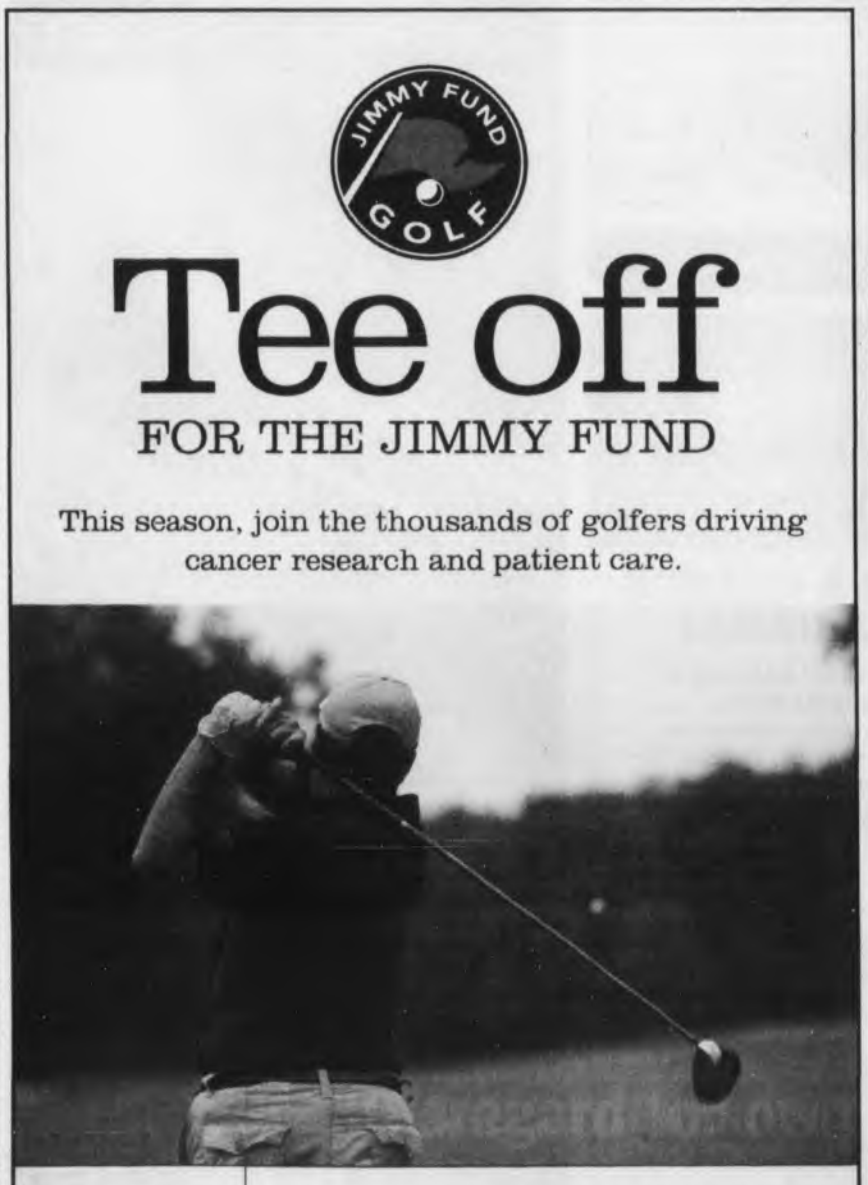
Deadline approaching for Verizon Future Leaders Scholarship

WOBURN, MA - The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation (MASF) is celebrating the 28th anniversary of the Bay State Games this summer. This annual Olympic-style competition will be held July 5-19 in Eastern and Central Massachusetts. During this event, Massachusetts residents of all ages and abilities compete in 25 different sports. In addition to offering sports competition, the Bay State Games, in partnership with Verizon, annually awards six $2,000 college scholarships to worthy participants of the Bay State Summer and Winter Games.

The Verizon Future Leader Scholarship's goal is to reward young men and women for their exceptional leadership abilities demonstrated through their community service, academic success, and athletic excellence. Student athletes who wish to receive one of six scholarships awarded must be in the 11th grade as of the 2008-2009 academic school year. Applicants also must have either participated in the 2009 Winter Games, or are registered and will agree to participate in the upcoming Summer Games. Athletes do not need to make a final roster to be eligible for the scholarship. Interviews for those selected will be held in late June.

Applications for the scholarship must be post marked no later than Wednesday, June 10. Applications are available with your high school athletic director, guidance counselor, or on the Bay State Games website at www.baystategames.org.



For more information regarding the scholarship, please call the Bay State Games' office at (781) 932-6555 or e-mail info@baystategames.org.

DISNEY LEADS THE WAY WEST

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — The buffalo was crossing the road, to get to the other side, right in front of our bus. The adults and kids onboard let out collective sighs of delight as we clicked away with our cameras. More of the beasts were on view from the side windows.

The experience was brought to us by Disney, but Mickey Mouse was nowhere in sight.

Welcome to Adventures by Disney, the tour company formed by The Walt Disney Co. to bring the real world to adults and kids alike, in our case a Quest for the West trek in Wyoming. The family-oriented tours offer easy planning and the fine-tuned customer service you'd expect. They are designed to be the perfect option for busy parents looking for easy family vacation.

And so Disney is conquering places as diverse as China and Peru, Spain and California, South Africa and Australia and the United States. The 2009 brochure boasts nearly two dozen tour options.

Cynics might say the tours amount to Disney's attempt to take over the world of travel, but on the Wyoming trip I got a sample of just how hassle-free and innovative the company can be in offering family oriented exploration. Two Adventure Guides led our group on a high-end vacation experience with the kind of unexpected moments you'd expect Disney to deliver. And despite Disney collectible pins handed out at several sites, the experience was surprisingly sans Mouse; sans commercial (our tour bus was purposely not marked with any Disney logos so as not to draw attention from other tourists).

Our western adventure began in Jackson, Wyo., where my accomplices — my brother, Ben, and 8-year-old niece, Sasha — met up with our companions for the week. We were nine families including an adult couple without kids and one Boston-area family with an au pair, 18 adults and 13 kids, ages 4 to 16, in total. Most were from the East Coast.

Our itinerary included Jackson, a visit to the amazingly scenic Grand Teton National Park, an exploration of Yellowstone National Park with its geysers, and time at an elegant dude ranch.

At an introductory dinner at the fancy, western-themed Wort Hotel in Jackson, our home for two nights, niece Sasha was thrilled to discover other girls her age in the group (and less thrilled by the boys). Brother Ben and I were happy to find adults we could relate to, too - key when you'll be spending an entire week as a tour group.

Old West was very much a part of our itinerary. By the second day we had sampled buffalo and sarsaparilla and bought Sasha a cowboy hat and boots at one of Jackson's numerous souvenir shops.

Our first taste of adventure was outside of Jackson, whitewater rafting on Class 2 and 3 rapids on the Snake River. We paddled. We got wet. And it was so much better even than Splash Mountain at Walt Disney World. A bald eagle even flew overhead at one point.

At Grand Teton National Park we saw a bear — a sizable black bear waiting for us as if on cue as we approached Jenny Lake. It was about 20 yards away and apparently searching for blueberries. We crossed the lake by boat and hiked to Inspiration Point for views that included the park's 10 million-year-old peaks and glaciers and tumbleweed-covered plains. The guides carefully herded the kids, giving the adults time to take in the impressive scenery.

Later, we had our introduction to Yellowstone at West Thumb, where we watched the earth bubble before our eyes — hot springs and algae creating amazing colors and patterns, with Yellowstone Lake as the backdrop.

We checked into the Old Faithful Snow Lodge and, after a meal that included more buffalo, we headed over to see the famous geyser erupt. Waiting for Old Faithful requires patience. The geyser goes off approximately every 90 minutes but Mother Nature is not really on a time clock.

Fortunately, Sasha was well-occupied with her newfound Disney tour friends — a group of the kids improvised a geyser rain dance and chance. Eventually we were all rewarded with a magnificent show of spray just as the sun was setting.

From Yellowstone we headed to the place horse-loving Sasha was most anxious to visit, a dude ranch in the Shoshone National Forest. The drive was a few hours and for entertainment Disney's "High School Musical" was shown on the bus's video screens — the one blatant Disney moment of our week-long tour.

Brooks Lake Lodge dude ranch was an impressively classy, historic log lodge on a lake with magnificent mountain views and surrounded by forest; the motif Western down to the buffalo tiles in the bathrooms. Leave it to Disney to save the best for last.

We explored on horseback, much to the kids' delight. Our cowgirl guide looked the part — in hat, boots and chaps — even if she was from Wrentham, working at the ranch as a summer job before heading back to Providence College. She took us up and down hills, across meadows and into the forest on well-trained horses. We spotted some long-ear mule deers along the route.

Two days at the ranch gave us a chance to relax and share memories about what we'd experienced, with parents especially enjoying some down time (adults could even book massages). Yee-ha, Disney had certainly delivered.

SCHOOLS

Last full week for seniors!

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Prom tickets were also on sale this week and will be for some of next week in the cafeteria at lunch.

Hello everybody and welcome to Memorial Day Weekend! This was also the last full week for seniors — bittersweet, right? Okay, well maybe just sweet. In any case, between the sophomores taking the MCAS test, fire drills, and concerts, this week was packed with action.

Tuesday and Wednesday, the sophomore class challenged themselves to our state standardized testing system, better known as MCAS. However, on Wednesday the commencement of this exam was somewhat delayed due to fire alarm precautions that needed to be taken care of at the school early that morning. No students were harmed, although a few did manage to avoid detention due to tardiness thanks to the distraction.

This Thursday was the annual CHS Arts Night, hosted by the art department. Arts night has always been a night full of beautiful art, sweet music, and good spirits, and this year was no different. There were, however, a few special surprises that made this year extra spectacular. Also, the band and chorus, who performed at a festival this past Friday, were both proud to show off their 'superior' talent and the trophies that came right along with it.

Post-Prom forms and checks are due today! If you didn't get a chance to drop off your information in the box at the front office, contact Barb Mullin. Prom tickets were also on sale this week and will be for some of next week in the cafeteria at lunch.

After this week, I have but one article left until my days at CHS are finished. When that time comes, my predecessor will take over and immediately begin his journey through the world of reporting the ever-important information of life inside Cohasset High School. His name will finally be revealed next week, but until then I leave you with my very last hint: he plans on winning the Mr. Skipper title next year; the only thing standing between him and the stage? A stool, so that he is able to reach the microphone. Have you figured it out yet? Find out last week in my farewell address! And with that I leave you all to a wonderful Memorial Day Weekend! Goodbye!

Lauren Mack is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

OX PASTURE RD.

LEGAL NOTICE
MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Krikor O. Baytarian and Peter J. Baytarian, Trustees of Ox Pasture Lane Realty Trust, under a Declaration of Trust dated April 7, 2003, recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 18637, Page 195, to Norwood Cooperative Bank, dated April 9, 2007, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 24694, Page 484, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, there will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described (on the portions of the mortgaged premises being Lots 1 and 2 on Ox Pasture Lane, Cohasset, Massachusetts) on June 4, 2009, commencing at 10:00 A.M., as to Lot 1, and at subsequent times described below, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage, namely,

The land with the buildings thereon located on Beechwood Street and Ox Pasture Lane in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, being shown as Lots 1, 2 and 3, on a plan of land prepared by Murphy Associates, Inc., dated March 6, 2001, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds as Plan No. 440 of 2003 in Plan Book 510. Excepting, however, from Lot 1, so much of that lot as is included within the boundaries of Lot 5 as shown on Plan No. 10 of 2001 recorded in Plan Book 482.

Excepting and excluding from the above described mortgaged premises and not being sold at said auction is Lot 3 on Ox Pasture Lane which was released from the above described mortgage by instrument dated May 16, 2008, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 25788, Page 527.

Lot 1 will be sold separately by public auction on Lot 1 at 10:00 A.M. Lot 2 will be sold separately by public auction on Lot 2 at 10:45 A.M. Lots 1 and 2 will be sold together as one parcel on Lot 2 at 11:15 A.M.. If the highest bid for the sale of Lots 1 and 2 sold together exceeds the sum of the highest bids for the separate sales of Lots 1 and 2, the mortgaged premises shall be sold together and the separate sales of Lots 1 and 2 shall be null and void.

The successful bidder will be required to sign an Auctioneer's Memorandum of Sale and a Statement of Additional Terms at the conclusion of the bidding.

The premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, covenants, outstanding tax titles, municipal or other public taxes, assessment liens or claims in the nature of liens, and existing encumbrances of record created prior to the mortgage, if any there be.

The Purchaser shall be responsible for the cost of Massachusetts documentary stamps to be affixed to the foreclosure deed.

$40,000.00, for the sale of both Lots 1 and 2 together, will be required to be paid in cash (U.S. currency only), certified check, Bank Treasurer's check, or Bank Cashier's check by the Purchaser or Purchasers at the time and place of said sale, the balance within 30 days from the date of sale on the delivery of the deed.

$20,000.00 for the separate sales of Lot 1 and Lot 2 will be required to be paid in cash (U.S. currency only), certified check, Bank Treasurer's check, or Bank Cashier's check by the Purchaser or Purchasers at the time and place of said sale, the balance within 30 days from the date of sale on the delivery of the deed

In case of default by the highest bidder of his obligation to complete the purchase of the premises, the Mortgagee reserves the right to sell the premises to the second highest bidder by execution of the Auctioneer's Memorandum of Sale and Statement of Additional Terms with the second highest bidder for the amount of his bid and closing the sale to the second highest bidder within approximately 60 days from the date of the foreclosure sale.

Other terms if any to be announced at the sale.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 18, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Untangling personal problems might take more time than the impatient Lamb expected. But it's important to hang in there until all those knotty situations are straightened out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You still need to work out last-minute snags in your dealings with a rival. Hold your ground despite a perceived lack of support. Things should turn around before you know it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Best not to delay preparing for that upcoming family event. The sooner you get things started, the better chance you have of finding potential problems and making needed changes.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The romantic Moon Child might be reluctant to see the reality behind that "ideal" situation. But by midweek, the practical Crab emerges to help clear away the moonbeams.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Although the Big Cat might be receptive to more "purr-suasion" to get you to agree to a workplace change, make sure you can distinguish the fine line between facts and flattery.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your positive attitude in the workplace helps to get you noticed by the right people. Now go ahead and use some of that new self-confidence to help shore up a personal relationship.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you might still have to work out some problems with a business partner, things go more smoothly on the home front. An investment opportunity might need more study.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Don't be reluctant to act on your suspicion. Even if others see nothing wrong, the astute Scorpio could sense an underlying problem that isn't always obvious on the surface.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A new opportunity presents some obstacles that need to be dealt with as soon as possible. Delaying action in hopes that the problems will go away could be counterproductive.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A friend or family member's request might carry some hidden factors that could later create problems. Be sure you know all the facts before you make your decision.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A setback in implementing a plan could turn out to be a blessing in disguise. Use the downtime to rework your original concepts and see where changes could be made.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might not be consciously fishing for compliments, but admit it — won't you feel great when your efforts are noticed? So accept the praise gracefully. You earned it.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of beauty in your personal life extends to your efforts to protect and preserve the natural world around you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Marcia Ballou: North River Arts Society's 'Poster Girl'

By Jennifer H. McInerney
CORRESPONDENT

Artist Marcia Ballou has always been magnetically drawn to the powerful expressive qualities of a vibrant color palette. This fascination began at a young age, perhaps even at birth; she was born in Hawaii and grew up in California, with both locales providing a vivid, verdant backdrop for her artistic development.

After studying painting at Mills College, in Oakland, Calif., Ballou apprenticed with colorists Russell Gordon and Hilda Pertha and interned with Wayne Thiebaud. Before long, she earned a reputation as an abstract colorist, following her inspiration out-of-doors to capture the glorious hues living and breathing within the natural landscape. Now a Marshfield resident, Ballou revels in the seasonal splendors of her own backyard, as well as those of her barnyard, including Nanny, her Nubian nanny goat, Lilly, her miniature horse, Sport, her quarter horse, and Molly, her mare.

"I start with an idea, some sort of vision of a beautiful scene in my head, and then I play around with the composition," Ballou says. "I put the painting together in my mind a lot like a jigsaw puzzle. Once I work out the composition, I let the colors build on top of each other, using the colors and shapes to tell the story."

Ballou's medium of choice is large-format acrylics of 4 by 5-feet, even murals that take months to complete, but she has made an exception for the North River Arts Society (NRAS). The Marshfield-based nonprofit arts organization, which stages the annual Festival of the Arts every Memorial Day weekend, selected Ballou to paint a special piece, titled "Ginny's Goose," to be featured as this year's prestigious Festival Poster. "Ginny's Goose" celebrates the beauty of nature's creatures gathered for one exquisite moment on a 20 by24-inch canvas. The guest of honor, a majestic white goose, holds court in her lush garden of flowers, where she receives a trio of visiting goldfinches. The painting will be beautifully reproduced in poster format and made available for $25 at the Festival to commemorate this year's event.

The North River Arts Society selected Marcia Ballou to paint a special piece, titled "Ginny's Goose," to be featured as this year's prestigious festival poster.

In addition, Ballou has donated the original work to the society to raffle off as part of its fundraising efforts. A limited number of tickets will be sold at $20 apiece; a special presale discount of six tickets for $100 will be available online and at the Opening Gala on Friday, May 22, 7 to 10 p.m. After that, raffle tickets will be offered during the Festival, May 23-24, for $20 each, no special.

The work's title, "Ginny's Goose," is a nod to Ginny Glickman, a longtime friend and one of the pillars of the North River Arts Society, who annually makes a donation in Ballou's name to the Heifer Society's global campaign to fight poverty and hunger.

"I'd been playing around with little drawings of geese for Ginny, and I thought it would be a good option for the Festival Poster," Ballou explains. "I used a lot of gold next to orange and gold next to blue with little dashes of color that everyone's familiar with."

Perhaps it was Ballou's instinctive attraction to color—in this case, local color—that initially led her directly into the heart of Marshfield Hills, to the buzzing hive of artistic activity that is the annual Festival of the Arts. It was Memorial Day weekend 1996, and Ballou and her husband had just moved into an old house that they were in the process of restoring to its former glory. Having spent more than enough time inside the confines of their collaborative work-in-progress, she decided to venture out into her new neighborhood, to explore all of its yet undiscovered treasures. She found one almost immediately.

After driving only a few minutes from her new address, she came upon a long, rambling tangent of cars parked along Pleasant Street and decided to follow it to its source. Little did she know that she was about to be welcomed into what would, from that serendipitous moment on, become her home away from home.

As Ballou strode toward Old Main Street, strains of jazz mingling with the aromas of popcorn, cotton candy, and grilling burgers wafted toward her, urging her closer. From the end of the cordoned-off block, she took in the throngs of people meandering through historic Marshfield Hills Village. As she joined them, she smiled at the sight of a smock-clad woman standing at an easel comparing her still-wet oil painting to the festive scene in front of her. Ballou managed to squeeze past a crowd encircling a performer on stilts and stepped carefully over the pastel chalk drawings beneath her feet. On the left side of the street, she spotted the yellow-and-white-striped Children's Art tent, where kids of all ages hunkered purposefully over their creations, and the G.A.R. Hall, the iconic white building that houses the juried art and sculpture exhibit each year. Across the way, she saw signs advertising the photography exhibit and the Art in the Barn (now Art in the Tent) sale; a crowd gathered on an expanse of lawn trained its attention on the jazz ensemble that was performing there.

"I had no idea that the Festival was going on and, suddenly, there I was right in the middle of it all!" Ballou recalls. "I was absolutely thrilled to have found it. It's such a valuable part of the community."

By the end of the day, Ballou had signed on to teach drawing classes in the NRAS' education department. Over the years, she's taught the classical composition style to both adults and children. After a decade of involvement with the organization, she served a term as president of the North River Arts Society. During her presidency, she initiated and continues to lead the Revitalization Campaign to restore and expand the G.A.R. Hall, a renovation project that is estimated to cost $1 million.

"I'm truly honored to be an artist in this group of artists," Ballou reflects. "If I'd moved to another town, none of this might have happened."

Her latest artistic venture is a line of handmade dolls, called Hullaballou, that are crafted out of socks and other fabric remnants. They've been selling at the Marshfield Hills General Store, also on Old Main Street. At the Festival, Ballou will have her own artisan booth displaying her Hullaballou dolls.

Evan Deutsch climbing to great heights

Evan Deutsch of Cohasset recently completed a 90-day course in the Rocky Mountains with the National Outdoor Leadership School. Under the guidance of NOLS' instructors, Deutsch's group of 15 students backpacked in the Wind River Range, earned their Wilderness First Responder certifications, canoed down the Green River, climbed at Needles and Devil's Tower, and learned backcountry skiing and winter camping in the Absaroka Range.

From Sept. 1 through Dec. 3, 2008, students explored remote areas of the Rocky Mountains while learning the fundamentals of backcountry living and travel, and the principles of Leave No Trace outdoor ethics. The course began with 24 days of backpacking in the Wind River Mountains, a glacier-carved range punctuated by granite peaks. This section gave students the opportunity to master the fundamentals of backcountry camping and put their leadership skills to the test with daily route planning and decision-making. Students then participated in an 80-hour Wilderness First Responder course, which taught them how to respond to emergencies in remote areas. Following their WFR, students spent two weeks navigating Utah's Green River in whitewater canoes. From there students moved on to the rock climbing section, where they spent three weeks honing their technical skills at Idaho's City of Rocks. Students spent the final weeks of the course traveling over the mesas and through the waterways of Utah's red rock canyon country, spotting Anasazi ruins and petroglyphs along the way. By the end of the course, students had mastered the skills necessary to not only venture safely and with minimum impact into the wilderness on their own, but also to lead others on adventures into the backcountry.

From Sept. 1 through Dec. 3, 2008, students, like Evan, pictured here, explored remote areas of the Rocky Mountains while learning the fundamentals of backcountry living and travel, and the principles of Leave No Trace outdoor ethics.

The course began with 24 days of backpacking in the Wind River Mountains, a glacier-carved range punctuated by granite peaks.

Founded in 1965 by mountaineer Paul Petzoldt, the National Outdoor Leadership School provides an experience that develops active, positive leaders with lifelong environmental ethics and outdoor skills to more than 10,000 students each year. A private nonprofit school, NOLS runs courses from 10 days to a full academic year in length on five continents. NOLS students, ages 14 to older than 70, explore the most remote wilderness the Rocky Mountains, Idaho, Pacific Northwest, Southwest, Alaska, Western Canada, Mexico, Patagonia, Chile, India, Australia, New Zealand, Brazil, Baffin Island and Scandinavia have to offer. College credit and scholarships are available.

Seniors lose their 'dynamo'

Elworthy passes away unexpectedly

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Energetic, dedicated, passionate — a dynamo. These are the words that come up when describing Linda Elworthy.

In the three short years since she arrived in Cohasset and took on the role of Director of Elder Affairs, Elworthy made an impression. She wore goofy hats. She dreamt up ideas for new programs. She envisioned something bigger and better for the town's senior population.

With seemingly boundless energy and enthusiasm, she approached her job with compassion, a sense of humor and creativity. To the sadness of the senior center community, Elworthy passed away in her home in Scituate last Saturday at age 69.

"She came in two years ago like a steamroller, she even called herself a steamroller," said Anna Abbruzzese, a member of the Elder Affairs Board of Directors. "She was dynamic, jam-packed full of energy. She made everyone much more aware of what we do and where we are."

Elworthy's enthusiasm was infectious.

Remember and honor

Crowd pays tribute to veterans on Memorial Day

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It was the quintessential American scene. With a background of the lobster boats of Cohasset Harbor bobbing on the water, hundreds gathered at the Veterans Memorial Park to remember those brave heroes who gave their lives for freedom.

While "God Bless America" played from the loudspeakers, kids wearing red, white and blue did cartwheels on the recently cut grass surrounding the stone memorial. Seniors toted lawn chairs flanked by their children and grandchildren to prime viewing spots. The hundreds of flags that made up the Healing Field lightly waved in a salty sea breeze. Residents, who had arrived early, solemnly perused the names engraved on the memorial of the many Cohasset men and women who served in our country's wars.

The scene served to remind all present of the freedom — soldiers, sailors and airmen have fought for and still fight for today.

The parade arrived at the Veterans Memorial Park shortly after noontime, the color guard and veterans, decked out in their service uniforms, cheered along by applause from onlookers, led the way. The fire and police chiefs, members from the Daughters of the American Revolution, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the flower girls, the Cohasset High School Band and the Rusty Skippers followed close behind.

After welcoming addresses from Legion representatives and a prayer from Rev. John Mulvehill of St. Anthony's Parish, the Rusty Skippers

Turf, turbines

Special Town Meeting is June 25

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It could be the most confusing and complicated two-article Town Meeting there ever was.

In a meeting Thursday morning, the Board of Selectmen voted to place a second article on the citizen petition called Town Meeting. They also refused to place a second citizen requested article on the Town Meeting warrant.

On Thursday, June 25 (a change from the originally scheduled date), Town Meeting will take up two issues. The first is a citizen's petition to sunset the wind turbine bylaw. The second will ask Town Meeting to adjust the amount of needed private funding to move forward with the synthetic turf field project passed at the November 2008 Town Meeting.

The Cohasset Sports Partnership has been working for over a year to raise money for a turf field to replace the current natural grass Alumni Field at the high school. To date they have raised over $475,000 in private donations.

When the article passed at Town Meeting cost estimates were $1,050,000. Town Meeting voted to bond $500,000 to construct the field, if cash donations totaling $550,000 were raised.

Earlier this month the project went out to bid. The low bid came in at $950,000.

"We have enough funds to move forward," said George McGoldrick, president of the Cohasset Sports Partnership, the non-profit group heading up the turf field fundraising. McGoldrick said the Police make cocaine arrest

A Dorchester man was arrested for possession of cocaine with the intent to distribute after a motor vehicle crash in Cohasset on Monday.

Police officers responded to a report of a minor motor vehicle crash on North Main Street near the MBTA commuter rail station on Monday, May 25, at about 1:20pm.

When officers arrived they found that the driver of a 1995 Toyota Corolla went off of the road and got hung-up on rocks and ledge. The driver of the vehicle was identified as Rafael Gonzalez Melendez, (40) years of age, from 16 Dacia Street, Dorchester. As officers were trying to determine how the accident occurred and if Melendez had a driver's license, he began to act suspiciously, and refused to obey officer's commands.

When officers arrived they found that the driver of a 1995 Toyota Corolla went off of the road and got hung-up on rocks and ledge.

As Melendez was being interviewed by police, officers observed him attempt to conceal small bags of powdered cocaine. The officers arrested Melendez and a quantity of cocaine was seized. A subsequent search of the Toyota Corolla by officers, later including Scituate K-9 Officer Brian McLaughlin and his partner "Felix", revealed several more bags of what is thought to be cocaine.

Melendez was brought to the Cohasset Police Station where he was held overnight on $10,000 cash bail. He was scheduled to be arraigned in Quincy District Court on Tuesday, May 26. He was charged with the following offenses:

- Possession of Class B drugs with the intent to distribute
- Unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle
- Failure to drive within marked lanes

Cohasset Police Lieutenant William Quigley said, "This was a great piece of police work by the officers on scene that likely interrupted a delivery of illegal drugs to a person in the area."

All facility stickers to expire June 30

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits is June 30. A copy of a current registration is required. If leasing a vehicle, people will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. Stickers will be on sale starting Monday, June 15, during normal business hours at Town Hall. Stickers will also be available at the DPW garage on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., starting June 20, and during the week starting June 15, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sticker prices will remain the same as last year - $50 for residents under the age of 60 and for $15 for seniors.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. All commercial contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works. People are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of a current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Underage drinking party draws a crowd

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Chief James Hussey hopes the under-age drinking party last Friday on Lamberts Lane is not a sign of an early summer trend.

Police responded to a caller at 10 p.m. reporting a large "unsupervised" party going on.

The first officer, who was at the scene, estimated partygoers numbered in the dozens, the lion's share of whom took off into the woods or across the golf course as police arrived.

Police made two arrests: the 16-year-old party host and an 18-year-old, both from Cohasset. Both boys were charged with being minors in possession of alcohol. A Cohasset girl, 18, who police say, was on her way to the party in her car was stopped and will be summonsed to court on the charge of being a minor in possession of alcohol because she had alcohol in the car. There was no indication that she had been drinking.

A Scituate teen, who was intoxicated, was taken into protective custody and was released later to his parents. He came out of the woods, was covered in mud, and was very intoxicated, police said.

Chief Hussey said all three Cohasset units on duty responded to the scene. The goal of the officers was to prevent anyone, who may have been drinking, from driving away. One cruiser blocked off the street.

Police ended up towing three cars belonging to partygoers who left the scene. A neighbor reported a smashed mailbox and the golf club reported damage, all allegedly caused by the teens on the run.

Hussey said the host explained he had planned to have just a few friends over, but as word spread, partygoers quickly grew in number and the situation got out of hand. The parents of the 16-year-old party host were not at home. Police found beer, rum and vodka at the party.

Another partygoer will be issued a civil citation for possession of marijuana, police said.

Hussey said he hopes that parents will work with the police to ensure that no underage drinking parties are taking place.

"We want to make sure that parents are being vigilant," he said. "School is almost out and kids are back from college."

Two arrests

To prevent the young men from driving away, police arrested two Cohasset teens, both 19, for being minors in possession of alcohol after responding to a noise complaint on Saturday (May 23) at 12:25 a.m. on Government Island. Upon arrival police found multiple beer cans and eight unopened cans in a case of beer. They searched the area and found the two teens. "The kids had been drinking," Chief Hussey said.

Click it!

Police are continuing a "Click It or Ticket" campaign, supported by a state grant that provides funds for them to put on extra patrols over the Memorial Day holiday weekend through May 31. Police have been making more traffic stops and charging motorists, who are not buckled up, with seatbelt violations. The initial traffic stop has to be for a different traffic violation, as seatbelt violations are secondary offenses in Massachusetts. Police have issued about half-a-dozen seatbelt violations so far, Chief Hussey said. They also have issued a host of traffic tickets and warnings for other violations. Many of the traffic violators were buckled up.

Bridge jumping

They're back! Bridge jumpers are back in droves. In one instance over the past weekend, police removed a crowd of 30 kids from the Border Street bridge. Although money for seasonal officers has been cut, Chief Hussey said police would still be monitoring both the Border Street and Cunningham bridges to deter jumpers. He said their goal is safety and he hopes that parents will discourage the activity.

MV crashes

- Police responded to a motor vehicle mishap at the Water Treatment Plant involving a vehicle that was backing out and got hung up on a retaining wall at about 1:30 a.m. on Monday (May 18). The car was a GMC Sierra that was operated by a Scituate resident. The water department viewed the damage and the car had to be towed.

A neighbor reported a smashed mailbox and the golf club reported damage, all allegedly caused by the teens on the run.

- At 11:49 a.m. on Monday (May 18), a 2006 Mitsubishi, operated by a Jamaica Plain man, rear-ended a 2005 Buick, operated by a Hingham woman, that had stopped at the light at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street. Both vehicles were headed south toward Scituate, police said. The road was wet and it was raining. The man from Jamaica Plain was cited for failure to stop. No one was transported to the hospital; both vehicles were towed.
- At about 3 p.m. on Tuesday (May 19), police said a Weymouth woman in 1998 Chevrolet was headed south on Route 3A when she made a left into the Mobil Station in the oncoming path of a 1993 Saturn driven by a Hull man. The Saturn tried to swerve but the cars collided. There were no injuries. The Weymouth woman was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic, police said.
- At 11:42 a.m. on Wednesday (May 20), a 2003 Dodge, operated by a Cohasset man, had stopped in traffic on Route 3A just north of the train station due to construction. A 2008 BMW, driven by a Hingham woman rear-ended the Dodge, causing heavy front-end damage to her car and some minor damage to the back of the Dodge, police said. The Hingham woman was cited for following too closely and for failure to stop.

Sick fox

A sick fox was put down by police and was then taken away by the Animal Control Officer last Monday at about 10 a.m. A concerned Atlantic Avenue resident notified police about what was described as a "rabid fox." The fox was properly disposed of, police said.

Credit card

A resident reported to police last week that he sold an expensive Rolex watch on eBay but later found out that the credit card used by the customer was stolen. The watch was shipped to Indonesia, police said. Police have collected information and records of the transaction. But unfortunately, the package containing the watch had been picked up.

Bag of pot

A walk-in reported last week that there was a "bag of pot" in front of the two-family house at the corner of Ripley Road and North Main Street. Police investigated and indeed found a small plastic bag containing marijuana. Police brought the bag to the station where it was processed.

Vandalism

A resident went to the police station last Friday (May 22) to report that his car had been vandalized overnight in his driveway. Police said there were scratches on both passenger-side doors. Police are investigating to determine if this was a random act. Detectives are following up, Chief Hussey said.

Erratic driver

A woman who was reported driving erratically along Route 3A pulled into the Stop & Shop parking lot where she was questioned by an officer. She said she had been trying to program her radio while driving and was given a written warning. Police urge motorists to pull over when they are programming a radio, dialing or texting on a cell phone or other activity that necessitates their taking their eyes off the road.

A bill making texting while driving illegal is currently before the legislature.

Domestic

An incident last Saturday (May 23) involving a father and son resulted in the father, who is 62, being arrested and charged with assault and battery. The two men got into a dispute over sharing drugs between the two of them, police said.

— JAMES LANE —

Planners want more engineering

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's a big building in a little neighborhood.

Or at least that's the proposal before the Planning Board.

Owners of the half-acre property at 8 James Lane, the current site of a small ranch home, have plans for a 17-unit condominium development in the residential neighborhood.

To a packed meeting room Wednesday night (May 20), the third public hearing session for the project, the applicants spoke to parking, access, massing and stormwater.

Stoughton-based South Coastal Development Group has put forth for an application for a special permit under the relatively new village zoning regulations passed at the November 2008 Town Meeting. The property is somewhat of an orphan for the district as it is located on the other side of the MBTA tracks and does not currently have retail or commercial space.

The 26,000 square foot building will have three floors, an elevator and an underground parking garage in the basement.

The property at 8 James Lane is located behind the seasonal hot dog and ice cream stand that has operated most recently under the name Boys of Summer. The property abuts the MBTA commuter rail tracks and fronts on James Lane.

Planning Board member Jean Healey Dippold asked what efforts had been made by the developer and the architect to harmonize the building with existing James Lane homes.

Steve Cleary, the owner of the property and co-developer, said they looked at the project as a village development. "We didn't really look back (toward the James Lane neighborhood) much."

While developing the architectural plans, Cleary said they tried to break up the facade as much as possible and built the third floor into the roof.

"We are attempting to make it a transition building from the small single family homes to the more commercial buildings of the village," said project architect Andy Zalewski of MZO Group.

Modzelewski foresaw issues of drainage, stormwater for the current building configuration, particularly considering the property's proximity to the Ellms Meadow wells public drinking water supply.

Traffic, parking and access concerns were aired. The Fire Department, represented by Captain Mark Trask, had serious reservations about the access to James Lane.

James Lane is an L-shaped road off Pleasant St. The proposed project is located is at the corner where James Lane makes a right turn to run parallel to Pleasant St. The portion of the lane immediately off Pleasant St. is roughly 14-feet wide.

"We have big trucks and you have a little road," said Trask. His concern was with two-way traffic and visitors parking on the sidewalk obstructing access.

Some suggestions were made to make James Lane one-way and/or widen the portion of James Lane immediately off Pleasant St.

It's unclear what the town's responsibility is if improvements are made to James Lane. Town Counsel Rick Hucksam said he would look into it, but often there are mitigation items placed on a special permit.

The Planning Board and the town's consulting engineer requested much more engineering data needed to be ready for review and discussion by the next public hearing date, Wednesday, June 24.

"Next meeting I hope we can make some real progress," said Planning Board chairman Al Moore.

For more information, call the Planning Board office at 781-383-3517.

Turf, wind turbine bylaw complete agenda

group was fortunate to raise a lot of money in a recession and in a short amount of time – and the project is coming at a time when contractors are looking for work.

McGoldrick said there is $25,000 contingency and, if not used, he expects both the town and the private donations to be equal contributors at $475,000. If the article passes muster at Town Meeting, the turf field construction could begin in July and be ready for fall sports.

The article anticipated to take center stage is the citizen's petition to sunset the wind energy conversion facility bylaw, more commonly referred to as the wind bylaw. The wind article will be taken up second at Town Meeting.

The wind turbine zoning bylaw was unanimously passed by the 2008 Annual Town Meeting. One project proposing two 100-meter turbines to be building off Route 3A by a private developer has come before the Planning Board under the bylaw. The Planning Board denied the project in the first week of May.

If passed the intent of the article is to disallow any application or consideration of a wind turbine special permit. The article's stipulations would take effect on the date of the first public advertisement of the special town meeting.

Because the proposal requires a change to the zoning bylaws, a two-thirds majority vote is needed for it to pass.

The wind energy conversion facility bylaw made wind turbines a permitted use by special permit and establishes criteria in which projects are evaluated. The current zoning bylaw, which is about three-and-a-half pages long, establishes definitions specific to wind turbines and criteria on various aspects and impacts of the structure – height, setback, color, noise generation, visual impact, lighting and shadow flicker, to name a few.

Special Town Meeting scheduling

Complicating the process is a Special Town Meeting called by a citizen's petition runs on a very short time table. Special Town Meetings can be called by the Board of Selectmen or by a citizen's petition of 200 signatures.

Once the signatures of a citizen's petition to call a Special Town Meeting are certified, the clock starts ticking on many levels.

- The Special Town Meeting must be held within 45 days of the filing of the citizen's petition calling Town Meeting. The date of the Special Town Meeting will be Thursday, June 25, 7p.m. at high school gymnasium.
- The deadline for any citizen's petition article (requiring 100 signatures) for the Special Town Meeting had to be filed seven days of the Town Meeting being called (Monday, May 18).
- The Board of Selectmen can place an article on the Special Town Meeting warrant anytime and are not subject to the seven-day rule. However, they are constrained by the printing and mailing of the warrant, which happens three weeks before a scheduled town meeting (approximately June 1).
- For all potential zoning bylaw changes, the Planning Board is required to hold a public hearing on the article. They must hold the public hearing within 65 days of its first notice from the town. The Planning Board scheduled the public hearing for Wednesday, June 24.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the associated cost for this special town meeting would be less than $5000. One of the major costs associated with a town meeting is the printing and mailing of the warrant to each household. Given the Special Town Meeting warrant is small, the cost to print and mail would be less than a regularly scheduled Annual Town Meeting or November's Special Town Meeting.

James Lane article denied

The Board of Selectmen also considered placing a citizen requested article to change the zoning of 8 James Lane from village business district to residential. A group of citizens collected over 100 signatures for their petition, but did not meet the deadline to make it on the warrant as a citizen's petition. This left the proposal at the discretion of the Board of Selectmen to put in on the warrant.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said over 100 signatures were collected, but more than half were on a page(s) that did not have the header stating the article. In other words, had the Town Clerk received the citizen's petition, as it was it could not have accepted it.

Legal ramifications and concern over setting a bad precedent led the Board of Selectmen to not place the article on the warrant.

Selectman Fred Koed said he understands the neighbors' concerns, but was also concerned with what the changing of zoning bylaw that is supposed to encourage investment would do to the future viability of the village.

The Cleary brothers, Paul and Steve, who own and are currently in Planning Board public hearings to develop the property at 8 James Lane spoke in opposition of the zoning amendment.

"The article is not only asking to remove the new village overlay district, but also it is asking to remove the zoning that has existed since 1955," said Paul Cleary of South Coastal Development Group.

Koed said rezoning the property wasn't going to change the fact something could get built there. The property owners could file a "Form A – Approval Not Required (ANR)" which effectively preserves the current zoning for three years. Cleary said if the zoning change went through it opened the town up to liability and litigation.

"I'm fearful of the legal issues and I'm fearful of setting a precedent," said Selectmen Vice Chair Karen Quigley.

"The reality is the (citizens) may come back with 200 signatures and we'll have to hold another Town Meeting," said Selectman Fred Koed.

There was also the issue of scheduling a Planning Board public hearing on the zoning bylaw amendment. By law, all zoning bylaw changes to be considered by Town Meeting must have an advertised public hearing before it can be considered by Town Meeting.

No vote was taken, but the consensus of the board was to not place on the James Lane article on the warrant.

Stormwater Committee needs members

In February, the Board of Selectmen voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee. They sought members for the committee with specific expertise or knowledge to bring to the board. To date, no residents have applied to be on the committee and the Town Manager is still actively seeking members.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will take on myriad tasks including conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, providing opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seeking funding sources for stormwater remediation and advising the Board of Selectmen on recommended capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management will be participating as well. Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org

Notre Dame Academy's Salutatorian Joanna LeRoy carries a sunflower off the stage after being recognized last Friday afternoon during the Notre Dame's 156th commencement.

NDA grads look to bright future

Class of 2009 comes from 23 communities

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Notre Dame Academy may be steeped in tradition – as evidenced by its practice of graduates each wearing a full-length white gown, a golden medallion necklace and being presented with a single red rose – but the 156-year-old Catholic girls high school is not afraid to shake things up – a bit.

Case in point, this year the graduation was held about a week earlier than usual and on a Friday, not Sunday as has traditionally been the case.

The 144 soon-to-be graduates marched onto the athletic field in front of the Hingham school at precisely noon on Friday under brilliant skies.

Hundreds of parents, siblings, grandparents and friends either sat in folding chairs or on the grass itself along the hillside that slopes down onto the field.

NDA president Sister Barbara A. Barry did not miss the opportunity to combine the brilliance of the day with a welcoming message that sounded the clarion call for the graduates to grab a hold of the precious lives stretched out before them.

"As you go forward from today, I beg you to find the goodness around you – be positive and look at the bright side of life."

Sister Barbara said that between today's 24-hour news cycle, the Internet and "texting" – young people are often surrounded by negativity. She reminded them how bright life can be.

"Do not waste your vibrant life and energy on complaining," she said. "Complainers do not have many friends. Put your energy into righting wrongs; turn negatives into positives."

The choir sang the Lee Ann Womack song "I Hope You Dance" that also captured Barry's theme.

The lyrics are in part:

"Whenever one door closes, I hope one more opens,
Promise me that you'll give faith a fighting chance,
And when you get the choice to sit it out or dance.
I hope you dance....I hope you dance."

Another relatively new tradition is the student speaker being chosen via an anonymous essay contest. In years past, the speakers were usually the valedictorian and salutatorian.

Victoria Mulloy of Plymouth, who won the essay contest, delivered an address that reminded her classmates that the "here" is as – or more important – than the "there."

She talked about four years of "There" – and being able to make it there, whether that be graduation, college or the house with a farmer's porch.

"...Be happy and be proud with where you are here and with what you have here and with what you're celebrating here with everything you've done to get to here..." she said.

Although the valedictorians (this year there are two) and salutatorian did not give speeches they were each individually honored with heartfelt tributes by a member of the faculty who detailed what made each girl special.

This year's valedictorians are both from Hingham, Courtney M. Dagher and Jennifer M White. The salutatorian Joanna E. LeRoy is from Hanover. Kara Dunford of Braintree was presented with the St. Julie Award for best personifying the qualities of goodness and selflessly giving to others.

Maureen E. Feeney, NDA Class of 1966 and a Boston City Councilor, delivered the keynote address.

Feeney told the graduates to live by the old adage "you make a living by what you get, but a life by what you give."

She said she hoped a consciousness had been fostered at Notre Dame that would allow them to live their daily lives for causes greater than themselves. "This consciousness gives you the ability, no matter what your other pursuits, to each day make a difference in the life of another.

"Embrace this opportunity; your lives will be richer for it," she said.

The graduation was moved up this year to be more in line with commencement dates of other Catholic schools, NDA officials said.

NDA graduates come from 23 communities and have been accepted at 172 different colleges. Cohasset graduates include: Maura Barnes and Natalie Hunt.

Linda Elworthy passes away unexpectedly

Every speaker, every lecture, every special event, if you were willing to listen she'd tell you how fabulous it was going to be. Under her direction, the center offered more programs and serviced more seniors.

"Cohasset could never have had a better advocate for its senior population," said Joe Nedrow, chairman of the Elder Affairs Board of Directors.

Elworthy was full of ideas — both big and small — to make Cohasset seniors' days brighter. For a special Mother's Day lunch earlier this month she had tea and coffee served in china cups rather than the usual paper ones.

"She'd think of little things like that to make it special," said Jim Ward, a volunteer server at Wednesday's gourmet lunch.

During a Wednesday lunch, she announced to the seniors she had a 'big surprise' after lunch was served. It was the Nona's Ice Cream truck. To many of the seniors' delight they ordered their favorite ice cream flavor from the truck. More than just a simple treat, Johnson said Elworthy knew the sense of taste is the last sense to fail the elderly.

"There were layers of thought to these things," Patty Johnson said, a friend and volunteer at the senior center.

Whenever possible Elworthy tried to bring together the young and old knowing the good it does for both demographics. Last spring's Poetry Slam event and "Let's fly a kite" day with fourth graders from the Deer Hill School are two examples.

It was Elworthy's ultimate dream to provide the seniors of Cohasset with a new home – a space full of life, activity, non-stop programming and, most importantly, the services so many elders rely on. In recent months that dream, which she shared with many others, has taken steps toward reality.

She proudly showed off the architectural rendering of the proposed new senior center and made sure it was kept in a prominent location.

"A new senior center — that was her cause," said Martha Horsefield, volunteer coordinator for the senior center.

Elworthy knew the limitations of the small space Elder Affairs currently occupies in the South Shore Community Center. She jokingly referred to her small office space as "the closet" as it was, indeed, once a closet.

"Once we had more space, she envisioned more programs," said Carol Barrett, the outreach coordinator for elder affairs.

She wasn't at a loss of ideas for the new center – more classes, larger events, intergenerational events, a fitness room. Elworthy wanted to bring Cohasset's senior center up to snuff with other area town's centers – and she wanted to make sure it was big enough to last the town's seniors for years to come.

Last week at a meeting to hear out a concept to move the Cook Estate home and re-purpose it to a senior center, Elworthy said a 5,000-square-foot building would not be enough space. At this meeting and at countless other meetings she spoke up about the needs for more space to accommodate the growing senior population and attract more seniors and younger seniors.

Social Service League president Marita Carpenter was working closely with Elworthy to make the new senior center a reality. A large donation from a trust under the Social Service League's control is the key to making the senior center happen.

COURTESY PHOTO

Linda Elworthy was never shy about displaying her wonderful sense of humor at the Senior Center.

"She is one of the most dynamic women I have ever met and so vital to the senior community," Carpenter said. "It's hard to imagine moving forward without her."

At the same time she wants to fulfill Elworthy's dream of a new Senior Center in Cohasset.

Abbruzzese, of the Elder Affairs Board of Directors, echoed the sentiments.

"She was so excited about the possibility of a new Senior Center...hopefully we can carry on her dream," she said.

Elworthy rarely spoke without having the numbers and facts to back up her points. Off the top of her head she knew how many 60-plus seniors there are in Cohasset and how much that number was expected to grow in five years time. She could tell you the number of volunteers, how many hours they worked each year and how much their time was worth to the town.

From day one, she recognized the town budget could not fund all she wanted and needed to do for the senior community. Elworthy counted on a dedicated group of volunteers and actively sought out alternative funding.

She was influential in getting the Friends of Elder Affairs, a non-profit fundraising group that had been more or less dormant, back up and running.

"She had her finger in everything she could if it was going to help the seniors," said Audrey Poe, a regular attendee at the Senior Center's events.

Although Elworthy was not a native of Cohasset or even the South Shore, her co-workers attest to her love of Cohasset and its people. A review of her many letters to the editor that have appeared in the Mariner over the last three years reveal how appreciative she was of everything the community did for its seniors and the senior center.

In the letters, she more than once describes Cohasset as a "small town with a big heart."

She often boasted, with great gratitude, of the 150 active volunteers who made all the work the senior center did possible.

"When Linda came on the whole tone of the Senior Center changed, the seniors themselves changed. The population grew, there was always a buzz and she really built up the programs," said Patty Johnson, Elworthy's friend and the volunteer coordinator of Wednesday's Angel Food Project lunches.
